"I applaud the work that the QEN has done in raising local environmental awareness. I firmly believe that if every city and town follows the lead of Quincy and undertakes the steps we are taking, our entire world environment will benefit. And our work doesn't stop here. We are trying to create a mindset where the present and future quality of our environment drives our decision making process. We must act locally to ensure a better future for our community and our world."

Atty. General Coakley Keynote Speaker

Awards To Be Presented At Quincy Court Law Day

Attorney General Martha Coakley, the first woman to hold that state-wide post, will deliver the main address today (Thursday) at Law Day ceremonies at Quincy District Court, One Dennis Ryan Parkway.

The observance will get underway at 9:30 a.m.

Three Quincy police officers will be among those receiving the coveted Robert P. Dana Award for distinguished service in law enforcement.

They are Lt. Charles Santoro and Officers Michael Sullivan and John Leuchte for their actions on Nov. 14, 2006, in saving the life of an 81-year-old man who suffered a heart attack while driving his car.

Santoro witnessed the accident and, without regard for his own health and safety, administered CPR until Sullivan and Leuchte arrived with a defibrillator.

Three officers from the Cohasset Police Department and four from the Weymouth Police Department also will be given Dana Awards.

The Dana Award, named for a state police officer who was slain in the line of duty, will be presented by District Attorney William Keating.

Guido Pettinelli, recently retired after a long career as safety officer in the Quincy Police Department, will receive the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award.

Francis Bellotti of Quincy, the former state attorney general and lieutenant governor, is down to get the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award.

The Quincy Court Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award will go to William Mignosa and Attorney

William Sullivan will receive the Alfred P. Malaney Award.

State Trooper George Demos will receive the Mark S. Charbonnier Award.

The winner of the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award will be announced at the ceremony as will the winner of the Dennis F. Ryan Student Essay Contest.

Phyllis Field, president of the Quincy Bar Association, will set the day's events in motion followed by greetings from Mayor William Phelan of Quincy.

Mark S. Coven, first justice of the Quincy District Court, will deliver remarks and introduce Martha Coakley, the Law Day speaker.

Father Raymond Kiley, curate of St. John the Baptist Church, will give the invocation, and Rabbi Shmuel Bronstein of the Hingham Quincy Chabad will give the benediction.

Granite Railway Tours Start 1st May Weekend

Public tours of the Granite Railway, the nation's first chartered commercial railroad, from its 1826 terminus at Bunker Hill Ledge in West Quincy to the Neponset River wharf in East Milton, will begin the first weekend in May.

A $10 donation is requested from all participants.

There will be two guided, limited-capacity, 3 1/2 hour tours a day at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, May 5 and 6, June 16 and 17 and July 21 and 22. Sunday morning tours are run only with sufficient advance reservations.

Special tours may be arranged for pre-formed groups.

Convenient meeting place is the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center, but pickup is also available at the Milton T station at 8:30 a.m. to ride a restored PCC car on the Ashmont-Mattapan "High Speed Line."

The tour will visit surviving segments of the old right-of-way, some quarries with spectacular views, the 1830 double track incline, the Neponset River wharf and some structures significant to the granite, iron and railroad industries in Quincy.

Keating Would Try Young Witness Intimidators As Adults

Usually, when you think of witness intimidation, you think of the mean streets of the inner city where the gangbangers rule right up to the steps of the courthouse and sometimes beyond.

But, warns Norfolk District Attorney Bill Keating, don't overlook the problem of courthouse bullying right here in the suburbs.

"There has been an increase in witness intimidation in Norfolk County," he said. "Don't look at it as geographical. It's generational. The young among here don't view it as a crime."

That's why he was instrumental in filing a bill that would allow prosecutors to strip some young intimidators of juvenile protections and try them as adults with adult penalties.

That means that those between the ages of 14 and 18 who are convicted could go to jail for as long as 10 years but, more important, they could be tried in open court for all to see.

Right now, teens found guilty of intimidation might be committed to the Department of Youth Services (DYS) until they are 18. More likely they would receive probation after a trial closed to the public.

"It has a direct affect on other cases," said Keating. "It is important that we go forward in an open setting so that word gets out that it is a crime to intimidate a witness."

"We have the option of treating teens as adults in some ways now, like conviction for offenses committed with a firearm, murder or a past DYS sentence."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert Creighton Jr., not only allows an open trial and adult penalties but still gives a judge the ability to give the offender a shorter sentence or commit him or her to the DYS.

"We want to look at the crime more seriously," said Keating. "Changing the law will not eradicate something. But it will be one more tool in the toolbox if the prosecutor chooses to use it."

Union Chief Challenges City's Ranking On FBI List

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Patrolman's union president Bruce Tait Monday challenged the city's ranking as "second safest city" in the state, claiming the statistics used in the FBI report were skewed by computer glitches in 2004 and 2005.

Tait told the City Council's Public Safety Committee that police officers were still learning a new computer system in those years so "the crime statistics were very under-reported."

When police officers filed their reports in those years, "they kept getting error messages. Back then, it was an absolute nightmare."

Not only were certain crimes under-reported, Tait said there were changes in FBI categories that inaccurately indicated fewer arrests. For example, Tait said that domestic incidents are no longer entered as ARR for arrests, but as referrals.

Committee Chair Jay Davis noted that total recorded arrests dropped from 10,000 to 7,000 and 8,000 in recent years.

Later in the meeting, Police Chief Robert Crowley disputed Tait's facts regarding the FBI report which has been used by the mayor and the chief to promote Quincy as the "second safest city" in the state. Crowley said the figures used were actually from more recent years.

The FBI makes no such rankings and discourages that use of the municipal crime reports.

Raymond later asked Crowley why he used the FBI statistics against the agency's wishes.

"There's got to be a measurement somehow," said Crowley.

Raymond then asked what city the chief would choose for comparison purposes.

"I don't know," said

Crowley.

Davis's committee had invited both Tait and Police Chief Robert Crowley to Monday's meeting to review a resolution submitted by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

The meeting is part of an ongoing discussion of police issues by the Public Safety Committee, which has asked Crowley and Tait to meet and resolve the bitter divide between union and management.

"I think it's almost impossible to get a meeting together," said Crowley. "They want a stenographer. They're not going to get one."

Some 30 uniformed police officers attended the meeting in support of their president Tait while, on the other city of City Council chambers, a dozen high ranking officers sat with or behind Crowley.

Davis asked both Tait and Crowley to review each of the seven points in Raymond's resolution.

Point 7 recommends a review and analysis of crime statistics. "We're going to contract with a private company to crunch the numbers," Tait said.

As for good news out of the police department, both Tait and Crowley, separately, agreed that the current budget does cover the department's capital needs. However, Tait said the officers were disappointed that the canine unit did not get the promised new canine recruits.

Davis asked Crowley to describe the status of several high-cost projects, including a new generator but Crowley said, "I don't know."

In addition, both Davis and Crowley praised the new training program which includes simulated gun training with paint balls as well as hostage and hijacking simulations in buildings.

There was no agreement on the other points of Raymond's resolution and neither the chief nor Tait appears ready to budge on their requirements for a sit-down meeting.

Tait said the union wants a stenographer and Crowley said no way.

As for morale, Tait said, "The morale, if anything, is worse. Our most senior member was dumped (after the last meeting with City Council)"

Davis asked Tait to provide specific instances where the department's training levels were too low and Tait described an incident on St. Patrick's Day.

"We were running around like chickens with our heads cut off," Tait said officers described that night.

In addition, Raymond referred to situation where an individual was arrested and then released because there were not enough officers on duty to transfer him to a hospital.

Raymond had the police report which was copied for other councillors and then destroyed. Davis cited federal privacy laws and none of the councillors discussed the details.

"I'd like to know if it's an ongoing problem," Davis said of the situation where the on-duty sergeant did not call in additional help.

"Once is outrageous enough," said Raymond.

As for the future, Tait said the drug unit should be doubled because the city's "drug problem is out of control."

No action was taken by the committee whose members include Davis, Raymond, Councillor John Keenan and Ward 6 councillor Brian McNamee.

Funds Added To Extend Shore Drive Repaving

An additional $600,000 in state funds has been made available to extend the repaving of Quincy Shore Drive from East Squantum Street to Furnace Brook Parkway.

The original project design of the $7 million restoration of Wollaston Beach called for the repaving of the Drive only from Fenno to Billings Streets.

But the efforts of the Quincy legislative delegation convinced the Patrick Administration that repaving the Drive along the beach from end to end was a critical component of the restoration project.

"I am extremely pleased with the quick response of the Patrick Administration and the secretary of Environmental Affairs, Ian Bowles, to our call for more funding to finish the entire project," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"These funds demonstrate the spirit of cooperation between the Legislature and the Patrick Administration that will allow this critical project to get the funding it needs," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

The legislative delegation pledged to continue to push for rapid completion of the restoration project in time for the summer months.

"We continue to push the DCR administrators as quickly as possible people can use the beach," said Rep. Stephen Tobin.

Anti-Blight Ordinance Gets Approval falling apart," reported Tom Costello of Lincoln Avenue where he said one house has "more animals in there than the San Diego Zoo."

"The mayor said there's nothing we can do," Costello said that he and his neighbors have been rebuffed at the city level but added, "I bet you money Cohasset and Newton have ways to do something about it."

"What does it take? A sledgehammer on the head," asked Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond after reviewing Costello's paper trail which began over a year ago. "We have no laws."

"I'm told we don't have any ordinance that has any impact," said Coughlin, explaining the inaction at the official level.

"I'm proud of this city," said Amy Piscanti of Winthrop Avenue who described neglected storefronts with trash on Newport Avenue. "It's deplorable."

"It's imperative that you pass this. We need this badly," Kay Borek of Grandview Avenue told the committee after her neighbors described a neglected home.

The committee chaired by Jay Davis of Ward 4 not only agreed that the time is right for the passage of stiffer laws but thanked Coughlin for preparing the ordinance.

"Thank you for making this a priority for us," Davis said after the vote, adding, "This is an excellent step to resolve these problems."

"This ordinance gives them to ability take enforcement action," Councillor John Keenan said, noting that officials now can only deal with conditions that are visible from the street. Now, he believes there will be "teeth in the ordinance."

"I'm hoping this is legally sufficient," said Raymond who found the residents' photographs "just unbelievable."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee supported the motion after noting that neglect is contagious, has a "demoralizing effect on a neighborhood and can be a neighborhood buster."

McNamee also reported that the city will be demolishing a long empty house in Squantum that has been condemned.

Complaint Against Restaurant Placed On File

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday placed on file a violation of the rules and regulations of the License Board at Sarsfields, 1454 Hancock St. because of an incident on March 18.

Officer Sean Glennon told the board that on that night, the bartender asked him to escort a patron out of the place because she said he was "intoxicated."

Glennon said when he got out on the sidewalk, one of the patrons waiting in line to get in the club, began fighting with the man the officer escorted.

When Glennon tried to stop the patron from fighting, he tackled him. They both fell on the ground and the patron almost grabbed the belt that the handcuffs were on, said Glennon.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said he thought Sarsfields, should have been "more vigilant" in realizing that the officer was in trouble and should have called 911.

Glennon said he called the police station and within minutes, a police car arrived.

pate on Saturday," said Phelan. "Each year, this event not only makes a significant visible impact on the appearance of our neighborhoods but, more importantly, strengthens community spirit, which contributes to the desirability of our city and our neighborhoods."

Residents are encouraged to join a cleanup site in their neighborhood and there is still time to designate additional sites. To designate a site, contact the Park Department at (617) 376-1251. The Park Department will also support the cleanup effort by providing the necessary tools including rakes, brooms, bags, gloves and other equipment. In addition the Department of Public Works and Allied Waste, who had dedicated trucks and manpower to assist with the cleanup efforts, will be on hand to haul refuse and other debris collected throughout the day.

Following the cleanup, Phelan will host an appreciation cookout where t-shirts will be distributed to all volunteers at the Park & Recreation Complex (One Merrymount Parkway) at 12:30 p.m. Hannaford Supermarket in North Quincy is donating a portion of the food, paper goods and supplies for the barbecue.

For more information on Cleaner, Greener or to organize a cleanup site, contact the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1251 or kkeohane@ci.quincy.ma.us.

Councillors Ask Police Union President To Stop Using Offensive Nicknames

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors Monday asked police union President Bruce Tait to stop using offensive nicknames for city officials on his website, particularly his unprintable tagline for Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

"I leave the name-calling out of it," Councillor John Keenan told Tait, adding, "Let's bring dignity to the table, engage in civil discourse."

Keenan said that the problems disturbing the police department won't be solved without dialogue and there can not be a dialogue with personal insults.

"Let's put all of that aside," Keenan urged Tait.

Keenan addressed the issue after Davis asked Tait to stop using the derisive

"Please pick up the phone and call me if you have any problem," said Davis.

Tait defended his nickname for Davis by saying he is a criminal lawyer "slavishly defending" clients arrested by Quincy Police. For that reason, Tait doesn't believe Davis should chair the Public Safety Committee.

Davis pointed out that fellow committee member Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond was also a defense lawyer. Keenan said that he, too, had done defense work.

In fact, Davis said that Tait's fellow officers had occasionally called him on criminal issues.

The heated exchange regarding Tait's website followed the committee's hearing on police issues at which both Tait and Chief Robert Crowley testified.

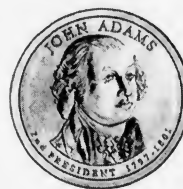

On the same website, Tait has used a nickname for Crowley. Councillor John Keenan said the practice of name-calling must stop if there is ever to be solutions to the police department's divide.

At previous council meetings, councillors have objected to other derogatory comments on Tait's website, particularly his labels for certain sections of the city and his description of criminal elements.

The split between Crowley and the police union became public last October when the police union voted "no confidence" in the chief.

Some 30 uniformed police officers accompanied Tait to the City council chambers for the meeting and they stood and applauded him after his testimony.

John Adams Dollar Coin Due Out May 22

They tried Susan B. Anthony but not even the liberated women she served could rescue her. They tried Sacajawea but Lewis & Clark's Indian girl suffered the same fate.

Now they're trying John Adams.

A one dollar coin bearing the likeness of John Adams will be put into general circulation here in Quincy Tuesday, May 22, with ceremonies planned for the Adams National Historical Park.

Dollar coins have never been popular among the big spenders in America — witness the demise of those that were minted to honor Susan

Issuance of the John Adams coin is important enough to attract the attendance of Edmund C. Moy, director of the U.S. Mint.

Activities at the May 22 event are sponsored by Discover Quincy, Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the Quincy Partnership, the National Park Service and the Patriot Ledger.

The sponsors are encouraging local businesses to use the Adams coins instead of paper bills when they make change.

Who knows? John Adams may succeed at the cash register where Susan B. Anthony and Sacajawea failed.

Paving Season Begins In Merrymount, Wollaston

Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell announce that Quincy's paving season is underway with projects in Merrymount and Wollaston.

In Merrymount, four streets will be completely repaved and new sidewalks will be installed. Hobomack Road, Chickatabot Road, Algonquin Road and Wampatuck Road will be completely redone under the current contract. New sidewalks will be installed throughout the four neighborhood streets.

In Wollaston, work is underway to replace the near century-old water main under Standish Avenue. Upon completion of the infrastructure work, the streets and sidewalks will be replaced.

"I appreciate the patience and cooperation of residents and we work toward improving our neighborhoods," said Phelan. "The end product of new streets and sidewalks will be worth the inconveniences of construction. We will continue to work on improving the overall condition of our streets and sidewalks in the coming year."

O'Donnell urged residents to use Standish Avenue for their commute to consider alternative routes.

"It's easier for everyone," said O'Donnell. "We will keep the impacts to a minimum, but we recognize that many people use this street during commuting hours."

Phelan is including $1 million in the current Budget Appropriation for continuation of the City's Pavement Management Plan; a systematic approach to daunting repairs needed by Quincy's roads.

Phelan also appropriated $2.2 million for citywide sidewalk repairs, which is currently ongoing.

"The Mayor has given us the resources to take a big bite out of the problem and now that the asphalt plants are open, we start rolling hard," said O'Donnell.

Paving projects in Squantum, Houghs Neck and West Quincy will take place in the early Spring. Phelan is set to announce the next round of summer paving sometime in May.

If residents have questions or concerns about a paving project, they can call the DPW office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, at (617) 376-1959.

Daughter Of Babe Ruth A Guest Speaker

Julia Ruth Stevens To Attend QHS Baseball Hall Of Fame Banquet

The Quincy High School Baseball Alumni Association and Hall of Fame Committee announces Julia Ruth Stevens, the daughter of Babe Ruth, will be attending the QHS Hall of Fame banquet Thursday, May 10.

Stevens, 89, is scheduled to be a guest speaker at the banquet along with Bill Monbouquette. Monbouquette wore the number 27 for the Red Sox, making his first Major League start on July 18, 1958. He won at least 14 games from 1960-63, with a career-high 20 victories in 1963. He was a four-time all-star and pitched a no-hitter in 1962 against the Chicago White Sox and set a club record with 17 strikeouts against the Washington Senators in 1961.

The Quincy High School Baseball Alumni Association and Hall of Fame Committee announces the names of fifteen former Quincy High School baseball players to be inducted into the Quincy High School Hall of Fame on May 10, 2007. The Hall of Fame Banquet will be held at the Quincy Sons of Italy. The social hour is from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., with dinner and the awards ceremonies to follow. Tickets to the Hall of Fame Banquet are $25 and can be purchased by contacting Joseph Brill, chairman of the QHSBBAA, at (617) 770-4813.

Salvation Army Bands Joint Concert May 19

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Norman Bearcroft will be special guests at the annual spring music festival of the Quincy Temple Corps Band Saturday, May 19, at 7 p.m. at the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy.

Bearcroft is the founding conductor of the International Staff Songsters and world renowned as a conductor and a member of band and vocal music.

The Quincy Temple Band is directed by Band Master William L. Rillins and the Quincy Temple Band, conducted by Band Master James Hephum.

A free will offering will be taken for world services.

Donovan ('42) have been inducted.

George Burke will be inducted as only the third Honorary Member into the Hall of Fame, joining former Quincy mayor James Sheets and former Minnesota Twins manager Sam Mele.

Warren Finley and A. "Bud" Mosher will join the Hall of Fame as former coaches.

The Hall of Fame committee will also honor four youth coaches who have given their time to teaching the game of baseball to so many kids for so many years. The four include Bill Draichio, Dick Lombardi and the late John Rossi of Quincy Youth Baseball and Tony Constantino from St. John's Baseball.

The Paul Grasso Memorial Baseball Book Scholarship will be awarded to a senior who will further their education and baseball skills at the college level. Grasso, who graduated from Quincy High School in 1967, was killed while serving his country during the Vietnam War. Book Scholarships in the name of the late Bill Sullivan and Joe Grasso will also be awarded.

May 5, 1928 - October 14, 2004

You, an joy have one rather Parent, and one true
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To rather you will return
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return
We look upon his picture
Sweet memories we recall
Of a life well lived and true
And a love for the one who Sweetest love, in the end
To our only comforter
Tell him how we miss him
And give him all our love
And yes, he goes with a team
May his soul be an aid to right hand side Lovingly remembered and sadly

Ridding Yard of Fire Ants

Q. Each spring and summer I have to deal with thousands of tiny red fire ants swarming around my yard and even coming up out of cracks in the driveway. A neighbor recommended that I find the main nest, pour gasoline on it and set it on fire, and that this is the only way to kill them. Is he right, or is there another way to get rid of these pests? I would really like to have my yard back. — Tammy C., Lake City, Fla.

A. Anyone who has ever inadvertently stood on or near a fire ant nest knows how painful those tiny bites can be! Fighting fire with fire has been a popular solution to the Southeast's fire ant invasion for quite a few decades now. But it's dangerous and not something I would recommend. Once the nest has been eliminated, the fire ant population may be reduced for a short period, but these small pests — first reaching the southern U.S. sometime in the 1920s — will be back.

However, new products are on the market now that can have a longer-term impact on the fire ants currently residing in your yard. Visit the pest-control section of your home-improvement store and ask for granule-type ant baits specifically formulated for fire ants. These baits don't kill instantly. Instead, worker ants pick up the granules and carry them back to the main nest, where the queen resides. The chemicals in the bait are metabolic inhibitors — meaning the ants that consume it will no longer thrive on other foods and eventually die.

A couple of important notes on chemical baits: These do have some environmental impact, so use only the amount recommended on the package, and avoid using the bait during periods of heavy rain — since it will wash away from the intended target and into lakes or streams. Also, for the most effective treatment, coordinate the bait application with surrounding neighbors so that several yards are treated at once, further reducing the risk of re-infestation.

Deck Care 101: It's All In The Prep

(NAPS) — As the weather gets warmer, we tend to spend more and more time outdoors. There is no better place to sit and enjoy the great spring weather than on your deck. Did you know that the key to keeping your deck looking great for years is not in the stain or finish you apply — it's in the surface prep? Weathered wood needs to be cleaned and restored before a single brush stroke of new stain or water-repellent can be applied. For a great-looking deck, follow these tips from the experts at Wolman Wood Care Products.

Thoroughly clean. Clean pressure-treated wood decks with Wolman DeckBrite Wood Cleaner & Coating Prep. An acid- and chlorine-free, oxygen-powered powder concentrate, it is tough on stains yet safe to use near plant life and shrubs. If you're not sure of your wood type, use Wolman Deck & Fence Brightener liquid concentrate. It is formulated to restore all wood-even tannin-rich woods such as cedar, redwood, mahogany and other exotic hardwoods.

Both products clean and restore wood to its natural beauty without bleaching or yellowing and remove invisible surface barriers, which can prevent the adhesion of protective coatings and stains. These fast-acting formulas loosen dirt, stains and discoloration in just 10 minutes. And they are easy to use—just mix with water, spray on, brush in and rinse off with a garden hose.

Strip away deteriorating or unwanted finishes. If the colored finish on your deck has seen better days—or if you want a different look—remove it with a product like Wolman DeckStrip Stain & Finish Remover. For tough-to-remove 100 percent acrylic stains, use Wolman DeckStrip ASR Acrylic Stain Remover. Both remove oil- and water-based solid, semitransparent and clear finishes and prepare wood for a new finish or stain. The ready-to-use, highly concentrated formulas work in just 15 minutes without the need for multiple applications. They contain special wetting agents and thickeners that cling to all wood surfaces—even vertical surfaces—so they're great for fences, gazebos, play sets and more.

Beautify and protect. Once your deck has been properly cleaned and restored, beautify and protect it with a water-repellent coating. Apply a semitransparent or solid stain, such as Wolman DuraStain, or a rich transparent oil finish, such as Wolman F & P, to enhance the beauty of your deck.

Even if you decide not to stain, it's important to protect your deck with a clear, water-repellent sealer. Water-repellent sealers stop rain from penetrating the wood surface, which can cause swelling, shrinking, warping and cracking. Many water-repellent sealers, including Wolman RainCoat, also contain a mildewcide that will impede the growth of mildew on your deck during the warm, humid months ahead.

For more information on the complete line of Wolman Cleaners and Stain Strippers and for more helpful wood care tips—visit www.wolman.com.

Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Computer Seminar May 24

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer-assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham Thursday, May 24 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises. There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available at both the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"These services have proven valuable tools for our customers," O'Donnell said. "We hope this seminar will be helpful and informative."

There is no charge to attend the seminar. Persons planning to attend should register by phone, 781-461-6116. Include names, address and a day-time phone number.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The registry receives and records hundreds of thousands of documents each year and is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

Keep Those Flowering Plants Healthy

(NAPS) — Americans love their flower gardens and want to keep those flowers as pretty in the yard as they looked at the garden store.

"Many gardeners carefully budget, plant and water," says Bayer Advanced Garden Expert Lance Walheim, who wrote the best-selling book "Roses for Dummies" and is a regular contributor to Sunset magazine and books.

But diseases, insects and mites can attack flowering plants. For example, spider mites can literally suck dry the leaves of flowering plants, especially roses. These close relatives of spiders, daddy longlegs and ticks are smaller than a head of a pin. Spider mites use a pair of needlelike stylets to rupture leaf cells when they feed, and then suck cell sap from torn cells.

"You can have the start of a spider mite problem and not know it because the pests are so small," says Walheim. "Preventing the problem is the key to success after all of the money, care and emotional energy you've given to your flower beds."

Ways to help flowering plants thrive include:

1. Choose flowers adapted to both your climate and to the conditions of your garden.

2. Position your plants in the appropriate season. For example, impatiens thrive in shady areas. Marigolds like full sun.

3. Check the sprinklers to make sure they reach the flowers and are left on long enough to thoroughly wet plant roots.

4. Remove spent flowers, (called deadheading) to channel plant energy into more blooms.

5. Fertilize to keep plants growing vigorously and blooming.

6. Prevent problems with Bayer Advanced 3-in-1 Insect, Disease & Mite Control, which protects from insects, diseases and mites.

It contains two-way insecticide action and a fungicide that kills many types of insects on contact, including spider mites, and prevents and cures diseases. The spray is rainproof and provides up to 30 days' protection. And it comes in two formulas: a premixed ready-to-use for a few plants or a concentrated version for bigger jobs.

New Outdoor Furnishings Focus On Stress Relief

From sleek contemporary chairs to warm, traditional rocking chairs, this season's outdoor furnishings are designed to offer a much-needed respite from their frantic lifestyles.

"Our own porches and patios are the most accessible 'de-stressing' zones we have. They can replenish us in ways no other place or destination can," said Jackie Hirschhaut, vice-president of the American Home Furnishing Alliance. "If you're feeling frazzled, create an outdoor oasis you can escape to every day."

Some trends that you may spot this outdoor season include:

• Designer labels. Designer labels are making their way to the outdoors. For example, Vladimir Kagan, one of the most important contemporary furniture designers of the 21st century, has designed his first outdoor collection.

• Sophisticated style. Shoppers can now find outdoor furnishings inspired by historic laces and styles. For example, The Ladies Association of Mount Vernon, the home of George and Martha Washington, has licensed a new outdoor furniture collection.

• Colorful comfort. From soothing blues and greens to earthy bronze and copper, top hues in outdoor furnishings this year bring an element of calm to outdoor settings, even on the dullest of winter days. Manufacturers have taken a cue from their indoor upholstery counterparts and begun presenting matched groupings to simplify selection.

• Materials mix. A new luxury fabric that combines the opulence of velvet with weather-resistant capabilities gives manufacturers the opportunity to create unprecedented extravagance in high-end outdoor fabrics.

• Rock on. If you want to take the pressure off, a few minutes in a rocker on your porch or patio—or perhaps your urban balcony—just might do the trick. Studies suggest the humble low-tech rocker can ease the stress and anxiety brought on by our high-pressure, high-tech lives.

• Party on. Backyard entertaining has never been easier with functional products such as compact outdoor kitchens, multifunctional service bars and beverage centers.

Fitness Facts

Getting In Shape For A Healthy Life

By Jennifer Hadfield
Certified Personal Trainer and author of
"Marathoning for Mortals"

(NAPS) - Whether it's walking, running, tennis, cycling or swimming, exercising outdoors provides us with a fun, versatile way to burn calories.

As a coach and personal trainer, I encourage my clients to reach the full potential of their workouts by being motivated and committed for the long term throughout the year. It takes more than jogging a few miles once a week or participating in the weekly company softball game.

Here are 10 tips to keep you focused on achieving your fitness goals for the rest of your life:

1. Fitness devices, such as heart rate monitors, calorie counters, body-fat analyzers and pedometers, are very important in monitoring progress and keeping people on the right track to meeting their goals.

2. If you are inactive, begin with frequent but shorter workouts (25 to 30 minutes, three to five days per week) and let your body adapt to the change in activity level. Gradually increase the time of each workout after completing 12 sessions.

3. If you are active three to five times per week, add one or two high-intensity workouts per week to boost metabolism, effort level and fitness.

4. Even if you're not technically savvy, get a pedometer, which helps count each step you make and helps motivate you.

5. Know what kind of batteries your fitness devices take and have backup sets available, in case additional power is needed. For example, Energizer offers miniature, coin-cell batteries in popular sizes identified by number, such as 357, 2025 and 2032.

6. Drop those pounds efficiently by keeping a fuel log. There are free online resources that make it easy to keep track of your meals, calories and exercise.

7. Think of exercising as group therapy. Before you know it, the workout is done; you've enjoyed it and had quality time with your friends.

8. Avoid doing the same exercise or machine over and over again. Your body will become efficient at that exercise and won't burn as many calories as when you first started.

9. Incorporate strengthening exercises into your regimen two to three times per week. Increasing lean muscle tissue will boost resting metabolism, help decrease inches from your body and provide a strong base to prevent injury.

10. Be patient. Getting active takes time. It takes 21 days to create a new habit. Exercising regularly can become a habit over time. Make it a priority in your life and you'll find three to four weeks later you will wonder how you managed without it.

Trying to get into shape may be hard work. According to a recent Energizer Keep Going fitness survey of personal trainers, after the first two months of the year, almost 85 percent of those who began their fitness training have stopped. However, working on a healthy lifestyle can help you get into a routine for years to come.

For more information on fitness tips, devices and the batteries that power them, visit www.jennyhadfield.com or www.energizer.com.

The fitness world can be a confusing and intimidating place. Each day there seems to be another news report, infomercial, magazine article or Internet site telling you what you should or should not do with your body. With the enormous amount of material available, it is important to know what is fact, fiction or just another get-rich-quick scheme.

Let's separate fact from fiction and tackle the following fitness excuses... I mean myths.

If I Lift Weights I Will Bulk Up

Not a quiet! Obtaining strong, balanced and functional muscles through strength training should be a goal in your fitness routine, no matter your gender. For women, this is very important due to the benefits that strength training has on conditions such as osteoporosis and facilitating the loss of body fat. With the proper technique and workout program, it is possible to develop lean, toned muscles without fear of "bulking up." So breathe a sigh of relief and hit the weights.

Doing Crunches Will Give Me "Flat Abs"

Oh, if this myth were only true, but IT'S NOT. The desire for washboard abdominals has many people crunching themselves to disappointment. Achieving visible "flat abs" is a combination of a consistent progressive exercise program, proper nutrition and genetics. Crunches should be completed as part of the development of stable, strong and efficient core muscles (muscles of the trunk).

Completing these exercises alone will not result in washboard abs, and in any case, the mere fact of seeing a "six pack" is not recommended. You can have the strongest abdominal muscles in the world, but if they are hidden under body fat you will not see them. Concentrate on a well-rounded fitness routine that encourages a decrease in body fat and an increase in lean muscle mass, in addition to proper nutrition.

If I'm Not Overweight, I Don't Need to Exercise

Don't let the mirror fool you. Your external appearance does not represent your internal appearance. Keeping your heart, lungs, muscles and bones strong are extremely important. Everyone can be at risk for medical conditions such as diabetes, heart disease and osteoporosis. Although this risk may increase for a person who is overweight, there is a need for everyone to keep his or her body fit and strong.

Do not rely solely on what the scale reads or what size you wear to determine if you should exercise. Your weight may be within a desirable range, but that does not guarantee the same holds true for your body fat and lean muscle mass. Your body fat percentage can be more significant than your weight. The risks of many conditions such as a stroke, heart attack, diabetes and high blood pressure can be decreased through exercise. No one is exempt from exercising.

Seek the advice of a medical or fitness professional about any questions or you may have, and don't let these fitness myths keep you from reaching your fitness goals.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Endodontists Battle Tooth Pain--And Misperceptions

(NAPS) - Do the words "root canal" leave you unsettled, anxious and fearful? If so, you are not alone. A recent survey by the American Association of Endodontists (AAE) found that nearly half of respondents believe a root canal to be "excruciatingly painful." The reality is that root canal treatments are virtually painless and provide patients with instant pain relief.

"People come into my office every day apprehensive about getting a root canal," says Dr. James A. Abbott, an endodontist in Santa Rosa, Calif. "But these fears are undeserved." New technologies and the advanced training of endodontists have revolutionized the treatment, making it more hero than villain.

Endodontists, the dentists who specialize in root canal treatment, save more than 17 million natural teeth each year. Yet they spend a lot of time dispelling myths about root canal treatment and explaining what they do for a living.

"At a cocktail party, when I tell people I'm an endodontist, they say 'What's that?'" says Dr. Terry A. Propper, an endodontist in Brentwood, Tenn. "Then, when I explain that I'm a dentist who specializes in root canal treatment, they get a pained expression."

Since the notorious image of the root canal doesn't reflect today's reality, the AAE set out to change the procedure's reputation. In an effort to raise awareness about root canals, as well as endodontics as a specialty, the AAE has introduced the first ever Root Canal Awareness Week this year.

"It's a sound peculiar to dedicate a week to dental procedure, but Root Canal Awareness Week has an important educational purpose," said Dr. John S. Olmsted, AAE president, of Greensboro, N.C. "Many people don't know that root canal treatment is no more uncomfortable than getting a filling placed. It's a beneficial treatment that eliminates pain and helps people keep their natural teeth."

In fact, research is showing that saving natural teeth has extensive health implications. A December 2005 study in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine found that tooth loss was associated with a greater risk of heart disease, with those who had lost the most teeth at the greatest risk. This remained the case even when other risk factors such as smoking, alcohol and obesity were taken into account. Another study, published in the November 2006 Journal of Dental Research, found a relationship between endodontic disease—which root canals treat—and coronary heart disease.

Dr. Propper says she always asks her patients at the end of a root canal procedure how the appointment went. "They always say 'it was so much easier than I expected.' The truth is that people come to us in pain and they leave feeling better."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TELL GRAMPA TO WATCH HIS SWEETS

While most people associate tooth decay with children who have a fondness for sweets, cavities may also be a problem for those approaching middle age and beyond. The reason for this is that gums begin to recede as we get older. This leads to exposure of vulnerable tooth roots, which do not have the benefit of an enamel coating to protect them. Unlike the exposed crowns, tooth roots also have minimal exposure to topical fluoride. Moreover, many older people have reduced secretions of saliva, which affords natural protection against tooth decay. So, to protect aging teeth against "senile decay," older patients are urged to ask their dentists about possible fluoride applications, as well as ways to improve saliva flow.

Have you ever noticed that the most perfect smiles have an almost flawless "gum line" like a beautiful frame surrounding the smile? Periodontal disease approaches silently. It may progress painlessly, producing few obvious signs. We believe oral health is key to overall health and well-being. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer complete dental care for the entire family. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. You can trust your dental health to our experience and knowledge. We want to keep you smiling. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. It is as important to brush and floss bridges and other dental restorations as it is to clean natural teeth.

North Poised For Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy varsity softball team is on its way to its first post-season tournament appearance in years. The Red Raiders enter this week's scheduled play with a 6-2 overall record and a 3-1 record in the Atlantic Coast League.

"I am happy with the results so far in the early goings," said head coach Mike Connor. "It has been a pleasure coaching these young women. They are doing the little things right on the field, they are staying poised even when we have been down in most of our games and they have a sense that no matter what, they can come back and win each and every game they have and will play."

"This attitude was much-needed here at North Quincy. But it all will come down to our pitching and I have three varsity caliber starting pitchers in Paige and Sammi Bonanni and Brittany Folkins. Once our offense heats up we should be a lot better. One game at a time is the motto this season."

The Red Raiders hosted their NQ Girls Softball Tournament over April vacation and finished with a 1-1 record, but since then, the team has reeled off two straight wins over ACL opponents Marshfield High School and Plymouth North High School.

In the opening game of the NQ Tournament, the Red Raiders defeated Rockland by a score of 9-5. Junior Paige Bonanni was the winning pitcher.

Sophomore Kathleen Lynch finished the game with two hits, a RBI and two runs scored, while junior Katherine Feeney contributed with two hits, two runs and four RBIs.

"Paige pitched great for us against Rockland," Connor said. "After giving up five hits in the first two innings, she no-hit Rockland the rest of the way. Lynch and Feeney highlighted the offense with solid games in the field and at the plate."

North Quincy squared off against Winthrop HS in the championship game and lost a well-pitched game 4-1. The only hit North Quincy got all game came off the bat of Kasey O'Connell.

On April 23, NQ played Marshfield for the first time on the softball diamond and came away with a hard-earned 5-3 victory. Paige Bonanni earned the win on the mound for the Raiders.

Junior standout Rebecca Goreham went 3 for 3 at the dish and had one RBI. Other players producing on offense were juniors Kerry Coughlin (2-3, 2 runs scored) and

SOFTBALL

Kasey O'Connell (3-4, 2 RBIs).

"This was the first time we had played against Marshfield in softball," Connor said. "They are a good team and it was a great win and step forward for the program. Paige pitched another great game and our offense came through with the big hits when we needed them, including two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to put the game away."

In their game against Plymouth North, freshman pitcher Sammi Bonanni earned her second career win in the 8-6 victory. Kathleen Lynch went 2 for 2 at the plate and had three runs scored and three stolen bases.

"Sammi's contributions as a freshman have been very positive," Connor added. "She is 2-1 as a starting pitcher with wins over Falmouth and Plymouth North. After giving up five hits in the first three innings (including four in a row), she settled down and no-hit Plymouth North from the fourth inning on. Also, Catherine O'Connell played a great game for us defensively."

The Red Raiders played Boston Latin Academy on Tuesday night and matched up against Quincy High School last night (May 2) in the first of two meetings between the city high schools.

Central Girls City Basketball Champs

The Central Middle School girls' basketball team captured the City Championship for the third year in a row. The championship game was played in March at Quincy High School.

In an exciting game, Central defeated Broad Meadows by a score of 35-25. Eighth grader Montana McBirney (center) led Central with 10 points. She also played an outstanding game on defense and she dominated the boards. Kiley McDonald chipped in with nine points and Jillian Carchedi and Talia Hampton each scored six points.

The team headed into the playoffs with a 6-0 record. In their playoff game against Atlantic, the Rams were once again led by McBirney's outstanding offense as she scored 12 points. Sixth grader Sara Ryan played a great game at point guard and scored six points and Jillian Carchedi scored five points.

Eighth graders Courtney Peters and Shelby Merchant, along with seventh grader Courtney Timmins, led the defensive effort.

Other members of the championship team included Ashley Bergonzi, Olivia Umoren, Julia Murphy and Madison McBirney.

Presidents Defeat Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents have played a handful of games over the last two weeks. The team currently has a record of 3-4 overall and 0-3 in Atlantic Coast League play.

The highlight over the past two weeks for the Presidents was their win over cross-city rival North Quincy High School and the third annual Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament held over the school vacation week.

Quincy got things going after a day delay due to bad weather in the opening round against Archbishop Williams High School with a 10-6 victory. Senior Dan Meyers was the winning pitcher for the Presidents.

The ten runs the team scored came as a direct result of a spread out offensive attack. Senior captain Steve Connolly went 3 for 4 with a RBI and junior Ricky Salvucci finished the game 3-4 with three runs scored and three RBIs. Senior captain John Alexander (1-2, RBI, two runs scored), senior Matt Boyle (1-3, RBI) and junior Mike LeBel (1-3, two RBIs) also contributed in the victory.

With their win in the opening round game, Quincy squared off against North Quincy in the tournament final. The Presidents and the Red Raiders had never faced each other in the championship game. Quincy defeated North Quincy by a 9-2 score.

BASEBALL

"This was the first time we had faced North in the three years we have been playing this tournament," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "It was a big win for us this early in the season. It lifted us up and was a great win. North was coming off of a big win over Milton in their first game, and they are a very good team. It was a nice win."

The Presidents scored three times in the second inning to get the scoring going and would score again in the third, fourth and fifth innings. Connolly, Salvucci and LeBel each had two RBIs apiece in the win.

The team's last two games were against ACL members Plymouth North and Whitman-Hanson High Schools.

In the Plymouth North game, the Presidents lost 8-1, while managing only four hits all game. Senior Wendall Cosgrove had two of the four hits and drove in the lone run for Quincy. Matt Boyle and senior Dan O'Connell had the other two hits.

"It just did not go our way against Plymouth North," Draicchio said. "We had no offense and the mistakes that we made in the field hurt us in the end."

Against Whitman-Hanson, Quincy led multiple times throughout, but ended up allowing three runs in the last inning and lost a heartbreaking 10-9.

Steve Connolly got the Presidents on the scoreboard first with a two-run homer in the first inning. Matt Boyle would help add to the lead with a homerun in the second, but after holding leads of 4-1, 4-2, 5-2, 7-5 and 9-7 Quincy fell in the final frame.

Boyle and Connolly finished with three RBIs each, but it was not enough as Quincy lost its third game in as many tries against an Atlantic Coast League team. "It was a crazy game (played in the rain)," Draicchio said. "We had our chances. This loss really hurt, but it does not take away from our ultimate goal, which is to make it back to the tourney. We have been good enough to win the games we have lost."

Quincy played Marshfield High on Tuesday and played against North Quincy last night (May 2nd) in the first of two scheduled games between the city's high schools. The team's next home date is Monday against Nauset High School. The first pitch is at 4 p.m. at Adams Field.

Pitch, Hit & Run Competition At Quarry Hills Field May 12

Mini Fenway Park will host a free Pepsi Major League Baseball Pitch, Hit & Run competition for area youth on Saturday, May 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Quarry Hills Fields in Quincy, MA.

Pitch, Hit & Run is the official skills competition of Major League Baseball. This grassroots program is designed to provide youngsters with an opportunity to compete free of charge in a competition that recognizes individual excellence in core baseball skills.

Competitors are divided into four age divisions: 7-8, 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14. Competitors have the chance to advance through four levels of competition, including Team Championships at Major League ballparks and the National Finals at the 2007 MLB All-Star Game.

The individual pitching, hitting and running champions. Along with the all-around champion in each age group at the local competition will be awarded and advance to the Sectional level of competition.

All participants must bring a copy of their birth certificate and fill out a registration waiver form prior to the start of the competition.

For questions about the competition, contact Luis Tiant, Jr., the local coordinator, at (617) 471-3332, ext. 5 or by email at luis.tiant@quincyballpark.org.

Quincy Post 95 Tryouts Set for May 5-6

Tryouts for the Quincy Legion Post #95 American Legion Baseball team will be held on Sat. May 5 and Sun., May 6 at O'Rourke Field on Quarry St., West Quincy beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Anyone who resides in Quincy, born on or after Jan. 1, 1988 is eligible to tryout.

If you are planning on trying out, bring baseball pants, cleats and your glove.

Tryouts will continue at O'Rourke Field on Saturdays and Sundays through the month of May.

If you have any questions, contact Dan Sweeney at (617) 417-3853 or Andy McAllister at (617) 290-3074.

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth Tryouts

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth will hold tryouts for its three teams on May 5, 6, 12 and 13 at O'Rourke Field from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Players who do not turn 19 years of age before May 1, 1988 are invited to tryout.

Wollaston will sponsor three teams; two teams in the Senior League (16-18 year olds) and one team in the newly formed 16-Year Old Prep League. Wollaston plays in the Senior Babe Ruth South Shore League that includes teams from Boston and South Shore communities.

Wollaston also sponsors

a 16-year old all-star team that participates in the Babe Ruth State Tournament.

To help build consumer trust and satisfaction with the automotive service industry, a group of business owners, manufacturers and associations created the non-profit Motorist Assurance Program (MAP), which requires member shops to adhere to a strict set of fact-based vehicle inspection and communication standards. MAP establishes criteria not only for recommending replacement of worn parts and other products, but also how these recommendations are communicated to the vehicle owner.

"Sad to say, but many repair professionals and show owners are so concerned about earning the customer's trust that they actually hesitate to recommend parts and services the customer's vehicle really requires to return it to its proper operating condition," said MAP President Larry Hecker. "Our Uniform Inspection and Communication Standards make it clear to both the repair provider and vehicle owner when, and under what circumstances, a component or fluid has exceeded or is nearing its effective service life."

Using these industry standards, the repair facility can provide a factual basis for recommending a specific repair and/or parts replacement. At the same time, the vehicle owner will receive a clear, concise explanation of why the repair is necessary. This way, the vehicle owner can make a more confident, satisfying and informed decision about the care of their vehicle.

Among the most recent MAP guidelines are: the suggested replacement, after 50,000 or more miles, of original equipment shocks and struts; replacement of brake fluid that exceeds specified levels of copper content; and the suggested replacement of a battery when it tests near the "end of its useful life" utilizing a tester or on-board monitor.

MAP offers a comprehensive library of vehicle repair information — including a vehicle repair video, tips for choosing and working with qualified repair providers and a guide to MAP member shops — at www.motorist.org. Most participating repair shops display their "Motorist Assurance Program" decal at their entrance or near their customer waiting areas.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, April 20, at approximately 1:05 a.m., Officer John McGovern was on routine patrol in the area below the ramp going over the Neponset River, when he observed two males in front of Bert's Electric Supply on Newbury Street. Upon seeing the cruiser, the two males fled into an alleyway between Newbury and Densmore Streets, running towards the Adams Inn.

The officer noted the suspects were wearing hoods and were holding their hands under their sweatshirts as if to hid something from view as they ran. Officer McGovern notified communications, then exited his cruiser to give chase.

As the officer entered the alley, he spotted one of the suspects hiding and told him to stop and take his hands out of his sweatshirt pouch. The suspect, who was about 20 feet away, then ran off.

Officer Christopher McDermott arrived on scene and went to the area of the Adams Inn. There, he caught the fleeing suspect and pat-frisked him (search on outer garments for items that could be a concealed weapon) and felt a hard round object in the suspect's front left pocket. This item turned out to be a permanent marker.

Often used by "graffiti artists." Once Officer McGovern learned of this, he returned to the location where the suspects were first seen and then retraced their steps as they fled.

Nearby, the officer found two cans of spray paint, one green and one silver, in the alley. A short distance away, he found another can of black spray paint. Officer McGovern then found three box trucks that had been vandalized with the black paint. He also noted there was a strong smell of spray paint in the air indicating the cans were used recently.

The suspect that had been detained by Officer McDermott was placed under arrest for "defacing or vandalizing property." While enroute to the station with the prisoner, Officer McDermott spotted a male in a t-shirt (in 30-degree temperature and windy) walking away from the crime scene by the Hess gas station and confronted him. Officer McGovern also responded.

They observed this male had black paint all over his hands. The suspect (2) denied it was paint, stating it was from a marker, which only hurt his defense. Officer McGovern noted the suspect was very warm and sweaty. The suspect said he just had an argument with his father, was "mad" and left, walking to "blow off steam." The suspect had difficulty explaining to the officers how he walked over four miles from his home in Hough's Neck.

Officer McDermott retraced this suspect's steps and found a black leather jacket with a black hooded sweatshirt near the entrance to Applebee's Restaurant. The officer noted the sweatshirt appeared warm to the touch, as if someone had just finished wearing it. The suspect denied the garments were his.

The officers had the following pieces of circumstantial evidence: initial description provided by Officer McGovern; close proximity of the suspect to the crime scene; paint/marker on hands; high body temperature as well as elusive and implausible remarks as to where he had been. Based on the above information, the second suspect was also charged with "defacing or vandalizing property."

Both suspects are 17-year-old Quincy residents. In addition to the damage to the trucks, spray paint and marker were also found on a garage door and a storage container. Photographs of the vandalism were taken.

The spray paint cans and marker were placed into evidence for trial. Video from surveillance cameras located in the alleys were also being obtained for court purposes.

Nice Work!

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

Walk For Hunger To Benefit Local Food Pantries

More families than ever are turning for help from the emergency food programs funded by Project Bread's Walk for Hunger. To respond, Project Bread is asking everyone to recruit teammates and donors for the 2007 Walk which is scheduled for Sunday, May 6.

In Massachusetts, 450,000 people struggle to put food on the table, and more people than ever are living up for meals and groceries from emergency soup kitchens and food pantries.

The Walk for Hunger is the oldest continual pledge walk in the country and the largest event to relieve local hunger. The event benefits 64 emergency food programs in the South Shore area, including several in Quincy.

"We see an average of three to five clients a week," says Cathy Jacques, pantry coordinator of the Germantown Neighborhood Center Pantry in Quincy. "We're seeking people who own homes, but just can't make ends meet. We also have single mothers, seniors, and families - all of which are struggling to provide the daily nutrition they need to survive."

For 38 years, the Walk for Hunger has provided critical resources for hungry people in Massachusetts. This year, 42,000 people are expected to take part in the event, walking with friends, family, or as part of a team.

Participants can walk all or part of the 20-mile scenic route, which weaves through Boston, Brookline, Newton, Watertown, and Cambridge.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Age is not measured by years. Nature does not equally distribute energy. Some people are born old and tired while others are going strong at 70." - Dorothy Thompson

The late Louis Armstrong, one of the greatest jazz musicians this country has ever produced, was once asked how he felt at being over 69 years old. He replied: "My belief and satisfaction is that, as long as a person breathes, they still have a chance to exercise the talents they were born with. There's no such thing as being 'on the way out' as long as you are doing something interesting and good. You are in business as long as you are breathing." ... What a remarkable and sound philosophy. ...

A friend of mine/ours who as age 83 still maintains an active, busy schedule was asked why he virtually never reminisced about his more than 80 years of living. "No time for that," he replied. "Past experiences shouldn't be talked about. It should be put to good use. Take what you learned from the past and put it to work on tomorrow."

Isn't this what Louis Armstrong was talking about in his quote? Exercise the talents you were born with. Do something interesting and good each day, every day ...

Quincy's senior citizen traffic zoning is not only the first in the state, but very likely the first in the nation, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

Coughlin introduced the idea of a senior citizen safety zone to the City Council in 2003 after considering the benefits of school traffic zones.

"I looked at the school behind my house," said Coughlin. "I thought, 'If we can protect schoolchildren with special zones, why not seniors?'"

At this time, Coughlin said that officials in Chicago are considering adopting the idea as are local officials in Milton and Somerville, but no other city or town has senior traffic zones yet.

Phelan and the City Council approved Coughlin's proposal in 2003 as a Home Rule Petition which must be cleared at the state level. Coughlin said that Senator Michael Morrissey then "led the charge" through the state legislature and the petition was signed by Governor Mitt Romney late last fall.

"The state controls the roadways," Phelan said last week, explaining the lengthy process. Any change in speed limits or traffic zones must be approved at the state level.

Under the new law, drivers face $100 fines for violating the new speed limits in a Senior Traffic Zone.

The new zoning comes

SENIOR TRAFFIC ZONE on Granite Street is now marked by signs warning drivers of a 20 M.P.H. speed limit and a possible $100 fine. The zone, the first in the state is 500 feet long and will include enhanced crosswalks. This is the first of some 20 scheduled for sites across the city. Two cars ignored a Red light as this photo was being shot.

none too soon for residents of Granite Place like Nancy Grasso who said crossing Granite Street has been hazardous to life and limb. "Some of them (drivers) speed right through red lights."

Several senior housing developments are on one side of Granite Street while all types of shopping destinations, from a fruit store to a drugstore to a supermarket to a clothing store, lie across the roadway.

"You take your life in your hands (crossing Granite Street)," said Mary Cappadona who attended last week's ceremony as did Amelia Sacco who said, "A lot of times, they go right through the red light."

However, it's not always the drivers' fault said Helen Taylor who lives nearby. "Sometimes, they (pedestrians) still go when the hand is up."

Recently, Barbara O'Brien said she kept a woman from crossing at the wrong time, "I yelled at a woman. Told her to stand close to that fence."

Contacted after the ceremony, Coughlin emphasized that police enforcement of traffic laws and pedestrian education are just as important as creating protective zones. He said that safety plans have three important components, which he labels the three E's: Engineering, Education and Enforcement.

In the near future, many more of the city's 16,000 senior citizens stand to benefit from the new zoning. Coughlin said there are 20 additional Senior Zone locations on the public works list.

Included, at this time, are such zones as 80 Clay Street, Beechwood on the Bay, the Bauer House, Drohan Apartments, and apartments on School Street across from St. John's Church.

Cleaner, Greener Project Cleans 45 Tons of Trash

Mayor William Phelan and Park Director Mark Jaehnig called last Saturday's Cleaner, Greener Quincy cleanup one of the most successful in the 18-year history of the event.

More than 1,450 volunteers fanned out across Quincy's parks, beaches, marshes, schoolyards, and open spaces, cleaning an estimated 45 tons of trash.

"What a wonderful day for our community," said Phelan at a post-event appreciation barbecue. "We are so fortunate to have residents who care so deeply about their city. The weather and enthusiasm of our volunteers have combined to make this one the greatest turnouts in Cleaner, Greener Quincy history."

Estimates from the DPW indicate that more than 45 tons of trash and debris were cleaned, with most of the larger debris from winter wash-ups at beaches and marsh areas.

"People are really buying into our 'Neighborhoods First' program and becoming actively involved in keeping our community great," said Phelan. "It's nice to see the cleaner, greener stalwarts out today working alongside so many new people to the program. It's a great sign for the future of our city."

Volunteers cleaned up at more than 30 sites in every Quincy neighborhood.

"I want to thank the volunteers and employees that made Cleaner, Greener such a great event this year," said Jaehnig. "As a long-time volunteer in the program, it was impressive to see the full scope and impact made by our volunteers. I want to thank Allied Waste, Hannaford Supermarkets, Barry Welch and the Recreation Department, the members of Local 1139, and Kristen Keohane who all contributed to the success of the event."

Volunteers Sought To Help Letter Carriers' Food Drive

Volunteers are needed to help the National Association of Letter Carriers with their annual food drive for the hungry Saturday, May 12.

The letter carriers themselves will pick up the non-perishable donations made by clients along their routes and left beside their mailboxes.

But the volunteers are needed from 2:30 to 7 p.m. to sort and package the food for the pantries at the Koch Park & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Drivers are also needed to pick up and transport the food from the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy post offices to the Park & Recreation Complex.

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor William Phelan Monday presented a $250,844,657 budget proposal for fiscal year 2008 to the City Council.

"This represents an approximate 4.9% increase from last year's actual budget," Phelan said, attributing a large part of the $11.6 million increase over the 2007 budget to a 12% hike in the cost of employee benefits.

"Our budget line for 'Employee Benefits' has grown from $18 million in fiscal year 2002 to $42 million in fiscal year 2008," said the mayor.

Phelan's 2008 budget plan, also, includes a $5.1 million or 7% increase in the city's education budget and one and two percent increases in fire and police respectively.

"I know of no other community that is making such an investment in education," Phelan said as he cited his proposed $5.1 million increase in the education budget. "Our investment in our schools comprises 31% of the fiscal year 2008 appropriation. Our public

Budget Highlights

- A 12% increase in the employee benefits cost-a number Phelan is fighting to reduce through the collective bargaining process.
- A 7% increase in the Education budget-more than $5 million.
- $150,000 for additional tree-plantings through Quincy neighborhoods.
- Purchase of seven new police cruisers.
- Continued resources for the next phase of the City's Pavement Management Plan.
- Additional money for the Council on Aging's SWAP program, which allows Quincy seniors to work in government for a stipend.

Board Selects Pageant Field For New Track

The Quincy Park and Recreation Board voted to site a new running track at Pageant Field at Monday night's board meeting.

The vote was a 5-3 vote to proceed with construction of the track after a two-year absence of such a facility.

The board conditioned their approval on there not being any chain-link fencing surrounding the track and that the aesthetic impacts be minimized. The board also requested that any concerns of the Adams family be addressed prior to final design.

Final approval is required by the City Council.

Mayor William Phelan first proposed the creation of a new track facility to replace the aging, quarter-mile track in Veterans' Stadium as part of the hotel/motel tax bond.

"I applaud the work of the Park and Recreation Board in helping move this project forward," said Phelan. "This site stands to benefit our entire community as a premiere facility for our track program and as a beautiful place where all residents can walk, exercise, and enjoy the natural beauty of the park. I believe time will show this to be the ideal location for such a community facility."

Board members voting in favor of the proposed track location were Bryan Connolly, Betty DeCristofaro, Robert Evans, David McCarthy and Sandy Verhaalt.

JUDGE MARK COVEN, First Justice of Quincy District Court, presents the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award to former Attorney General Frank Bellotti.

Frank Bellotti Honored For Social Justice Work

Awards Presented At Quincy District Court Law Day Ceremonies

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The 2007 Law Day at Quincy District Court served as somewhat of a homecoming last week for the day's keynote speaker, Attorney General Martha Coakley, and for Quincy's Frank Bellotti, a former attorney general and lieutenant governor, honored for his lifetime dedication to social justice.

For Coakley, district courts are the foundation of the country's legal system, and the place where her own law career began as did her love of law.

Bellotti actually began his legal career in the 1950's in Quincy's old district courthouse on Coddington Street.

Last week, Bellotti not only received the prestigious Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award at the ceremonies but, also, his 84th birthday cake from his district courthouse friends.

CHIEF JUSTICE of the District Courts, Linda Connolly opened the 2007 Law Day session at Quincy District Court.

"Coming over here 30 years, one of the perks of the job was to watch him try a case," Assistant Clerk Magistrate Robert Bloom said of Bellotti's reputation as a defense attorney.

Bloom was master of ceremony at the 49th Annual Law Day, which drew some 150 persons to the courthouse.

Mayor William Phelan

welcomed the participants, as did Phyllis Field, President of the Quincy Bar Association. Judge Linda M. Connolly officially, opened the session.

Connolly, Chief Justice of the District Courts, noted that some 62 district courts are in session every day in the state and, annually, adjudicate some 788,000 cases involving 1.5 million people. Both Bellotti and Coakley spoke of the beauty of the American legal system which, they believe, begins at the district court level.

"Every single day in courts like this, the Constitution works," Coakley said. She then described America's historic experiment in seeking justice for all.

"It was a huge experiment," Coakley said, adding that, even though justice is served through the country's court system, "It's not perfect."

The justice system is evolving and, sometimes, there are detours, said Coakley. She then observed that the infamous Dred Scott Decision, 150 years ago, contrasts with the United States' Supreme Court decision to require legal counsel for all defendants, regardless of the ability to pay.

As for the attorney general's office, Coakley said, "We wear two hats." On the one hand, her office focuses on enforcement and on the other hand, prevention.

Coakley acknowledged that the attorney general's work is best known for enforcement, but said that prevention is equally important. As an example, Coakley cited her staff's current effort in regulating insurance rates which "doesn't seem all that sexy, but it's so important."

Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin and Judge Mark S. Coven, presiding justice, introduced Bellotti who was selected for this year's Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award which honors the late spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue.

Coven said that Bellotti was chosen because he "represents what Rabbi Mann stood for. He gave voice to people who have no power."

Coven credited Bellotti with instituting the state's first effective consumer protection laws in the 1970's. Such laws were first "written and promulgated by Frank Bellotti and no one else," Judge Coven said, referring to Bellotti's legal initiatives on protecting consumers buying cars or

Highpoint Developers Seek 4-Year Extension

The developers of Highpoint, The Congress Group, want four more years to finish their 1000 plus units on Quarry Street.

The Congress Group has already completed nearly 500 apartments and condominiums in five buildings on the site at the top of Quarry Street. They are halfway to their goal.

However, times have changed since construction began and the market right now is not the best for the new development.

Now, developer Dean Stratouly said they must stop construction for a while. They need more time because current market conditions make completing the project impractical at this time.

According to a letter dated April 24, Stratouly claims his firm, The Congress Group, has a right to a four-year extension under the terms of the city's 1999 Special Permit.

The terms of the Special Permit require that all exterior construction on Highpoint be completed within six years of "the commencement of construction, subject to extensions...."

However, the permit does allow an extension of the building period if market conditions change, making development impractical. The language does not specify the length of the extension.

In addition, the wording of the Special Permit does not specify how or who would issue an extension. In fact, Stratouly believes that he does not have to ask for the extension.

"Under the terms of the Special Permit, the Developer is entitled to the claimed extension," writes Stratouly, repeating several times throughout his letter that the extension is a matter of his right under the Special Permit.

Stratouly asked the City Council for a formal written confirmation of the extension in his April letter. He also stated that he does not believe that he must request the extension, as it is part of the Special Permit.

At Monday's meeting, City Clerk Joseph Shea read Stratouly's letter to the City Council. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond recused himself and left the City Council Chambers.

Ward 2 Councillor Jay Davis and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin both asked council members to table any action on the letter until the city solicitor can issue an opinion on the request.

Davis and Coughlin rejected attempts to ask Stratouly to direct the letter to the City Council, acting as Special Permitting Authority. Both believed any action on the request could trigger a requirement that the Council act on a specific timetable.

Councillors will request additional information from the City Solicitor's office.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 10, 1877, President Rutherford B. Hayes has the White House's first telephone installed in the mansion's telegraph room. President Hayes embraced the new technology, though he rarely received phone calls. The White House phone number was "1."

• On May 12, 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt's trip to San Francisco is captured on moving-picture film, making him the first president to have an official activity recorded in that medium. The film showed Roosevelt riding in a carriage and escorted by the Ninth U.S. Cavalry Regiment, which was unusual for the time because it was an all-black company.

• On May 9, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson issues a presidential proclamation that officially establishes the first national Mother's Day holiday to celebrate America's mothers. The idea for a "Mother's Day" is credited by some to Julia Ward Howe (1827) and by others to Anna Jarvis (1907), who both suggested a holiday dedicated to a day of peace.

• On May 8, 1933, the first police radio system, connecting headquarters to patrol cars and patrol cars to one another, is installed in Eastchester Township, N.Y. The system consisted of one transmitter of 20 watts for the headquarters and two transmitters of 4.5 volts each for the two patrol cars.

• On May 7, 1947, Kraft Television Theater debuts on NBC with a play called "Double Doors." The show ran for 11 years. Kraft had launched Kraft Music Hall in 1933 as part of a promotional push to introduce its new salad dressing, Miracle Whip.

• On May 13, 1956, Gene Autry's musical variety show, "Gene Autry's Melody Ranch," airs its final broadcast after 16 years. The weekly radio show featured 10- to 15-minute skits about cowboys and rustlers, along with musical numbers by Autry, "America's singing cowboy."

• On May 11, 1976, long-running TV medical drama "Marcus Welby, M.D." airs its last episode. The show, which premiered in 1969, was ABC's first No. 1-rated series.

'The Meanest Mother' Returns

"The Meanest Mother" is still remembered with fondness.

She first appeared here 36 years ago as a Mother's Day tribute in 1971.

For many readers, it brought back fond memories of their own mother.

Don't know where the article came from. And, as far as we know, the writer remains anonymous.

From time to time we have requests to reprint it.

But as you read it, you realize that times and values have changed somewhat since 1971.

The article seemed most appropriate back then. But today, some readers, might take issue with part of it as child abuse.

We thought back then, it was a tribute to all the "mean mothers" everywhere—mothers who raised their children strictly, but with love and care. Mothers who took the time to guide their children through those early years when they needed guidance. Someone who wanted to know where their children were, who they were with and what they were doing. Mothers who were always there for them.

We still think it is appropriate.

See what you think.

It goes like this:

"I had the meanest mother in the whole world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs and toast. While others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich. As you guessed, my supper was different from the other kids, too.

But, at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing.

She insisted that if we'd be gone one hour that we be one hour or less—not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit it, but she actually struck us. Not once but each time we did as we pleased. Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed? Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come. We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends. So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake at nights thinking of mean things for us to do.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of his country.

And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor to take part in a riot, and a million and one things that our friends did. She forced us to grow into God fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because, you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the whole world."

And, just let me add:

Happy Mother's Day, all you "mean" mothers.

NICK PULEO has stepped down as president of the Ward 5 Community Association because of his candidacy for the school committee.

His reason, he notes, is to keep the association non-political—especially in a city election year.

He says he is following in the steps of past presidents Doug Gutro when he was campaigning for the Ward 5 city council seat and Steve Golden when he ran for the school committee.

Puleo, who announced his candidacy for the school committee before Linda Stice announced she would not seek re-election isn't doing any coasting now that there's an open seat.

"I am running like I am still up against three incumbents," he says.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930s view of Quincy's first off-street parking lot that later became known as Parkingway. This view is looking north from Hancock Court. In the distance on the right can be seen the new Granite Trust Co. building and the belfry of the First Parish Church. Known as the James Edwards Meadow after its 19th century owner this land was originally a swamp bisected by the Town Brook. In the 1840s, the railroad was built through it. The old raised roadbed can be seen in the left center of the picture. In 1929 the Grossman Company purchased the land from the Edwards estate. They filled the swamp and built the road shown here from Hancock Court to Cliveden Street. They allowed free parking for up to 500 cars. In 1931, the city leased the parking lot from the Grossman's Hia Pearl Corporation and then in 1939 purchased it along with a few small contiguous lots. After several years of litigation with Hia Pearl, the city-owned Parkingway was dedicated by Mayor Charles A. Ross in December 1949. Today, the railroad tracks are depressed as they run through here and parking garages pretty much dominate this view. The new Concourse is slated to run across just beyond the two signs. Found City Council Hearing An Embarrassment

After viewing the most recent Quincy City Council hearing, chaired by Councillor Jay Davis, at which Chief of Police Robert Crowley and the President of the Quincy Police Patrolman's Union, Officer Bruce Tait appeared, I am compelled to write and express that it was actually embarrassing and painful to watch those proceedings.

It is very clear that there are strong feelings on both sides. Councillor Davis and Councillor Keenan are apparently aligned with management and Chief Crowley, and Councillor Raymondi seems to support Officer Tait and organized labor. It is equally clear that Councillor Keenan and Councillor Davis take great offense at some of the language appearing on the Union's Web site. And based on Councillor Keenan's lengthy analysis I can certainly see why both are offended.

However, I am absolutely astounded that Councillor

Keenan believed it would be useful to painfully belabor and define the offensive term "rumpswab" within the context of a City Council hearing. The discussion of the term was as offensive as the term itself. Can you imagine what the minutes of the Council hearing are going to look like? As a tax-paying citizen it was embarrassing to listen to Councillor Keenan parse words with Officer Tait concerning that admittedly vulgar term's meaning. It did nothing except escalate the already volatile situation. I find it unbelievable that Councillor Keenan was genuinely unclear on the term's meaning and would really like to know what he hoped to accomplish by deconstructing the term in public and on the record?

No one can claim the moral high ground here. There are valid points on both sides and for the record I agree with Councillor Keenan and Councillor

Davis that resorting to name calling is an ineffective way to resolve differences. However, it is a tact that is not unusual for unions to employ. Like it or not it is their right to do that and no amount of self-righteous indignation will obviate their right to continue with such a course of action. Union tactics can be a lot more brutal than name-calling and I am surprised that Councillor Davis and Councillor Keenan reacted so emotionally and unprofessionally to words published on a union's Web site. Is the Council surprised that dealing with a union can be frustrating? Is our Council really that inexperienced? Thicker skins and more dignified comportment on the part of our City Council are clearly in order. Now the Council may rely the same can be said of the Union except that the taxpayers did not elect the Union. We elected the Council. I can't believe I am typing these words to a City

Councillor but, Councillor Keenan, asking someone to define the term "rumpswab" in a City Council hearing, under any circumstances, is inappropriate and accomplishes absolutely nothing. It embarrassed not just Councillor Keenan but the whole City Council and all of Councillor Kennan's constituents and just made a bad situation worse.

As a final note, Chief Crowley's hands are not clean in this matter. He would be a much better leader and could set a good example of acceptable professional behavior if he at least attempted to hide his disdain and contempt for Councillor Raymondi by responding to his inquiries in a polite and professional manner rather than the belligerent and incredibly rude tone he has chosen to adopt. The whole proceeding was an embarrassment to the City Council and the citizens of Quincy.

Opposes Vote On Same-Sex Marriage

Freedom is difficult; tyranny is easy.

Voting is a privilege that must be used wisely.

Inappropriate voting, like those on the rights of a minority, mask tyranny. The argument that all questions must be put to a vote in a true democracy is specious. The inherent worth of each and every citizen must be paramount for a democracy to thrive. Putting same-sex marriage to a popular vote attacks the inherent self-worth of each and every gay citizen. In addition, this vote will set a precedent that puts anyone in any minority group at risk.

Please contact Senator Morrissey, Representative Tobin, and Representative

Ayers and ask them not to permit a vote on minority rights. Representative Mariano already understands this civil rights battle so please contact him to thank him for standing up for General Dynamics Denies Shift To R.I.

By FRANK McCAULEY

A spokesman for General Dynamics squelched rumors that the company is planning to move its Quincy operations to the old Quonset Point Naval Air Station, which was recently decommissioned in Rhode Island.

General Dynamics Chairman David S. Lewis told the annual meeting that the company has been working with the state of Rhode Island to lease portions of the base "for use as a production support facility" for the Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn.

"It has absolutely nothing to do with us," said a spokesman for the Quincy Division.

Meanwhile, the strike of production workers at the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard moved into its eighth week. Mayor Walter J. Hannon notified the company that only one Quincy police officer per shift per officer will be assigned to the shipyard for the duration of the strike.

COMMUNITY COOPERATIVE FIGHTS RISING FOOD COSTS

While the price of food continues to skyrocket in 1974, there is an organization in Quincy, which provides much needed relief to the consumer.

Formed in the Spring of 1973, The Quincy Community Food Corp will celebrate its first year of operation this summer and the venture has proven quite successful thus far.

Operating out of the Southwest Community Center in West Quincy, the Cooperative comprises an average of 35 households per week and is always seeking new members. The membership fee is $1 per household and regardless of income or geographical location the Coop is open to everyone.

4 FIREFIGHTERS HONORED FOR RESCUE

Four Quincy firefighters were honored at the 88th annual Fireman's Ball for their acts of heroism. They are Richard Salvaggio, Richard Cooke, Anthony Innello and John Demaggio. They were cited for their rescue of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hagen of 122 Piermont St., who were overcome with smoke shortly after 2 a.m. on June 10, 1973 when fire swept their home.

Francis Hartel, Michael Maxey Greek Scholars At BC High

Francis Hartel and Michael Maxey of Quincy, seniors at Boston College High School, recently gave stellar performances in successfully translating and answering questions about Homer's Odyssey at Loyola Hall on the Dorchester campus.

Along with 11 other senior classmates, Hartel and Maxey are members of BC High's prestigious Homeric Academy, an Advanced Placement course offered to students who have successfully completed three years of Classical Greek.

The 13 students, under the guidance of Maureen Toner, devoted themselves to an intensive reading of the Odyssey and prepared all year for the public oral examination, an academic exercise that BC High has been offering for more than 40 years.

At the defense, which is regarded as a final examination, Dr. Jacqueline Carlon, PhD from the Department of Beth Prindle, lead curator of the recent John Adams Unbound exhibit at the Boston Public Library, will be the guest speaker Thursday, May 17, at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society's annual meeting at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

The occasion is the annual meeting of the Quincy Historical Society at which the public is welcome and for which there is no charge.

Prindle is also manager of the John Adams Library Project, a multi-year project for the preservation, electronic cataloging, digitalizing and exhibition of the 3,500 volume John Adams Library, which has been at the BPL since 1893.

The vast majority of the books were purchased and used by the second president during his lifetime. He chose the books himself and made extensive notes and comments in their margins, leaving a fascinating record of his life and thought.

The Library Project is designed to save a national treasure, create the first adequate and complete catalogue and record of the books and Adams' commentaries, and make the library accessible to the public.

In her illustrated talk, Prindle will discuss the character and thought of John Adams as revealed through the library, the history of the library from Adams' time to the present and the challenges and surprises presented by the Library Project.

She will be speaking at the Adams Academy in a room that once housed the John Adams Library.

Early Morning Mosquito Spraying To Begin May 29

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project will begin early morning ultra low volume (ULV) aerosol applications on or about Tuesday, May 29, weather permitting, and continue through Sept. 30.

The adulticide aerosol Anvil will be applied in ULV sprayers at a rate of about one half ounce per acre of finished spray Monday through Friday from 2 to 6:30 a.m., each day.

This program is a continuation of the procedure which has been used in past years.

Any resident who wishes to know when the spray program may be conducted in his or her area should visit the Project website at <http://www.massnrc.org/nmcnp> or contact the Quincy Board of Health.

Current early morning aerosol application schedules and maps will be available to residents who click on <http://massnrc.org/nmcnp/spraysch.htm> and then click on Quincy.

The ULV map and/or listing of the streets to be sprayed will be posted on or about 3:30 p.m. the day before the scheduled application day.

Residents also may contact the Project's main phone line at 781-762-3681 after 3:30 p.m. the day before the scheduled treatment to hear a recorded message identifying the areas to be treated.

In order to have your property excluded from spraying, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at 781-762-3681.

Kelly Fundraiser Tonight At QYC

Friends of Ward 2 City Councillor Leo Kelly will hold a fundraiser tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St., Houghs Neck,

The suggested donation is $20 with a senior special of $15.

Each paid admission will have a chance to win a "clam bucket" and six lobsters donated by Capt. Steve Holler of the fishing vessel November Gale.

Robert Bloom To Be Honored For Long Court Service

Assistant Clerk-Magistrate Robert Bloom, a fixture at the Quincy District Court for more than 30 years, will be honored with the Lifetime Person of the Year Award tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at a dinner in the Dedham Hilton Hotel.

The award is given by the Bar Association of Norfolk County in recognition of his "wisdom, wit and judgement" shown in carrying out his duties in virtually every clerk's position at the court and as an active citizen in the town of Braintree.

The featured speaker will be Lawrence O'Donnell Jr., an Emmy-winning executive producer of NBC's "The West Wing," whose episode on the death penalty won the 2000 Humanitas Prize for writing that "communicated those values which most enrich the human person."

He is also MSNBC's senior political analyst and a panelist on "The McLaughlin Group," and has been chief of staff to the U. S. Senate Committees on Finance and Environment and Public Works.

Guest of Honor Bloom had been in private practice in Cambridge and Boston from 1963 to 1973 when he was tapped by the late Dennis Ryan, then clerk-magistrate in Quincy District Court, for appointment as an assistant court clerk.

He was named first assistant by Clerk-Magistrate Arthur Tobin in 1992 and for 15 years has decided most of the criminal complaint applications and motor vehicle civil infractions.

In addition to his court career, Bloom has been an elected town meeting member in Braintree, a member of the School Committee, including a term as chairman in 1981-82 and an appointed member of the Board of Zoning Appeals.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, have two daughters: Stacey, a lawyer with Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehan in Quincy, and Susanne, a registered nurse at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

OBITUARY

Lilly E. Allen, 91 Homemaker

A funeral service for Lilly E. (Wright) Allen, 91, of Quincy, a homemaker, was held May 10 at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Mrs. Allen died May 4 at John Scott Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Braintree.

Born in Boston, she was raised in the Fields Corner neighborhood of Dorchester. She had lived in Quincy for 65 years.

Mrs. Allen enjoyed the beach, especially Orchard Beach and Nickerson Beach in Squantum. She also enjoyed swimming. She once swam from Nickerson Beach to Dorchester Yacht Club.

Mrs. Allen also enjoyed traveling, drawing with pencil and chalk, knitting afghans and sweaters, and baking cookies.

She liked rock music and was a fan of Jimmy Buffett, Eric Clapton and the Fabulous Thunderbirds.

LILLY E. ALLEN

She was an avid reader, bird watcher, animal lover and gardener.

Wife of the late Ramsey Allen, she is survived by two sons, Jack Allen and Bill Allen, both of Quincy; a daughter, Janet Sisson of West Barnstable; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Burial will be a later date. Memorial donations may be made to the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169 or a hospice of choice.

Board Selects Pageant Field Track

proposed location were Byrant Carter, Josephine Shea and Jack Nigro. Connie Driscoll, board chairman, did not vote.

The original 1/5-mile track at the Stadium was removed to make way for the new synthetic all-purpose turf facility. A true 1/4-mile track could not fit within the footprint of the stadium without significant wetlands permitting problems.

Other sites that were considered were the DPW facility, Faxon Field, Faxon Park, Squantum Point Park, and Cavanaugh Stadium.

The DPW facility, Phelan said, would have entered the City into a more difficult siting conundrum relative to the home of one of the City's largest departments, which operates trucks and heavy machinery around the clock. Wetlands and environmental concerns were also raised for this location.

A track at Faxon Park, he said, would have required the removal of a significant number of stately oak trees, potentially required blasting to deal with the rock and ledge on Penn's Hill, and would have been located in a remote portion of the city.

The Faxon Field site was deemed too narrow and the design would have required significant investment in pilings to avoid settling along the wetlands. The additional site work could have doubled the cost of the project. This site would not have space for field events. It is also the proposed staging area for construction of a new Quincy High School and that would have put the project off for a number of years.

Cavanaugh Stadium was deemed too small for a 1/4-mile track with no space for field events. Parking and neighborhood impacts were also a major detriment to siting a track here. Squantum Point Park was discussed but discounted because it is not owned by the City and is located remotely in the far northern end of the city.

"I look forward to working with the Board and the track community to develop a design that works for all parties," said Mark Jaehnig, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "The Mayor has given us the resources to get the job done and I look forward to building a facility that our community will truly be proud of."

Man Still Sought In Attack On Woman

Police are chasing down meager clues in their search for a "very skinny," goateed, dark-skinned man in his middle or late 20s who raped an 87-year-old woman inside her apartment on School Street, Quincy Cent.

The woman was treated and released from Quincy Medical Center and is "doing as well as can be expected after such an ordeal," said Detective Lt. Patrick Glynn.

He said there was nothing new in the investigation of the rape, which occurred shortly before 8 p.m. Thursday night, but police were gradually collecting enough clues to put out a composite drawing of the rapist.

The man broke into the apartment, where the elderly woman lived alone, through a sliding glass door, restrained the woman in handcuffs and attacked her before fleeing.

She described him as about six feet tall, dark-skinned with short, curly black hair and a goatee. He wore a maroon jacket, blue trousers, black shoes and a white T-shirt.

Investigators distributed a flyer asking anyone with information to call them at 617-745-5750.

Foot Screening For Seniors

Phelan Proposes $250.8 Million Budget

of Quincy's schools continue to improve with all-day kindergarten, early intervention literacy programs, technology upgrades, and smaller class sizes."

In addition, the mayor's budget includes funds to continue the city's pavement management plan, as well as an $150,000 appropriation to plant 500 new trees in the neighborhoods.

A 2008 budget must now be approved by the City Council by June 30th. The Council's Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan has scheduled five hearings beginning May 15.

The city's five-year capital improvement program is funded separately through bonds. On Monday, the City Council voted to refer a $3 million capital improvement bond request for 2008 to the Council's Finance Committee. A separate $32.5 million energy savings program approved Monday will also be funded by bonds.

Under the budget plan, the city's tax levy would increase by 2.5% or $3,876,394 to $155,055,727.

Even with that increase, Phelan said the city's Excess Levy Capacity "remains at a historically high level. This budget will allow us to remain at least $4.5 million below our levy limit."

State law mandates the formula for the levy limit or levy capacity which is the total amount a municipality can increase its property tax without seeking voter approval.

According to the mayor's budget projections, revenues from other sources, such as state aid, new growth and local receipts, are estimated at $100,254,358.

The tax levy accounts for 60% or $155 million of the city's estimated 2008 revenues with state aid at $38 million or 15% and local receipts at $23.3 million or 9%. New Growth is expected to be nearly level at one percent or $3 million.

In addition, Phelan said the budget protects such programs as the city's curbside waste collections and transportation of the elderly to doctor's offices.

"Because of our collective commitment, we are a clean, safe city with great schools and great parks," Phelan said, adding, "We are truly a city that people want to live in, and raise a family."

Last year's, the 2007 budget was approved at $236,960,139. That figure is $13 million dollars less than the current request. However, as of May 9, the city's actual budget line which includes supplemental appropriations was $239,201,110.

"We continue to estimate revenues conservatively," Phelan told councillors Monday, noting that projections are based on actual fiscal year 2006 receipts.

According to the mayor's budget data, the city's fixed costs have increased from $105,458,675 to $111,910,114 in the past year. This figure includes employee benefits (39%), Pension contributions (16%), MWRA assessment (25%), and waste collection (6%).

The City Council's Finance Committee will discuss the 2008 budget on Tuesdays, May 15, May 22, and May 29 and on Wednesday, June 6 and Wednesday, June 13.

Cancer Society Fundraiser In Memory Of Petar Pepdjonovic

A fundraiser for the American Cancer Society in honor of the late Petar Pepdjonovic, of Quincy will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at The Mystic Lounge, 536 Washington St., Quincy Point.

A native of Yugoslavia, Petar, with his wife Prena, and four children, George, Vera, Steve and Tom moved to Quincy in 1980. He worked as a bartender at Anthony's Pier 4 for 25 years before leaving to begin the family business with his sons. He was owner of The Mystic Lounge and former Atlantic Restaurant.

Last fall, Petar's life was cut short when he was diagnosed with Glioblastoma Multiforme, an aggressive form of a brain tumor. Although there are treatments for some forms of the cancer, his was not one.

Raffle tickets are being sold to raise money to help find a cure for this form of cancer. Prizes include a 37-inch flat panel LCD TV, Red Sox tickets, and more. There is no cover charge. DJ Mike Falco will entertain and light refreshments will be served.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, April 29, at approximately 1:10 A.M., Officers Ronald McKim, Dan Parisi and Paul Holland were dispatched to President's Lane for a report of "someone smashing their way into the apartment building." Sergeant Patrick Buonaugurio also responded. Officer McKim was the first to arrive and immediately scanned the area. Near the entrance, he observed that a large cement urn used to hold plants was tipped over and one of the large glass plate windows was broken.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer McKim noted that the window had been broken inward since the glass had fallen inside the building. The window was adjacent to the front door. Officer McKim then opened the door by reaching in where the window was and unlocking the door. Officer Parisi arrived on scene and assisted in conducting a systematic sweep of the multi-story building. Officer Holland and Sergeant Buonaugurio initially took up surveillance posts outside of the building to watch for exiting suspects. One of the residents identified themselves as the caller and stated that he first heard someone banging on the front door and moments later heard the sound of glass shattering. He added that immediately afterward he heard screaming and the sound of an object crashing on the floor above him.

Officers Holland and McKim could hear some shouting and as they responded to the third floor, they heard Officer Parisi radio to them to go to his location on the third floor.

There they found Officer Parisi with an angry, intoxicated male suspect in handcuffs. Officer Parisi advised the other Officers that he heard yelling, swearing and the sound of glass breaking inside the apartment. He found that the door was ajar, with the deadbolt preventing the door from shutting. Officer Parisi had the other Officers search the apartment because there was so much shouting and noise it was possible that someone else was in there too. After the search, it was determined that the suspect was alone!

The suspect said that the apartment was his friend's, but he did not have any keys. As the Officers were questioning the suspect, the renter of the apartment arrived home. He said that he knew the suspect and was with him earlier in the evening. He said that they left together when the renter drove his girlfriend home and the suspect went to a local bar. The renter, upon seeing the damage to his property, stated that he did not give keys or permission for the suspect to be in his apartment. Sergeant Buonaugurio asked the suspect why he smashed the front window and the suspect responded, "I'm sorry." When asked why he was trying to get into the building, the suspect said, "I got nothing more to say." The caller never saw who broke the front window, but based on the above information, the suspect, a 21-year-old Weymouth resident, was arrested and charged with "Breaking and Entering in the Nighttime with Intent to Commit a Felony." Since the suspect was the only person around at the time of the break and by his own admission did not have keys to the apartment or the front door, he was also charged with "Wanton and Malicious Destruction of Real Property over $250.00" (felony). Nice Work!

One question you may ask yourself is, "Did the suspect turn the deadbolt so that the door would not shut tight, then be the last one out of the apartment, so that he could go back into the apartment after the renter/victim left?" This was not the case. It turns out that the renter/victim had a tiff with his girlfriend and wanted to get her to her home as soon as possible. He couldn't find his keys, so he slid the deadbolt and left the door ajar so he could get back in!

Telemarketers seeking donations for Police, Fire and Veteran's Groups

By PATRICK SULLIVAN
Quincy Police Department Intern
Emmanuel College

You've probably received them in the mail, or even by a call on the telephone during dinner. You might have even listened to their whole spiel and either hung up or been convinced to contribute.

I'm talking about solicitations of charity organizations. More specifically, I am referring to organizations that use the words "police", "fire", and "veterans" in their titles. By doing this, their goal is to make you feel more inclined or obligated to donate.

Now don't get me wrong - there are plenty of charitable organizations that use their donations for their specific purposes in which they state. Sadly, there are also the ones who do not. After receiving different solicitation letters from concerned residents of Quincy.

Crime Prevention Lieutenant Dan Minton put me on assignment to further investigate some of these charities.

The organization that I started to research was the NADPO (National Association of Disabled Police Officers).

After some investigation and "googleing", I discovered that NADPO is one of about a half dozen organizations that are operated by a larger group called, "Tomorrow's Abundance." Their website and others indicate that they work out of Washington State. The Better Business Bureau's "Wise Giving Alliance" is an organization that reports on national soliciting/charitable organizations that are the subject of donor inquiries.

Reports on their website state that with requests in the past year, Tomorrow's Abundance "either has not responded to BBB Alliance requests for information, or has declined to be evaluated in relation to the Alliance's Standards for Charity Accountability. Without their compliance, the BBB Alliance believes that this lack of cooperation may demonstrate a lack of commitment to transparency and accountability."

If they had nothing to hide and claim to be an honest and charitable organization, why wouldn't they want to participate and give themselves a good name? In addition to the BBB Alliance information found online, Forbes.com also provides similar reports about Tomorrow's Abundance saying the organization has failed to provide information on finances, programs and governance.

Matthew Kaufman of the Hartford Courant reported in an article on Nov. 10th, 2005, that Robert M. Friend and his wife ran the Tomorrow's Abundance organization for three years. At the end of their last year, Friend and his wife raised approximately $450,000, of which approximately 94% of the monies went to fundraising, administrative expenses, and salaries for the couple. With a little math, that would leave a minuscule 6% to all the different charities within the Tomorrow's Abundance organization. Six percent of donor's money went to the disabled police officers, children with cancer, and the blind. This is certainly disturbing for the giver who has the best intentions.

This has been just one example of a charitable organization that doesn't seem to live up to their word. There are plenty of honest organizations that will send out mail to your house, or call you during evening hours.

Yet, there are the ones like Tomorrow's Abundance that run the NADPO that fly under the radar. If you are a concerned citizen, don't be afraid to do a little research on the solicitations that you receive, so that you know exactly what your money is being used for. If you are so inclined to donate to an organization, try donating locally to a credible organization.

One reason to donate locally is that the monies will be used directly for your community and you might have a say to exactly what you want your donation used for.

For more information, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit. Thanks to our interns, Patrick Sullivan, who attends Emmanuel College and wrote this article, and to James Zapata, who attends UMASS Boston.

Six Invited To Preview

Quincy Veterans Who Lived It Give Thumbs Up To 'The War'

By TOM HENSHAW

Award-winning filmmaker Ken Burns' latest documentary, entitled simply "The War," will not be shown on PBS until September but already it has drawn rave reviews from its most critical reviewers.

Six World War II combat veterans from Quincy were among 450 people invited to preview a one-hour clip from the 14 1/2-hour epic at the Coolidge Corner Theatre in Brookline and they pronounced it anywhere from "excellent" to "terrific."

"I thought it was excellent," said Earl Kuja, a member of the 10th Army's 25th Division, who survived the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and later took part in the Pacific battles of Saipan and Tinian.

"I enjoyed every bit of it and so did the guy who was sitting next to me. This was the first of 14 parts and I intend to watch every one in September."

The entire documentary from the attack on Pearl Harbor to the surrender on the deck of the USS Missouri is scheduled to be shown on Boston's WGBH-TV Channel 2 starting Sunday, Sept. 23, and continuing for two weeks.

"I thought it was terrific," said John Laukkanen, a Marine Corps veteran of the bloody Okinawa campaign. "Some parts of it were gruesome but it was true to the war. It was a darned good bit of history.

"I'm looking forward to seeing the rest of it in September."

Eschewing politicians and generals, Burns' documentary views World War II through eyewitness accounts of citizens and soldiers from Waterbury, Conn.; Mobile, Ala.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Luverne, Minn.

Also missing from "The War," in the view of the Quincy veterans, is any attempt to politicize its message at a time when many people can't look at a Stop sign without suspecting a plot.

"There were no political overtones," said Peter Gacicia, a Navy veteran who served in both the Pacific and Atlantic as a signalman and also as an engineer who helped build the portable harbors, or mulberries, that expedited supplies to Omaha Beach on D-Day.

"He (Burns) brought the message across like he did in 'The Civil War.' He knew what he was talking about. I'm certainly going to try to see it all in September."

Burns, already renowned for his PBS documentaries "The Civil War," "Jazz" and "Baseball," attended the special screening in Coolidge Corner with the veterans himself and fielded their questions after the showing.

Robert Carella, who served aboard the heavy cruiser USS Baltimore and shot down Japanese kamikaze suicide planes, called the picture "great."

"I liked the whole idea," he said. "It got all the people talking about their experiences. I'll watch the rest of it in September."

Carella said he saw no political bias in the production although one of the other viewers who did questioned Burns about it after the showing.

Lennie Morris, who landed on Omaha Beach with the Army's legendary Devil's Brigade on D-Day, June 6, 1944, and fought through the Battle of the Bulge in December, called the film "terrific."

"We took no prisoners (in the Bulge) since this war was one of totality," he said. "Our unit never abided by the rules of the Geneva Convention."

"I asked him (Burns) if he ever met any veteran from my brigade and surprisingly he said he did and I asked him what he said and Ken Burns stated, 'The same thing you just told me.'"

Morris said some segments of the film, "including those from the concentration camps, left the audience gasping. I, as an American soldier, was in four of them. Those sights never leave you."

Nevertheless, he added,

WEARY MARINES trudge down a road on the Pacific island of Guadalcanal in "The War," a made-for-TV documentary by Ken Burns that is scheduled to be shown on WGBH-TV Channel 2 starting Sunday, Sept. 23, and running for two weeks.

"I'm looking forward to seeing the whole thing when it airs in September."

The sixth Quincy veteran, Anthony Pagnano, who served in the famed 101st Airborne Division, landing behind German lines at 2:30 a.m. on D-Day to help clear the way for the Omaha Beach landing, was not available for comment on the picture.

The Quincy veterans were invited to the preview by Jennifer Logue, also of Quincy, the publicist for Channel 2. They were transported to the showing via van by the Quincy Elder Services Department.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC COMMUNITY WALKING TOGETHER IN FAITH, WORSHIP, EDUCATION, AND SERVICE

No Tuition Increase For Quincy College Students

For the second year in a row, the cost of tuition at Quincy College will remain the same.

The Board of Governors voted unanimously not to raise tuition for students in the Liberal Arts and Sciences, Computer and Business programs, the basic curricula at the college.

The tuition remains at $149 per credit course or $1,788 for a full time student for one semester.

"The goal is to retain students and garner new students by providing a cost-effective way to allow access to education," said President Sue Harris.

"We want as many of our decisions as possible to reflect what we have included in our mission statement."

The college's stated mission is to make education accessible and affordable for the current and prospective students in these programs.

The college is able to hold the tuition line despite bringing on new faculty, increasing classroom space and plans to relocate its oldest classroom facility, Coddington Hall.

Quincy College recently opened a state-of-the-art facility in Plymouth.

The administration also decided to go from a flat fee to a per credit cost of Allied Health programs to facilitate strategic and financial planning and simplify cost structures.

According to the Digest for Education Statistics, the national average of tuition increases at all colleges is generally between 6 and 9 percent.

Puleo Kicks Off School Committee Campaign

and I, want to ensure Quincy's schools offer hope for our children in the future."

Of the many points put forward, Puleo stressed providing children with an education worthy of the 21st century. He said that schools were on the right track, but that more could be invested to improve the curriculum and resources.

Nick Puleo, candidate for Quincy School Committee, officially kicked-off his campaign last Wednesday night in front of what was described as a full house at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Stressing the importance of responsible, honest budgeting for Quincy's public schools, Puleo committed to fully-funding all programs within the school system. He also emphasized the role all Quincy residents play in education.

"Schools are a community issue, and we all have a stake in them," he said. "Some people may want to provide their children who are in the school system now with the best education they can get. Some people may want to preserve a family legacy. Others, like my wife

He noted the importance of computer skills, saying that companies provide a computer at every desk. He also talked about expanded learning time.

"We can improve on the basics," he said. "And we can do this without sacrificing things like music, art, sports, and especially languages."

Puleo also made note of the teachers who were protesting Wednesday across town at City Hall. He said that teachers, as public servants, accept lower pay in return for better benefits. Citing the example of his own teachers and retired neighbors, Puleo came out strong against proposed pay cuts.

"We need to support our teachers," he said. "Now more than ever they are facing increasing pressure. We made them a promise, and we need to honor it."

For those who were not able to attend, a video of the entire speech, along with photos from the event, are available at www.NickPuleo.com.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

CHILDHOOD OBESITY AND FOOT PAIN

Experts are learning more and more about the cycle between childhood obesity and foot pain. Overweight children often have foot pain that prevents them from exercising. The extra weight puts more pressure on the feet, which can lead to a variety of problems. Meanwhile, lack of exercise contributes to further weight gain. As an added complication, the heel plate in the foot is not fully developed until a child is approximately 14 years old. Overweight children are more prone to a condition that inflames the growth plate and makes the foot hurt even more. A podiatrist can treat overweight children's foot problems with custom orthotics (inserts that fit into a person's shoe) or prescribe physical therapy.

We believe one of the most important elements of healthcare we can provide you with is education. We bring you these columns in order to show you how the many benefits of podiatric medicine can help keep all the members of your family walking, running, living in comfort. And since taking care of the feet can't begin too early, you'll be glad to know there is a footcare specialist in Randolph who can help you if there seems to be a problem with your child's feet. We're located at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, with office hours also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building, Suite 221. Call 781-986-3668 for an appointment. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

Repairs Begin At Fore River Clubhouse

Repairs are underway at the Fore River Clubhouse on Nevada Road in Quincy Point.

The floor is currently being rebuilt and the heating and air conditioning system will be replaced later this summer. The work is being performed as part of Mayor Phelan's "Neighborhoods First!" initiative.

"We understand how important this facility is to the Quincy Point community and to the city as a whole," said Phelan. "We hope to continue the Clubhouse's tradition as a community gathering place for neighborhood events, elderly programs, and much more. We will continue to invest in the upgrade of this important community asset."

The floor repairs are being performed under the first phase of the City's Capital Improvement Plan (C.I.P.) proposed by Mayor Phelan last year.

The heating and air conditioning needs of the clubhouse are being targeted as part of the city's energy management program. The energy program aims to improve efficiency at all public buildings. That work will be completed this summer.

Additional repairs to the rest room facilities were proposed by Mayor Phelan in the next phase of the Capital Improvement Plan presented to the City Council on Monday evening.

Phelan proposed a series of additional neighborhood improvement projects to the City Council at Monday's meeting.

"The Quincy Point neighborhood was unified in their support for improving the Fore River Clubhouse," said Phelan. "We have heard their voice and we are responding to their needs. This project is a good example of how your government can work with your community to improve your neighborhood."

Win the Battle Against Soap Scum

Q. How can I remove soap scum from the shower door? Thank you.
—Roslyn M., via e-mail

A. Cleaning soap scum from glass shower doors seems like an easy chore, but it rarely is. These deposits from soap and minerals in the shower water build up gradually; one day the shower door is clean, and then, the next time you notice the door, it's because it's no longer clear.

Scrubbing it away can be problematic. There's a risk of scratching the glass if you use the wrong cleaning materials. Sometimes over-the-counter cleaners work well, and sometimes they don't. Using homemade cleaners is also hit-and-miss. And in both cases, you must be careful of toxicity.

If you use store-bought cleaning solutions, make sure they are specifically formulated for glass shower doors, and follow the directions. Keep in mind that some solutions should not be used on the door's aluminum frames due to discoloration.

Several home cleaning solutions can be used. First, try fighting fire with fire: Most soap has an oil or lipid (fat) base. Apply a thin coat of lemon oil using a clean, nonabrasive cloth. Let it sit for several minutes and wipe clean. The oil should moisten and loosen up the deposits.

Another method is to break up the oil/fat base using a grease-fighting cleaner. One of the best (and least expensive) grease fighters is ordinary liquid dishwashing soap. Apply using a nonabrasive cloth or sponge, let it sit for about 10 minutes, wipe the doors well and rinse.

For really tough soap scum, baking soda is your best friend. It can be mixed with the dish liquid (1 part baking soda to 2 parts liquid) to provide minimally abrasive scrubbing power. To clean buildup from the corners of the door frame, make a thick paste of baking soda and vinegar, apply to the buildup, and let it foam for a few minutes. Wipe away the excess paste and rinse.

In all three cases, repeated application may be necessary. But the ingredients are less toxic than over-the-counter solutions and will not scratch the glass or discolor the frame.

Protecting Your Investment

Buying A Home? Don't Forget Title Insurance

(NAPS) – The National Association of Realtors projects that 6.4 million resale home sales will take place this year. If you are one of those homebuyers, you're keenly aware that this will likely be your largest single investment.

Many will purchase homeowner's insurance to guard against forces such as fire, theft or wind damage. But what about other, hidden hazards that may threaten their financial investment?

Unlike homeowner's insurance, which focuses on future events and charges an annual premium, title insurance charges a one-time premium and safeguards against loss from hazards already existing in the title.

The two basic kinds of title insurance are lender, or mortgage, protection and owner's coverage. Most lenders require the former as security for their investment. Owner's title insurance lasts as long as you, the policyholder, or your heirs have interest in the insured property.

Stewart Title Guaranty Co., a leader in real estate information, advises potential homeowners to ask their real estate professional about owner's coverage and confirm that it will be included in the contract.

Insuring a home's title begins with a search of public land records. The title agent, or attorney working on behalf of the title underwriter, examines documents, such as deeds, wills or trusts, to determine whether the property is insurable.

When title problems are found, they are corrected, whenever possible, to avoid future claims. According to a recent survey by the American Land Title Association (ALTA), title problems consistently arise in 36 percent, or more than one out of every three, real estate transactions.

After search and examination, title problems may still be hidden or missed, such as a signature forged on a deed, or an unknown heir might step forward to claim ownership. In each of these cases, a title insurance policy will offer financial protection (subject to the policy's terms and conditions). The title insurer defends the title and "perfects" the title or pays valid claims.

With title insurance, you have financial protection against covered title hazards for your most important investment.

For more information, visit the Web sites at www.ALTA.org or www.stewart.com.

Trends In Decks:

Personalized, Upscale

(NAPS) – Whether used for entertaining or for quiet family nights at home, decks are becoming an increasingly important "room" of the house.

According to a recent survey by the American Institute of Architects, there's heightened interest in outdoor living spaces, with design firms reporting that 64 percent of those surveyed expressed interest in a deck, compared to 47 percent the previous year.

The survey also reported that a patio or deck is one of the top three features people look for in a new house, with porches also growing in popularity.

Homeowners want upscale style and coordinated accessories for their outdoor spaces that increasingly mirror interior ones. Because of this, key trends have emerged: the creation of a personalized oasis through garden décor; added heat with grills, outdoor fireplaces and fire pits; decorative outdoor lighting, ranging from solar to outdoor candles; and low-maintenance materials that improve both the life of the deck and the quality of life for the deck owner.

According to the National Association of Home Builders, the demand for deck-related features, such as outdoor audio and TV, outdoor lighting and outdoor fireplaces, is expected to increase significantly among owners of upscale homes. It is also expected to increase, though not as dramatically, among owners of average-sized homes.

And, a growing number of homeowners are turning to composite materials when building a deck. First introduced on the market several years ago, composite building materials are said to be virtually maintenance-free. In addition, composite deck materials provide superior durability, consistent quality and are expected to last longer than wood while still providing the aesthetic look of wood with an etched woodgrain surface.

A new line of composite decking is described as featuring deeper, richer colors and a new, natural wood texture. This line, called Boardwalk Signature HFS (Hidden Fastener System), is available from CertainTeed Corporation in a rich wood stain look that replicates the attractive appearance of Chestnut, Cedar and Redwood. And besides being stain, fade and scratch resistant it also features a patented EcoTech material that assures consistent color, texture and quality.

Flip for Market-Proof Real Estate Investing

(NAPS) – In today's slowing real estate market, a "buy and hold" investment strategy might seem to make more sense than "flipping" for investors looking to build long-term wealth. But according to recent National Association of Realtors statistics and a new book in the popular Millionaire Real Estate Series, flippers—investors who buy and sell houses within 12 months after making improvements, like a new bathroom—continue to profit even as real estate markets stagnate nationwide.

"Flipping a house has many moving parts. Anyone looking to flip as a 'get-rich-quick' scheme is going to get burned," says Rick Villani, co-author of the new book "FLIP: How to Find, Fix, and Sell House for Profit" (McGraw-Hill). "FLIP" provides a road map to success that anyone can follow."

In "FLIP," Villani and co-author Clay Davis break flipping down to a market-proof, Find-Analyze-Bu-Fix-Sell process that helps evaluate investments and flip houses no matter what the market conditions. Based on their extensive experience finding, fixing and reselling more than 1,000 houses with their company HomeFixers, Villani and Davis provide the practical and technical guidance investors need to read the real estate market, weigh costs and maximize profits. The five-stage process presented in "FLIP" includes:

- Find – Research/select neighborhoods and houses, attract sellers.
- Analyze – Identify improvements, consider costs, analyze profit potential.

INTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

- Buy – Arrange financing, make offer, close.
- Fix – Develop and execute improvement plan, on time and on budget.
- Sell – Sell quickly for maximum profit.

While there are flipping opportunities in any market, "FLIP" emphasizes the importance of carefully evaluating the market, identifying viable buying opportunities, anticipating potential problems and costs, and developing an overall strategic plan. Before making any real estate investment decision, Davis and Villani strongly recommend each potential flipper evaluate the current local market environment and then consider which opportunities present the best profit potential. They also encourage prospective flippers to follow four key indicators before making any buying decisions: mortgage rate trends, seasonal buying cycles, time on the market for all houses in a given neighborhood, and current and planned city/area developments.

"For the average real estate investor to succeed, they've got to know when to buy and when to walk away," says Davis. "Like with any sound investment, investors first must do their homework."

"FLIP" is available in bookstores and at www.homefixers.com.

Home Buyers Workshop Offered In Cantonese

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) and QuincyAsian Resources, Inc. (QARI) is offering their First Time Home Buyers Workshop series in Cantonese.

The free workshop, consisting of two sessions, will be held on Saturday, June 2 and June 9 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the fourth floor conference room of QCAP, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

QARI Executive Director John Brothers said the workshop will serve the needs of the many Cantonese speakers moving to the South Shore. "Cantonese speakers need to know about and be able to take advantage of the same home buying opportunities as other home buyers," he said.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the homebuying process. Cantonese-speaking real estate professionals will discuss topics ranging from mortgages to home insurance.

In addition, participants who complete the 10-hour program may be eligible for downpayment/closing cost assistance of up to $10,000 and for the soft second program. Participants may also use their certificate of completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnership.

For more information about the program, and/or to register for the workshop, contact QARI at 617-472-2200.

Your Home: Safe From Electrical Hazards?

(NAPS) – Most people would be shocked if they knew the potential danger posed by electrical hazards hidden in the walls of their homes or lying unseen on their grounds. According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, over 400 people are electrocuted in the United States every year. To help ensure that your home is truly safe, here's a checklist from the Leviton Institute:

Don't Overload Outlets: With power strips and surge protectors, it's all too easy to add more appliances to an outlet than it was designed to handle. By overloading circuits, you can create a fire hazard.

Outlets and Switches: Replace any outlet or switch that has broken parts or cracks, feels warm to the touch or has plugs that hang loose.

Power Cords and Extension Cords: Examine power and extension cords for fraying or cracking. Replace taped-over cords or those showing wear. Never run cords or extensions under carpets, rugs or furniture, where damage might be hidden.

Use of Power Tools: Don't use power tools, even if they are properly grounded, in wet or damp spots.

Install GFCIs and Test Them Monthly: GFCIs (ground fault circuit interrupters) have prevented hundreds of electrocutions and untold numbers of injuries since the early 1970s. The National Electrical Code requires GFCI-equipped outlets in rooms with a water source or damp ground such as kitchens, bathrooms, garages, laundry rooms and crawl spaces, and in outdoor locations such as hot tubs or poolside, where they should be equipped with weather-proof covers. Testing them is simple. Just follow these three easy steps:

1. Plug a lamp or radio into the GFCI. Turn on the lamp or radio.

2. Press the TEST button. Lamp or radio should go off. If the lamp or radio doesn't go off, the GFCI is damaged or was miswired during installation. Please call a qualified electrician.

3. Press the RESET button. Lamp or radio should come back on. If the lamp or radio doesn't come back on, the GFCI is damaged and must be replaced. Call a qualified electrician.

If you are not sure that your GFCI is testing and resetting properly for any reason, play it safe and call a qualified electrician. Be sure to make your safety inspection a yearly habit and hire a licensed electrician to conduct an in-depth inspection every 10 years.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Why Change Exercise Routine?

Q. I have been involved with some type of exercise consistently for the past 20 years. Every three or four years I hear about a "new" way to do an exercise or activity that I previously completed. The explanation is usually that the "new" way will help me prevent injuries or provide a better outcome. If I haven't gotten hurt completing my exercise routine and am happy with my results, why should I change?

A. There are several reasons for the constant changes surrounding the fitness industry, some legitimate and others just a gimmick.

The fitness industry has seen numerous transformations since its mainstream acceptance over the past several decades. What used to be just for body builders and athletes became accessible to the general public through health clubs, fitness facilities, television shows and videos/DVDs.

The popularity of exercise set a great tone, but many of the exercise models the general population used were modified body-building workouts. As time has passed, fitness professionals have been studying how to best optimize the body's potential, prevent injuries and maintain an active and strong lifestyle. As a result, changes often occur to better help you reach your goals and possibly surpass them.

many people today has also changed the focus of fitness-based material by bringing to light the need for exercise programs to address the growing presence of medical conditions caused by lack of activity. The increase in sedentary lifestyles also has caused the fitness industry to place more emphasis on preventing lower back injuries, tackling obesity and motivating the general public to be "active." Modifying existing exercises is often necessary to provide safe programs to those who may be dealing with these issues.

On the other hand, there is a difference between research and gimmicks. The "next best thing," a "revolutionary breakthrough" and a "fitness secret" often promise a new spin on a classic exercise program. Although the technique of certain exercises may change, the best method of becoming fit and healthy has not. Be active, exercise and consistently eat a healthy, balanced diet — and enjoy life.

You may not need to change your current exercise routine, but consider the "new" changes that can possibly help you reach your goals more efficiently and safely.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfw@heartsinc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Lori Zanin New Milton Hospital Lab Manager

Milton Hospital announces Lori Zanin has been appointed to the position of laboratory manager.

Most recently, Zanin served as Chemistry and Hematology Section Head at Memorial Hospital of Rhode Island, a 170-bed acute care hospital located in Pawtucket, RI. She returns to Milton Hospital after holding positions of increasing responsibility from 1995 to 2001 in the laboratory, including Medical Technologist and lab supervisor. She has also served as a clinical instructor for Northeastern University and Massasoit College.

LORI ZANIN

Zanin is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth, where she studied medical laboratory science and economics. She has also studied laboratory management at the University of Rhode Island.

"Lori has a tremendous track record for improving lab test turnaround times while decreasing costs," said Laboratory Director and Chief of Pathology Jon Keller, M.D. "I am very pleased that to welcome her back to Milton Hospital, particularly at this time of unprecedented growth at Milton Hospital."

In 2005, Milton Hospital's laboratory drew and analyzed blood from some 125,000 people. Last year, the laboratory performed more than 252,600 total procedures, a 4 percent increase over 2005.

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Canton, Hyde Park, Dorchester and other local communities. Services include general medical and surgical inpatient care, a complete complement of outpatient health services and 24-hour emergency services.

The hospital is a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, and has more than 250 physicians on staff, representing primary care and 22 different medical specialties.

Spotlight On Health

Use Caution When Treating Allergy Symptoms

(NAPS) — It may come as a surprise to some, but allergies can happen at any time of the year, bringing on sneezing, headache, stuffy nose and sinus pressure. Because there is no cure for allergies, only treatments for the symptoms, many sufferers turn to medications for relief. What you may not know is that by treating these different symptoms, you could actually be putting yourself at risk.

A recent telephone survey conducted by TSC, a division of Yankelovich, found many people who report having allergies use medications to treat symptoms such as sinus pressure (77 percent) and headaches (62 percent). When selecting a medication to alleviate their symptoms, most (85 percent) who have allergies use an allergy medication, while nearly half (46 percent) report taking a pain reliever or headache remedy.

The danger in treating multiple allergy symptoms comes in not knowing what active ingredients make up the medications you are taking. By using both an allergy medication and taking a pain reliever or headache remedy, you could accidentally overdose on ingredients commonly found in over-the-counter (OTC) products, such as acetaminophen, an active ingredient that can be found in many medications, including Tylenol. When taken in excess, studies have shown acetaminophen to cause liver failure and other serious complications.

The TSC survey found that although more than half of respondents (68 percent) knew that acetaminophen could be found in pain relievers and headache remedies, only about one-third (38 percent) knew that it could also be found in allergy medications.

To achieve the greatest benefit from OTC products, it is important to understand your allergy symptoms, as well as the active ingredients in the products you are using to treat them. Further, being aware of warning labels on product labels and packaging is another step you can take to help avoid acetaminophen overdose.

If you have questions, talk to your healthcare provider or pharmacist—they can advise you on medications to treat your allergy symptoms.

Eye On Health

Guarding Against Glaucoma

(NAPS) — A simple eye exam could help protect you from a leading cause of vision loss: glaucoma.

More than 4 million Americans have glaucoma, an eye disease that damages the optic nerve and destroys eyesight. However, nearly half of those with glaucoma are not aware they have it.

With its painless and gradual loss of vision, glaucoma comes with no early warning signs, but it can be detected during a comprehensive dilated eye exam. The National Eye Institutes of Health (NEI), encourages Americans to make vision a health priority and receive regular dilated eye exams.

Paul A. Sieving, M.D., Ph.D., director of the NEI, said, "Treatment during the early stages of glaucoma can control the disease and prevent future vision loss and blindness. This is why we encourage people at higher risk for glaucoma to get a comprehensive dilated eye exam every one to two years."

Those at higher risk for developing glaucoma include:

- African Americans over age 40.
 - Everyone over age 60, especially Mexican Americans.
 - People with a family history of the disease.
- With a dilated eye exam, an eye care professional can see inside the eye to detect signs of glaucoma, such as subtle changes to the optic nerve and other vision problems, before any symptoms appear. This allows the eye care professional to monitor patients and treat glaucoma as early as possible.

"A dilated eye examination is essential to protecting the vision of those at higher risk for glaucoma," noted Anne L. Coleman, M.D., Ph.D., Frances and Ray Stark Professor of Ophthalmology at UCLA's Jules Stein Eye Institute and chair of the glaucoma subcommittee for NEI's National Eye Health Education Program. "If glaucoma is detected early, treatments such as medication, conventional surgery or laser surgery can slow or stop vision loss. High pressure inside the eye, which may be associated with glaucoma, does not itself mean that you have glaucoma. Only a dilated eye exam and evaluation of the optic nerve can tell you that."

The NEI is encouraging individuals to get an eye exam and to spread the word about glaucoma to family and friends by using NEI's e-cards and brochures.

For further information and links to help you find an eye care professional in the area, visit www.nei.gov/glaucoma.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
DENTAL EROSION

One serious threat to teeth involves the widespread condition known as "dental erosion." This gradual destruction of tooth enamel can result in pain that is felt when eating or drinking hot or cold foods. It can also cause tooth discoloration and loss. Alarmingly, the primary culprit in cases of dental erosion is soft drink consumption. In the United States, where soft drink consumption has risen 1,100 percent over the past two decades, many children show signs of erosion. Some even have exposed dentin (the layer below the hard outer enamel), which is typically found only in adult teeth. While all acidic foods can cause dental erosion, soda is particularly harsh because of ingredients such as phosphoric acid.

This informative column on dental erosion has been brought to you as a public service.

We strive to teach you good oral hygiene. In the long run, you will have better dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress the early stages of dental care on healthy teeth and good dental care. A thorough examination and detailed explanation of all finds and treatment needed are routinely given. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problems after they occur. We're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self esteem. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If you must drink soft drinks, at least use a straw, which helps to minimize contact with the teeth.

Spina Bifida Risk

(NAPS) — An estimated 65 million American women are of childbearing age — and all of them are at risk for having a baby born with Spina Bifida, a birth defect of the spine.

Taking a multivitamin with folic acid every day reduces the risk by up to 70 percent. Folic acid cannot guarantee a healthy baby, but it will help reduce the risk of neural tube defects.

A previous Spina Bifida pregnancy, like the condition itself, increases the chances of a second affected pregnancy by approximately 20 times. Women with a previous affected pregnancy need a higher prescription dose of folic acid to reduce the risk of having another one.

If you know of any women of childbearing age, encourage them to make folic acid part of their day, every day. To learn more, visit the Spina Bifida Association at www.sbaa.org or call (800) 621-3141.

SPORTS

One Win And North's In Postseason Play

By SEAN BRENNAN

The magic number is one. The North Quincy Red Raider softball team is one victory away from securing their first postseason appearance since 1995, and if the team continues on the pace it is going right now, they should lock up that elusive spot sometime this week.

North Quincy (9-2 overall) took care of business last week with a three game sweep over Boston Latin Academy (2-1), Quincy (8-3) and Sandwich (12-1).

"At the moment we are tied with Whitman-Hanson for the best record in the Atlantic Coast League," said head coach Mike Connor. "I have three starting pitchers who have really carried the team so far, and when our hitting comes around we will be even more dangerous. At 9-2, we need one more win to get back to the post-season for the first time since 1995."

The Red Raiders started their winning ways last Tuesday with a well-pitched, come-from-behind 2-1 victory over Boston Latin Academy. The winning pitcher was Brittany Folkins. Folkins is now 2-0 on the year with a 2.00 earned run average.

North Quincy trailed 1-0 entering the home half of the seventh and final inning. With one out and the bases loaded, junior Rebecca Goreham doubled in the tying and winning run. Paige Bonanni scored the tying run and Jenna McDonough scored the winning run.

"They (Boston Latin) were probably one of the two best pitching teams we have faced all year, with the other being Winthrop," Connor said. "We struggled hitting early in the game, but Brittany kept us in the game and we came up big in our last at-bat."

On Wednesday at Mitchell/McCoy Field, the Raiders and the Quincy Presidents met for the first of two meetings this spring. North won the rivalry game by a score of 8-3.

Junior Paige Bonanni scattered four hits over seven innings with three punchouts to earn her fourth victory of the season. Bonanni is 4-1 on the year with a 4.04 earned run average.

Goreham finished the game 2-for-2 with two runs scored and one RBI. Junior Kasey O'Connell walked three times and scored three runs in the win. Sophomore Catherine O'Connell went 2-for-4 at the plate.

"These rivalry games are always intense," Connor added. "We had some timely hits against their young pitcher (Julia Yee) who pitched really well for them. Paige continued to pitch great for us and we got our hits when we needed them the most."

Leanna Lam went 1-for-3 for Quincy.

On Thursday, North Quincy completed their 3-0 week with a convincing 12-1 victory over Atlantic Coast League foe, Sandwich High School.

Freshman sensation Sammi Bonanni pitched a complete game, five-hitter to earn her third win of the season. On the year, Sammi Bonanni has a record of 3-1 with a 1.23 earned run average.

Junior Catherine Feeney went 2-for-4 with a two-RBI triple and Catherine O'Connell added two hits and three RBI for the visiting Red Raiders.

The team's 9-2 record represents the best start for a North Quincy team in years, and as is the case with most successful softball programs, the team's starting pitching has been the key.

Paige Bonanni, Sammi Bonanni and Brittany Folkins have combined to go 9-2 with a 2.42 earned run average through eleven games this spring.

The team's offense has been led by the Atlantic Coast League's leading hitter, Kerry Coughlin. Coughlin's .464 batting average leads the ACL, and her teammate, sophomore Kathleen Lynch, is second in the league batting title race with a .462 average.

Goreham leads the team with 13 RBI and Feeney is second with 12 RBI.

"It has been a pleasure coaching these girls. They know what they want and they go out on the field and get it done," Connor said. "With three pitchers I can throw at teams and an offense that is starting to heat up, we are getting there. We still have plenty of time left to improve and we will not be satisfied with just making the tournament. We do not have one senior on our roster, so the future could not look any brighter"

North Quincy played against Whitman-Hanson on Monday night, and played last night (Wed.) versus Marshfield High School. The team hosts Plymouth South this afternoon at Mitchell/McCoy Field (4 p.m.) and will play host to Plymouth North next Monday at Mitchell/McCoy (4 p.m.).

Girls And Boys Tennis Results

The Quincy Presidents defeated the North Quincy Red Raiders 3-2 in girls' tennis action last Wednesday.

Senior captain Kim Pham rebounded from an opening-set 7-5 loss by winning 6-1, 6-2 to take the key victory at second singles to help the Presidents to the overall team win.

In the first singles match, Quincy's Talisa Faustin won 6-0, 6-3 and My Pham won at third singles, 6-1, 6-4 to help Quincy run its record to 4-3 overall.

Ping Mai and Christina Lin won at first doubles and Jennifer Wu and Candice Tsang were victorious at second doubles for the Red Raiders.

In boys' tennis action last Wednesday, the Quincy Presidents took a 4-1 team victory over North Quincy at the Montclair courts.

The visiting Presidents won two of the three close matches to improve their record to 6-2 overall, 3-1 in the Atlantic Coast League.

Quincy's Robbie Yee won 7-6 (3), 6-3 at first singles, while Kevin Chan and Terry Szeto won 6-2, 2-6, 6-1 at first doubles.

Other winners for the Presidents included Steve Palmarier at second singles and Pluton Anjelli and Jeff Mui at second doubles.

The Red Raiders (3-5 overall, 1-4 in the ACL) got a 6-2, 5-7, 7-6 (3) win from sophomore Phil Wong at third singles.

Point Webster Celebrates Physical Education Week With 'Great Race'

Point Webster Middle School celebrated National Physical Education Week with its sixth annual "Great Race." One hundred and twenty boys and girls participated in this 1-mile race through the streets of Quincy.

The overall winner of the "Great Race" was Alex Botali and the first-place girl was Kayla Graham. Awards were given out for the first-place finishers in each grade.

Ryan Shultz, Samah Marhamo, David Tran, Maryssa Dwyer, Jon Akins and Allissa Lydon all won in their grade level.

The race began six years ago with 40 runners and has grown into a tradition at Point Webster. Scott King and Clare Murphy, Physical Education teachers at Point Webster, conducted the race with the help of the Quincy Police Department.

10th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race For ALS June 9

The 10th annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS, also known as the Squirrel Run, will be held on Sat., June 9 at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway in Quincy.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to attend the 5-mile run and 2.5-mile walk which will benefit The Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital. Jimmy Kennedy lost his battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

The week leading up to the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS has been declared "ALS Awareness Week" in Quincy. This year, Olympic champion Billy Mills will be at the Squirrel Run, as will co-chairs Bill Rodgers and Michael Dukakis. Mills, a gold medal winner in the 10,000-meters at the 1964 Olympics, was an unranked unknown entrant when he became the first, and only, American ever to win a gold medal in the event.

Registration begins at 8 a.m., with the 2.5-mile walk starting at 9 a.m. The 5-mile run begins at 10 a.m. along a course that is officially sanctioned by the USA Track and Field, New England Association. The cost to pre-register is $15; $20 on the day of the event. The first 500 to register will receive a race T-shirt.

This is the 10th year for the race, according to Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and president of The Angel Fund. In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children and awards for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates and other awards.

Associates sponsorship opportunities are available at a cost of $5,000. Sponsors will receive exhibit space and prominent signage, the company's name and logo on the event banner, and public announcements during the event.

To pre-register, send a completed registration, with a check made payable to The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, to 5 Norman Todd Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025, by May 27.

For registration information, or for further information on sponsorship opportunities, call Rich Kennedy at (781) 383-6008, or email him at rtaylin@aol.com, or Marty Levenson at (800) 999-5950 x 1127, or at mlevenson@adl.com.

Connolly Paces Presidents

Last Wednesday, on a perfect night for baseball, the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders faced-off for the second time in the last two weeks at Adams Field. Quincy prevailed 6-3 behind the starting pitching of senior captain Steve Connolly. Connolly allowed eight hits, all singles, to earn his second win in as many tries against the Red Raiders. Quincy defeated North Quincy 9-2 in the championship game of the Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament, which was held over the April school vacation week.

With the win, the Presidents ran their overall record to 5-4 overall and 2-3 in the Atlantic Coast League.

BASEBALL

The Presidents scored four times in the top of the fifth inning to break open a close game. Senior Matt Boyle's single with the bases loaded drove in one run, and senior Wendall Cosgrove's fielder's choice groundout scored the Presidents' second run of the inning. Senior Mike Leone capped off the four-run scoring barrage with a two-run double.

Quincy played against Dennis-Yarmouth High School last Friday and lost 20-10.

Junior Ricky Salvucci

went 2-for-3 at the plate with four RBI and junior Mike LeBel added two hits and two RBI.

With the loss, Quincy's record dropped to 5-5 overall, 2-4 in the ACL.

Quincy played against Nauset High School on Monday and against Plymouth North last night. The team will travel down to Sandwich on Friday, before returning home to play Brighton High School on Saturday at Adams Field. First pitch is scheduled for 11 a.m.

North Quincy played against Whitman-Hanson on Monday and against Marshfield last night. The Red Raiders are scheduled to play on the road on Friday against Plymouth South.

Quincy-North Participate In Freshman/Sophomore Meet

This past weekend the North Quincy/Quincy freshman/sophomore track team participated in the Freshman/Sophomore meet at Greater New Bedford High School.

In the 110 hurdles, sophomore Jeff Pereira finished in third position with a running time of 16 seconds flat.

The 4 x 100-relay team of Pereira, Terrence and Terrell Staley and Adams Jean-Baptiste finished in third with a time of 47.3 seconds.

Chris Bergeron took third in the shot put event with a throw of 43 feet and 11 1/2 inches. Bergeron qualified for the states with this throw and Mario Dashi took second place in the javelin event with a throw of 139-41 feet.

QHS Boys' Volleyball Wins

The Quincy High School boys' volleyball team defeated Greater New Bedford Votech, 3-1, last week, to earn a spot in the South Sectional tournament for the first time in three years. The team also defeated Barnstable High School last Friday night 3-0.

Quincy (10-2 overall, 8-0 in the South Alliance) was led to victory against Greater New Bedford by captains Andrew Paine (18 kills) and Mike Mottola (nine kills). The Presidents knocked off the reigning South Alliance League champions 25-9, 25-16, 22-25 and 25-12.

Sophomore Ken Tan's 38 assists helped Quincy gain the post-season berth with eight games still remaining on their spring schedule.

Others playing well for Quincy were captains Anthony Acito and Brendan Paine, along with junior Andy Boucicaut and seniors

Playing against Barnstable in another South Alliance matchup, Quincy rolled to a victory 25-19, 25-18 and 25-23.

Senior T.J. Agolli tallied four kills and two blocks, sophomore Ken Tan added 25 assists and junior Brendan Paine finished with eight digs.

Ed Smith coaches the Quincy Presidents.

Road to Safety: Easing Commuter Stress

(NAPS) - There are a number of ways daily commuters can put the brakes on stress.

Still, a recent survey found that 51 percent of Americans living in major markets find their commute stressful. Of those people, 62 percent experience feelings of frustration, 37 percent suffer from headaches and 28 percent experience back pain.

"Not every commute is going to be a fast ride," said Dr. Martha Beck, a best-selling author and columnist for O, The Oprah Magazine. "Accepting that fact from the word 'go' is probably the most important thing we can do to keep our commuter-stress levels low. Then we can use all kinds of strategies to get even more relaxed."

To help, Dr. Beck offers these tips as part of the Dodge "Avenge Your Commute" campaign:

Comfortable Ride - You can ease stress-induced neck, head and back pain by:

- Pressing your head back against the headrest until your neck muscles are tight. Hold for a count of three and then relax. Repeat 10 times.

- Pushing your shoulders down and back, so that your shoulder blades push against the seat. Hold and release 10 times.

Jam in Traffic - Your favorite tune or radio station can do wonders towards easing stress. You can use technology such as the Dodge Avenger's available SIRIUS Satellite Radio to listen commercial-free to your favorite songs. Equally important, the radio is available with a MyGIG multimedia system with navigation that can provide alternate routes based on real-time traffic patterns.

Hydration - Dehydration causes irritability and fatigue, so sip a chilled beverage before you're feeling parched. With the Dodge Avenger's Chill Zone beverage storage bin, you can stock up on bottled water, sports drinks and other beverages to keep you well hydrated. Then, keep it cold-hot in the vehicle's heated/cooled front cup holder.

Take a Breath - Blast cool air into your face from the air conditioner or roll down the window and breathe in fresh air. Hold your breath for a count of three and let out an audible sigh.

Stay the Course - Remember that changing lanes frequently usually only shaves a few seconds off your drive-but it could increase your chances of colliding with another car.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The often skeptical Aries might find that an answer to a question is hard to believe. But check it out before you chuck it out. You might well be surprised at what you could learn.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your resolute determination to stick by a position might make some people uncomfortable. But if you're proved right (as I expect you to be), a lot of changes will tilt in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel conflicted between what you want to do and what you should do. Best advice: Honor your obligations first. Then go ahead and enjoy your well-earned rewards.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That financial matter still needs to be sorted out before you can consider any major monetary moves. Pressures ease midweek, with news about a potential career change.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
A workplace problem threatens to derail your well-planned project. But your quick mind should lead you to a solution and get you back on track without too much delay.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An opportunity opens up but could quickly close down if you allow pessimism to override enthusiasm. A trusted friend can offer the encouragement you need

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You've come through a difficult period of helping others deal with their problems. Now you can concentrate on putting your energy to work on your own projects.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Forget about who's to blame and, instead, make the first move toward patching up a misunderstanding before it creates a rift that you'll never be able to cross.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good news for the travel-loving Sagittarian who enjoys galloping off to new places: That trip you put off will soon be back on your schedule.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A mood change could make the gregarious Goat seek the company of just a few friends. But you charge back into the crowd for weekend fun and games.

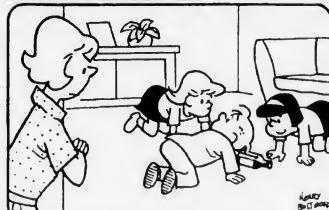

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A decision you made in good faith could come under fire. Best advice: Open your mind to other possibilities by listening to your challenger's point of view.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You can avoid being swamped by all those tasks dangling from your line this week by tackling them one by one, according to priority. The weekend brings good news.

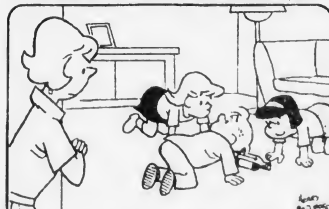

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a fine business sense and a love of the arts. You enjoy living life to its fullest.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

NOBODY KNOWS BUT MOTHER
 Nobody knows of the work it makes to keep the home together;
 Nobody knows of the steps it takes;
 Nobody knows - but mother.
 Nobody listens to childish woes;
 Which kisses only smother;
 Nobody's painted by naughty blows;
 Nobody - only mother.

Nobody knows of the anxious fears
 Lost darlings may not weather
 The storm of life in after years;
 Nobody knows - but mother.

Nobody knows of the sleepless care
 Bestowed on baby brother;
 Nobody knows of the tender prayer
 Nobody - only mother.

Nobody knows of the lessons taught
 Of loving one another;
 Nobody knows of the patience sought
 Nobody - only mother.

Nobody kneels at the throne above
 To thank the Heavenly Father
 For the sweetest gift - a mother's love;
 Nobody can - but mother.

Nelford J. Platner Jr. 1908-2007

A true gentleman who never lost his love for the natural world, curiosity for life and genuine interest in the people around him.

Known as Dad, Papa, Red, Neli, and Ted, Nelford Platner was many things to many people and an inspiration to all.

He befriended everyone he met during his daily walks on Sanibel's beach, a routine "Ted" kept up until he died peacefully at home on Sunday, April 15, 2007.

One of seven children, Nelford was born in Womissing, Pennsylvania. He spent his youth in Wollaston, Ma and in later years owned and operated the insurance company now known as Burgin, Platner, Hurler in Quincy, Ma.

With his first wife Ruth, who died in 1959, "Neli" raised 3 children. Upon retirement he and his second wife, Neet, split their time between Kingfield, Maine and Sanibel Florida.

Nelford was a well-loved, iconic character. On Sanibel Island he was tricky on the tennis court, steady on the bike path and a fixture on the beach. When in Kingfield he took great pride in caring Fox Hill Farm where he spent countless hours perched atop the mower, chopping wood, keeping the stoves stocked, tending the pond and keeping the hummingbirds well fed.

His word was his bond.

He will be deeply missed by his three children and four grandchildren.

Donations in Nelford's memory may be sent to S.S. YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy, MA, 02169.

Bishop To Visit St. Chrysostom's May 20

The Right Rev. Gayle Elizabeth Harris, Suffragan Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, is scheduled to visit St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church Sunday, May 20.

Bishop Harris, who has oversight of most of the urban parishes in the Diocese, will celebrate and preach at the 10 a.m. service. She will also have luncheon with parishioners and conduct a meeting of the parish vestry.

Bishop Harris will be honored with a performance by "Andrew and Expressions," and Tracy O'Sullivan, a parishioner and area voice teacher, will be the soprano soloist.

The public is welcome to this celebration of the ministry of the parish.

Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will have Sunday worship and Sunday school beginning at 10:30 a.m.

The adult bible study class begins at 9 a.m.

The Rev. Dr. Susan F.

Jarek Glidden will conduct the service.

The lector will be Liz Buccella. Ushers will be Brian and Nancy White.

The coffee hour hosts are Mary Emsheimer, Peg McCulley and Linda Nogueira.

Upcoming events include a "Pirates Party" Saturday, May 12 at 1 p.m. and a yard sale on Saturday, May 19.

Contact the church at 617-773-3319 for further information. All are welcome. The church is handicap accessible.

Catholic Women's Prayer Group

The Catholic Parishes of Quincy sponsor a monthly Catholic Women's Prayer Group on the third Tuesday of every month.

The next meeting is May 15 from 7 to 8:15 p.m. in St.

Joseph's Rectory conference room.

The evening provides an opportunity to deepen one's relationship with Christ and be supported by the presence of other faith-filled women.

For more information, contact Sister Pat Boyle at 617-479-5400 (St. Ann's), or Dorothy Ruggiero at 617-472-6321 (St. Joseph's).

Salvation Army Overnight Camp

The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, is accepting applications for children ages 6-12 to attend overnight camp at Camp Wonderland in Sharon June 26-July 2.

Cost is $35 for the entire camping experience.

For more information, contact Major Linda at 617-472-2345.

vice and preach a sermon entitled "Our Fortress."

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers.

Following the worship service there will be follow-ship time in the Allen Parlor where light refreshments will be served.

All are welcome.

The church is handicapped accessible.

First Church Of Squantum

There will be a special 10 a.m. worship service for Mother's Day Sunday at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue St., Squantum.

The public is invited to attend.

The title of the sermon is "Be Kind to Your Web Footed Friends, as a Duck May be Somebody's Mother."

Rev. Dr. Emmy Robertson will lead the service and a special tribute will be given to all mothers.

Special music will be provided by the accordionist,

Susan Clearman.

A Men's Breakfast will meet Saturday, May 12 at 8 a.m.

There will be a community pot luck dinner in Fellowship Hall at 6 p.m. on Saturday, May 12.

All are welcome to attend.

First Baptist Selected For Church Meeting

First Baptist Church of Wollaston has been selected to be one of 25 participants in a nationwide conference in support of small congregations June 20-28 at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, VA.

The annual Summer Collegium is funded by the "Making Connections" initiative of the Lilly Endowment, Inc., which enables the Seminary to offer it at no cost. The estimated cost per clergy participant is more than $15,000.

Participating clergy and their spouses/partners will spend nine days learning and renewing their appreciation for the small church by taking workshops led by small church experts.

Law For Elders Program May 22

The Council on Aging and the Massachusetts Bar Association will present the 2007 Elder Law Education Program Tuesday, May 22, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the Richard Koch Park & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Attorney Thomas Mullen will be the presenter.

Quincy Environmental Network Wellness Expo May 19

The new Wellness Subcommittee of the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will host its first event, a Wellness Expo, Saturday, May 19 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

Organizations from all over Quincy that encourage and contribute to a healthy lifestyle will be on hand to pass out information on their various programs and services. There will be representatives from area health food markets, restaurants, yoga studios, fitness centers, organic landscaping companies, and many more.

Admission to the event is free.

Door prizes will be awarded every half hour and free refreshments and chair massages will be available.

Running alongside the Wellness Expo will be the

QEN
Quincy Environmental Network

Wollaston Garden Club's annual plant sale.

"We believe that healing our planet does indeed start with healing ourselves," said Courtney Perdios of the QEN. "Eating healthier organic foods means less toxins in our environment, and staying active allows us to more fully enjoy being out in nature."

"The QEN Wellness Subcommittee has plans for future activities such as a yoga series, healthy living talks, a run club, classes on making cosmetics, and many more," Perdios added.

For more information on the QEN Wellness Expo or Subcommittee, call Perdios at 617-770-4127.

Dr. Allan Yacubian Roast To Celebrate 50 Years Of The 'Yakoo' June 10

On Sunday, June 10, there will be a celebration of "fifty years" for North Quincy High School's Yakoo and a great benefactor to sports in general for the Quincy school's, Dr. Allan Yacubian.

This celebration, a "roast" of Dr. Yacubian will be held at the Sons of Italy Social Hall on Quarry St. at 1 p.m. Tickets for the event will be $10. A cash bar and snack food will be available.

It would be appreciated if you could contact any alumni of your class year to come and help us show our appreciation for all the good Dr. Yacubian has done for our schools over the years.

To purchase tickets, contact either Ron Ivil at (781) 337-0062 or Joe Minukas at (617) 328-4489.

THE MARK CHARBONNIER AWARD is presented to State Trooper George Demos (center) by Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin (right) and State Trooper Kenneth Halloran.

THE DENNIS F. RYAN ESSAY AWARD WINNERS Wuxi He of Quincy High School (left) and Peter Molina of Dedham High School are shown with Valerie Donald, Branch Supervisor of South Shore Cooperative Bank, and Attorney Christopher Ryan, son of the late Dennis Ryan for whom the award is named.

retail items and citizens in nursing homes.

"He knew and still understands how important consumer transactions can be," Coven said.

The Rabbi Maimi Asad honors an individual who has performed outstanding work in the community.

Bellotti recalled that the community was in a state of confusion and fear.

As Bellotti's experiences became more and more, he first understood social injustice as a 23-year-old Navy lieutenant returning home on an Army troop ship after World War II.

Bellotti recalled that white soldiers roamed freely on upper decks while black soldiers were transported in the "hole," which was dark and unsanitary and smelled putrid, as there were no windows.

"That's where they put the black soldiers," Bellotti said, adding that was "the beginning of my understanding of social injustice."

Bellotti believes the law can remedy social injustice and protect the social order. "We can survive political leaders who make mistakes because we have that system of justice."

Court personnel rolled out a frosted layer cake with one candle to honor Bellotti whose 84th birthday coincided with the day of the award ceremony this year.

Four Quincy police officers, and Quincy residents were among 18 persons cited last week for their outstanding service to the community through careers in law or police work.

Tobin presented The James McIntyre Humanitarian Award to retired Quincy police officer Guido "Budgie" Pettinnelli who was honored for his 37 years of service to Quincy residents and others.

Tobin described Pettinnelli's work with youth, sports teams and even more recently with FEMA, the federal disaster relief agency.

"He gave his all. He was one tough guy," said Tobin of the police officer known QUINCY LAW DAY's key note speaker for 2007 was Attorney General Martha Coakley shown standing with former Attorney General Frank Bellotti who received the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award.

as "Budgie." "I don't know who you were talking about," Pettinnelli said on receiving the plaque but added, "I will forever cherish this day of recognition."

Quincy High School's Wuxi He and Dedham's Peter Molina wrote winning essays for the Dennis F. Ryan Award presented by Attorney Christopher Ryan.

District Attorney William Keating presented the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement to ten police officers.

Three Quincy police officers, Lt. Charles Santoro, and Officers Michael Sullivan and John Leuchte were honored for their rescue of an elderly man after a car crash.

Also honored were three Cohasset police officers: Officer Edward Bagley, a Quincy resident, and Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Detective Garrett Hunt, and four Weymouth police officers: Sgt. Edward Barry, Sgt. John Burke and Officers Timothy Browning and Sean Murray.

Marion Feldman Needel and Tobin presented the Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award which honors her late husband to William P. Mignosa, owner of the Fruit Basket on Granite Street.

Tobin recalled Mignosa's outstanding response when the Montillio's Bakery on Adams Street was totally gutted by a fire. Not only was the bakery destroyed, but also 12 local employees were unemployed.

"Good business is good for Quincy," said Tobin who noted that, thanks to Mignosa, Montillio's Bakery re-opened in 5 1/2 days. Mignosa made room for his friend at his own business.

NORFOLK COUNTY DISTRICT ATTORNEY William Keating presents the Timothy J. Spillane Award to Assistant DA Megan Kennedy.

ATTORNEY WILLIAM SULLIVAN is presented the Alfred Malaney Award by Attorney Phyllis J. Field, president of the Quincy Bar Association.

For the Timothy Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award, Keating named Megan Kennedy. Kennedy is the Assistant District Attorney (A.D.A.) and supervisor of A.D.A.'s at Quincy District Court.

State Trooper George Demos was awarded the Mark Charbonnier Award by Trooper Kenneth Halloran and Tobin.

Field presented the Alfred Malaney Award to Attorney William F. Sullivan.

Rev. Raymond Kiley of Quincy's St. John the Baptist Church offered the invocation and Rabbi Shmuel Bronstein of Hingham-Quincy Chabad the benediction.

Judge Paul Dawley, Regional Administrative Judge for Region 2 joined Judges Coven and Connolly on the bench for the ceremonies.

Also present were Valerie Donald, Branch Supervisor of South Shore Cooperative Bank on Franklin Street, and Karen Salhaney, Marketing Director for South Shore Cooperative Bank. Both banks sponsor awards. The bank presents a bond to the student winners of the Ryan Essay contest.

THE BLAZE SENT clouds of black smoke over the Broad Meadows marshes and to areas beyond. The recent dry weather set the stage for the fire.

FIREFIGHTERS WERE AT the scene for most of the day Saturday to contain the fire in the tall growth.

13% Increase Over Four Years City, Police Union Reach Agreement On New Contract

Mayor William Phelan announced Wednesday that the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Union and the City of Quincy have reached an agreement for a four-year contract.

The contract amounts to a 13% raise over the next four years. It also allows for a reduction in the City's percentage of employee benefits to 85% on 7/1/07 to 80% on 7/1/08 and on 7/1/09 all co-pays double.

The patrol officers ratified the agreement by an overwhelming margin Monday.

"I want to thank the bargaining unit of the Patrol Officers Union for their efforts in helping us reach a mutually-satisfactory agreement," said Mayor Phelan. "Throughout the process the patrol officers conducted themselves in a professional and reasonable manner. These men and women are a large part of the reason why Quincy is the second safest city in Massachusetts and I am happy that we were able to settle our contractual differences and focus on the job of public safety."

The City has now signed agreements with the Library employees, Superior Officers of the Police Department, and the Police Patrol Officers.

Added Mayor Phelan, "I am pleased that we were able to balance the needs of our taxpayers with the needs of our public safety officers. I think the majority of the patrol officers understand our concerns with the unsustainable costs of employee benefits and cooperated in helping us make better decisions over this important budgetary issue."

With Several Conditions Council Approves $1M For Pageant Field Track

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The City Council Finance Committee Monday approved the $1 million funding for the new track at Pageant Field contingent on the receipt of additional information and documents from the mayor's office, bond counsel, the Adams Memorial Society, and environmental agencies.

Prior to the vote, David Murphy, the mayor's Director of Operations outlined the mayor's plan for the track site which he said will not infringe on protected areas.

Murphy, also, presented copies of an agreement signed by Mayor William Phelan and Peter Boylston Adams, copies of the 1885 deed to the property, and also, a letter from the Park Department Executive Director Mark C. Jaehning.

Earlier this month, Adams had opposed siting the track facility at Pageant Field after voicing concerns that the proposed facility was not in keeping with the Adams family legacy as outlined in the 1885 deed.

However, Phelan and Adams worked out an agreement which Adams signed on May 10 with his handwritten notation "subject to ratification by the AMS." Those initials stand for Adams Memorial Society.

Councillors questioned whether Adams' notation required formal approval from the Adams Memorial Society and included that requirement in their motion approving the track.

The Phelan-Adams agreement contains 10 stipulations, including

- the use of natural colors on the track;
- the re-planting of trees;
- a permanent ban on artificial lighting at all recreational facilities at Pageant Field;
- the use of a wooden guardrail and no chain-link fencing at the track;
- removal of the small diamonds that currently exist;
- no permanent grandstands;
- removal of all the Parks and Recreation trucks and machinery within twelve months;
- that a senior and teen center with two tennis courts and a basketball court be opened for all Quincy citizens

City Still Seeks Volunteers For Medical Reserve Corps

The Quincy Health Department is continuing to recruit volunteers for the Quincy Medical Reserve Corps, a cadre of trained medical and non-medical professionals prepared to assist officials during an emergency.

Training on Behavioral Health Disaster Response-Psychological First Aid and Home Preparedness 101: Simple Steps for Individuals and Families has already been held for members in Quincy.

The city signed up 163 volunteers at two recruitment seminars last December.

"Getting volunteers trained is a key component in preparing Quincy to be able to respond to any type of emergency," said Mayor William Phelan.

A training session will be held Tuesday, May 22, at 6 p.m. in the second floor conference room at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

While nurses initially were recruited, anyone interested in joining the Medical Reserve Corps is invited to attend.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative Announces Creation Of Quincy Technology Council

Quincy 2000 Collaborative, a public/private economic development partnership, announces the creation of the Quincy Technology Council.

Organized to assist businesses and other system network engineers improve productivity and reduce costs through the use of technology, the Quincy Technology Council (QTC) consists of information technology (IT) professionals with the proven skills to provide efficient solutions to technology issues.

"As a long-time resident of Quincy, I felt the one thing missing was a technical resource that could assist businesses in understanding true cost, as well as their options regarding technology," said Joe Giggey, from Gig It consulting and chairman of the QTC Advisory Committee.

"Whether it is a small business trying to determine what type of computer system to purchase or a fellow IT practitioner looking to expand his/her industry knowledge, we are excited to offer this new resource to the Quincy business community."

Under the economic umbrella of Quincy 2000, the QTC offers workshops, seminars, information bulletins and free one-on-one counseling.

"The Quincy Technology Council is a great resource within the City that will strengthen the local economy by giving Quincy businesses the competitive edge in an ever changing world of technology trends and products," Mayor William Phelan said.

An Advisory Committee consisting of Quincy 2000 members oversees the various programs and resources, as well as the management of the QTC's new website www.Quincytechcouncil.com.

"The strength of Quincy 2000 is a direct result of the commitment of so many of our members to give back to the community. The volunteer hours and technical resources provided by the QTC Advisory Committee is just one of many fine examples of this," said Peter Racicot, chairman and president of Quincy 2000 and senior vice president of Business Development at Fallon Ambulance.

The next scheduled workshop will be held Tuesday, May 22 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center, in the lower level conference room.

Topic will be an overview of Microsoft Office System 2007, designed to streamline workspaces and provide a wide array of innovative features to help improve personal productivity, communications and collaboration and ultimately enhance business results.

The workshop will be presented by Microsoft Office Corporation's Peter Duffey, IW-Partner Technical Specialist, New England SMS&P.

To RSVP for this free workshop or find out additional information on the programs and services provided by the Quincy Technology Council visit their website at www.Quincytechcouncil.com, or contact Quincy 2000 Collaborative (617) 847-1454 or by visiting their website at www.Quincy2000.org.

Dairy Alternatives Subject Of Food For Life Program

The non-profit Cancer Project will sponsor "Food for Life 2: Discovering Dairy Alternatives & Planning Healthy Meals" Sunday,

May 20, at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The program is a follow-up to the March Food for Life program which focused on low-fat foods and dietary fiber, which also was designed by Cancer Project's physicians, nutritionists and dietitians.

Participants will learn more about the health reasons to avoid dairy products, what dairy alternatives are available, how to get calcium from plant foods and taste some creamy, low-fat, dairy-free dishes.

They will also learn how to plan and prepare well-balanced meals from the "New Four Food Groups," which include whole grains, legumes, vegetables and fruit.

The program also is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information or to register for the program, call 617-376-1316 or visit quref@ocln.org or stop by the reference desk in the Main Library.

Letter Carrier Drive Collects 13 1/2 Tons Of Food For Needy

Mayor William Phelan announces this past weekend's food drive to benefit Quincy's local food pantries was the most successful drive held in recent memory.

Phelan praised the work of the United States Postal Service letter carriers who collected the food items and Quincy residents who donated generously.

"I am humbled by how generous and caring the residents of our great city can be," said Phelan. "I am tremendously proud to be the Mayor of a city that cares so much about those less fortunate. The generosity of our residents and the hard work of our letter carriers resulted in a most successful day."

The letter carrier food drive resulted in more than 26,940 pounds or 13 1/2 tons of food being collected for various social service agencies in Quincy. More than 594 food boxes were filled and delivered to local food pantries by the end of Saturday.

Phelan also praised Kathi Garrison of the Sanger Center for Compassion, USPS coordinator Tammy Quinlan, and Health Commissioner Drew Scheele for their work in organizing the event.

Letter carriers collected non-perishable food items left by residents at their doorsteps on Saturday. The food items were brought back to the post offices, then picked up by volunteers, sorted at the Park and Recreation Complex, and distributed to food pantries.

Phelan co-hosts a similar drive in the fall, prior to the holiday seasons.

"Every time our residents are asked to help, they have stepped up to the plate and helped, no matter the circumstances: food drives, hurricane relief, Cleaner, Greener Quincy, and countless charitable causes," Phelan said. "We are a great city because we have great people. I am proud to be the Mayor of such a generous and compassionate city."

Public Hearing On DIF Program May 24

A public hearing has been scheduled for Thursday, May 24 at 7 p.m. on the proposed Quincy Center District Improvement Financing (DIF) Program Development Program.

The hearing will be held in the Council Chambers, second floor, Old City Hall, for the purpose of consider DIF financing.

The City of Quincy has proposed Quincy Center as a DIF area, which allows the city to use "new tax growth" to fund infrastructure improvements, streetscape upgrades, and other general public improvements as well as the completion of a concourse linking downtown transportation corridors.

Written comments may be provided to the Quincy

Department of Planning and will be accepted for inclusion in the hearing report until 4:30 p.m. Friday, May 25. Comments at the meeting will be reviewed and included in the Public Hearing record.

Copies of the text of the DIF application may be reviewed at the Department of Planning at Quincy City Hall or the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Adams Coin Will Debut Tuesday At City Hall Plaza

The John Adams $1 coin will be officially issued Tuesday at 9 a.m. on City Hall Plaza in honor of the Quincy born second president.

US Mint Director Edmund C. Moy will address the audience and, then, spend the first Adams dollar in Quincy Square. The public is welcome.

Moy is supervising the production and dispersal of the mint's Presidential Coin Series which kicked off in February.

The Mint will issue four Presidential coin dollars each year in a program similar to the release in the 1990's of quarters with symbols honoring each of the country's 50 states.

President George

Washington's image is on the first of the Presidential Series and the Adams dollar coin is the second as he was the second president. This marks the first time that John Adams has been honored on the country's coins or dollars.

Adams was vice-president when the government first established the country's own monetary system.

Next year, a dollar coin honoring President John Quincy Adams will be minted during the second round of presidential dollars.

After the ceremony, the public will be invited to exchange their cash for the Adams dollar. Only cash will be accepted and there will be a limit of 10 rolls per person at $25 a roll.

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, said that Peter Boylston Adams and other members of the Adams family will attend the ceremony. The Adams homestead is located on Adams Street.

Among the sponsors of the event are Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the Quincy Partnership, the National Park Service and The Patriot Ledger.

Coughlin Re-Election Kick-Off May 23

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin will kick off his campaign for re-election on Wednesday, May 23, 6 to 8 p.m. at The Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Suggested donations are $25, $50 or $100.

The Yakoo At Half-Century Mark

The Yakoo is alive and well. He's been shot at a few times down through the years, but he's been a survivor.

This is a milestone year for the North Quincy High School mascot symbol beloved by five decades of students.

His 50th birthday is coming up Nov. 29. And the celebration is starting early.

The Yakoo was born Nov. 29, 1957. That was the day when two classmates, Allan Yacubian and Peter Fredericksen introduced the Yakoo to the student body at NQHS seeking their acceptance of him as their mascot symbol. He was accepted enthusiastically.

Yacubian was the model for the Yakoo and for whom he is named. Fredericksen drew Yacubian's profile for the Yakoo's face.

Yacubian, who is of Armenian descent, is now a well-known dentist with offices in Wollaston. Fredericksen, who lives in Randolph, is a retired Milton teacher.

He was so talented at drawing; he received an offer from Walt Disney to join the Walt Disney Studio staff. But that would have meant moving to Hollywood and Fredericksen turned to a teaching career here instead.

The two now going on 67 have known each other since the second grade at the Mass Fields School and have remained friends since.

Yacubian is getting the birthday celebration started with 3000 Devil Dogs and 3000 Hoodies-1500 of each for North and Quincy High students.

They will be delivered to NQHS Wednesday, May 23 and to QHS Thursday, May 24.

The Devil Dogs are from Yacubian and the Hoodies were donated by the Hood Company.

"It's just a little way of saying thank-you to the two schools for their support," says Yacubian.

Quincy High School alumni and students, joined forces with North Quincy High School grads and students to save the Yakoo when critics tried to have him banished.

The two schools, once sports archenemies are still rivals but have bonded together with students and athletes of both schools becoming friends with each other.

The Yakoo is part of the reason. And the North Quincy Boosters Club and the Quincy High School 1950s Football Alumni are another, working together on various events and tributes to coaches and players such as the Quincy-North Football Hall of Fame.

The Yakoo depicts a caricature of a stern Native American with a feathered headband, carrying a stone hammer and a North Quincy pennant.

Critics back in 1991 claimed he was a racial stereotype offensive to Native Americans.

They said the hammer is a tomahawk and saw the Yakoo projecting a fighting stance. Yacubian sees it quite differently. His response:

"The hammer denotes hard work. His (Yakoo's) look is that of determination and perseverance. Critics have miscalculated the whole thing."

THE YAKOO TEAM — Peter Fredericksen (left) the creator and Dr. Allan Yacubian the model for The Yakoo when they were North Quincy High School classmates in 1957. The Yakoo turns 50 in November.

In 1995 the U.S. Department of Education said the mascot image did not violate the U.S. Civil Rights Act.

Back in 1991 when the Yakoo was targeted by opponents, the North students went through a Democratic process to determine the Yakoo's fate.

They invited representatives of both sides to speak to them on the issue. Among them, Native Americans.

Jeff Hanley, of North Dakota Chippewa Indian descent and director of Harvard University's Native American Program, opposed the Yakoo.

"A group of people," he said, "have been reduced to a mascot. It perpetuates racial stereotype."

But Louell Falls, of Sioux Indian descent originally from South Dakota, came on from New Mexico to speak in favor.

"The students (NQHS) have so much pride behind the mascot that I can't understand the controversy," she said. "I don't find anything derogatory about it."

After listening to both sides, the kids took the issue to the ballot box.

More than 57 percent of the 1,163 students took part in the referendum. Results: 88 percent favored keeping the Yakoo as he is, 7.8 percent favored keeping him with some change. Only 25 students voted to ban him.

Yacubian has remained close to North Quincy High School and has been a generous benefactor. He also supports Quincy High School. And he even buys a copy of the QHS yearbook each year and keeps it in his office for patients to look at.

Critics seem to overlook the high esteem in which the Yakoo has been held by NQHS students for almost a half-century. He's the symbol of the strong school spirit and pride North has long been known for.

And, as for that fighting stance they object to — well as we have said before American Indians have been known to take such a stance when the occasion arises. Like Custer found out at Little Bighorn.

The Yakoo may be a target again in the future. We hope not. The kids cherish him.

"The kids," says Yacubian, "have kept him alive."

May he long live — in peace.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of Atlantic Beach looking north from near the end of Atlantic Street. Moswetuset Hummock is in the distance on the left and Squantum is on the right. Out of view on the immediate right was Moswetuset Landing, a pier that extended over the mudflats at low tide. At the end of the pier were floats where locals kept their small boats. Before the Boulevard was built Quincy's coastline from here to Black's Creek was mostly coastal marshland. Only this beach and a few other spots along the shore were available for public use. Wollaston Beach as we know it today was man made. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

What Is A Fair Solution To City Teacher Benefits?

Recently the Mayor of Quincy has written a letter to The Patriot Ledger and mailed copies to the residents of Quincy regarding employee benefits.

As a life long resident of the city of Quincy, a graduate of the Quincy public schools system and a current teacher at Quincy High School, I am appalled by the lack of respect expressed and the political jargon employed by the current mayor in his letter.

In his article, Mayor William Phelan discusses the need for a fair solution to rising health care costs. What is a fair solution? While the salaries of Quincy teachers rank relatively low in Massachusetts, we are presently blessed with excellent health care benefits. Thus, a marked increase in health care costs, despite any increase in salaries, will essentially result in a pay cut for those of us who educate Quincy's kids. Is it fair to ask the members of the Quincy Education Association to accept a pay cut to help pay for health care benefits?

I doubt anyone in the public or private sector would consider the mayor's proposal as fair or respectful of the city's workforce. The mayor's plan is clearly not a fair solution.

The Quincy public school system has hired many young, excellent teachers over the last ten years. These teachers not only make less money than other teachers from communities, which surround Quincy, but they also carry an enormous amount of debt from college school loans.

Also, these teachers are mandated by the Department of Education to earn a master's degree in their particular field to retain their professional status. This burden of enormous college debt, borrowing more money to receive a master's degree, coupled with the lack of adequate pay increases and in addition to the newly proposed rise in health care payments will force a mass exodus of young teachers from the city and new "quality" teachers won't be rushing to Quincy to replace those who escape to better pastures.

What is a fair solution?

Educators in the City of Quincy extend themselves above and beyond daily teaching duties. As educators, we volunteer our time and efforts to the community and to extracurricular non-paying activities.

Teachers volunteer countless hours for student dances, proms, plays, clubs, tutoring, and mentoring. Without these volunteers, these activities could not take place. Also, because of budget shortages, teachers often use out of pocket money to buy teaching supplies.

The teachers of the City of Quincy are asking for a fair contract. We have been working without a contract for 254 days. The mayor is comparing city employees with private sector workers. This comparison holds no legitimacy. Private sector workers are compensated fairly, receive yearly profit sharing, 401-K plans, yearly bonuses and adequate health care packages. The city employees on the other hand, receive one excellent benefit health care plan; one the mayor wants to curtail dramatically.

The mayor of Quincy has said time and time again that this city is fiscally sound. In fact, the city possesses millions of dollars in surplus. The mayor states the city can no longer pay for city employee health care benefits, but according to an article in the Patriot Ledger last year, this alleged fiscal conservative mayor gave pay increases of 15 percent to himself and pay raises to 50 non-university city employees. His top aide received a 27 percent increase.

James Schatzl
Tinson Road

Quincy Public School Teachers Want A Fair Contract

Eight years ago, I arrived at the front steps of Quincy High School as a first-year teacher, confident in the knowledge that I had made the right decision to leave the corporate world. The pay was mediocre, at best-sadly, that is a given for a first-year teacher. But the benefits were excellent, especially the health care. In fact, my benefits package has made me the envy of many of my non-teacher friends and family members. (Though, I'm not sure this envy would hold through an examination of my pay stub.)

Obviously, nobody becomes an educator to become rich. Though, as I look around me each day, I see people with the sort of academic pedigrees, talents, and intelligence that would certainly command a handsome salary in the private sector. Personally, I am fine with that. But not expecting riches does not mean that I would do my job for free.

How do I feel about my job teaching psychology at Quincy High School? I love it. I absolutely love what I do. But I love my wife and my two-year old son a lot more. If there is a person in my position who doesn't agree with that, then they can't be much of a spouse or parent.

My immediate family depends on me for my benefits, plain and simple. And it is this dedication to my own family that has gotten me out on so many occasions this year to support my union brothers and sisters. We are not asking for the moon, not even close.

However, the teachers of Quincy are being asked—commanded, actually, by a School Committee that has refused to bargain—to take and accept a contract that reduces their pay. A 100% increase in health care contributions without a commensurate salary increase is a pay cut, by definition. This is preposterous. We deserve better than that.

Teachers want a fair contract, with the benefits package that is so highly touted in job interviews preserved. If not, I shudder to think about what the Quincy Public Schools will look like in the near future, as current teachers and future job candidates look elsewhere for a system that respects both them and the teaching position.

Dispute Over Fire Truck Purchase

By FRANK McCAULEY

Differences of opinion between Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman and the Quincy Taxpayers Association, over the purchase of a pumping engine for the Fire Department will be referred to the City Council by City Manager Edward T. Lewis.

Chief Gorman has advised the manager to purchase a Seagrave which came in with a high bid of $24,603 for a triple combination Class A pumper.

The Taxpayers Association sent a letter to the manager by George Yarrington, executive director, urging that the contract be awarded to the Mack Company, which submitted the lowest bid at $23,800.

In recommending the purchase of the Seagrave, Chief Gorman noted that, "The product of this company has had an excellent record of service in the Fire Department."

AIR FORCE BAND WELCOMED ON VISIT

With a flurry of fanfare and ceremony, the City of Quincy turned out to greet the United States Air Force Band, which was in Quincy to give two performances in the Quincy High School Auditorium under the sponsorship of Taleb Grotto of Quincy.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, who proclaimed yesterday "Air Force Band Day" and William C. Edwards, city historian, welcomed the 55-member group in front of City Hall at noon.

A certificate of honorary citizenship and a bound volume of "Historic Quincy" were presented to Co. George S. Howard, conductor, by the mayor.

Also speaking at the ceremonies were Lt. Col. William A. Somenly, USAF, Commander from the US Army Base, Clarence P. Hobson, Monarch of Taleb Grotto and O. Wendall Rogers, master of ceremonies and general chairman.

QUINCY-ISMS

Judge Paul Reardon, Chief Justice of the State Superior Court, received the distinguished service award from the Quincy Jewish Community. Joseph Grossman, former Governors' Councillor, made the presentation. The Wollaston Women's Club Juniors received first prize for the club's "press book" and publicity for the past year. The awards were made at the Mass. State Federation of Women's Clubs' annual meeting at the New Ocean House in Swampscott. The July 4th Committee of the Houghs Neck Community Council met at the home of James McDonough, chairman, to plan for the annual 4th of July celebration. Capitol SuperMarket, 1506 Hancock St., advertised "Smoked Shoulders Sugar cured for $.29 a lb." Miss Diane L. Bates, 176 Davis St., Wollaston, has been chosen one of the top national prize winners in the annual essay contest sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her essay was titled "Why is a Government of Laws Better Than a Government of Men?" Miss Bates, a senior at the Woodward School for Girls is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Bates. Duggan Bros. North Quincy Garage at 131 Hancock St., North Quincy, noted that "We Haven't The Most But We Have The Best Used Cars." Mary Weinstein, a former Quincy High three-sport star, is a catcher on the Williams College baseball squad. The Lincoln Theater, Washington St., Quincy Point, was featuring Dan Dailey and Ginger Rogers in "Oh Men, Oh Women" along with Tony Perkins and Karl Malden in "Fear Strikes Out." The Great Hill PTA held its first meeting of the season. Parent-teacher conferences were held and Edward Meade presided at a business meeting. A speaker from the Children's Medical Center in Boston was presented by Mrs. Joseph Nichol, program chairman. Twenty-one boys and girls received their first holy communion from the Very Rev. Arthur J. Riley, P.H.D., pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merrymount. U.S. Army Col. Fredrick Streicher made Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa an Honorary Recruiter and presented an award, certificate of appreciation to the Quincy City Council for its cooperation with the Quincy recruiting station. Elliot W. Taylor and Randolph Haslett headed a committee planning the 25th reunion of the Quincy High School Class of 1932. George W. Dewey, 104 Sea Ave., the incoming president of the Atherton Hough PTA, will have one of his children in every grade in the school except the fifth grade. His children include John, kindergarten, Kathleen, 1st grade, Joan, second grade, Mary Lou, third grade, Thomas, fourth grade and William, sixth grade. Six Quincy men were on the committee planning the 50th anniversary dinner of the Holy Cross Club of Boston. They are Thomas F. MacDonald, John M. Casey, James T. Larkin, William F. Marcellino, Gerald A. Halpin and James F. Duggan. Elm Farm, 18 Chestnut St., Quincy, was advertising "Special Purchase, Ace-High Coffee for $.59 a lb. Limit 3 lbs. to a Customer."

Keeping Up With The Red Sox: The Boston Red Sox were in fourth place in the eight team American League, with a 13-12 record, three games behind the Chicago White Sox.

Angel Lush Cake - Quick Rice Pudding

Here are two delicious easy recipes for dessert that are great for the coming summer months. The first one is made with a store bought angel food cake from my friend Sally. The second one is for rice pudding that I recently found. Both only take minutes to prepare.

Angel Lush with Pineapple

1 10 ounce angel food cake
1 -20 ounce can crushed pineapple with juice (undrained)

1 package vanilla instant pudding
1 cup cool whip (whipped topping) any favorite berries

Mix the pineapple with juice and dry pudding mix. Gently stir in whipped topping and let stand five minutes.

Cut cake into three layers. Place bottom cake layer, cut side up on serving platter.

Spread 1 1/3 cups of the pudding mixture onto cake layer, then cover with middle cake layer. Spread one cup of pudding mixture onto middle cake layer. Top with remaining cake layer. Now spread the remaining pudding mixture.

Refrigerate at least one hour or until ready to serve. Garnish with your favorite seasonal berries.

Quick Rice Pudding

2 cups instant rice (such as Minute Rice)
1/2 cup vanilla ice cream
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Prepare the rice according to package directions. Add the ice cream and cinnamon. Place in individual bowls. Sprinkle extra cinnamon on top.

Morris Dancing Festival Comes To Quincy Saturday

The Red Herring Morris Dancers will hold their annual morris "Ale," or dance festival, Saturday, May 12, in a number of locations around Quincy.

Nine Morris Dance teams from as far away as New York, Vermont and Canada will display their talents at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Caddy Park, Marina Bay and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road will be open for tours on May 12 so tourists will be able to watch the 17th century-style dancing on the lawn of a 17th century mansion.

For those who are unfamiliar with morris dancing — meaning most of us — it's an old English custom in which the dancers often danced for church "ales," or festivals where the church sold ale to parishioners.

Dancers wear distinctive costumes or "kits," with pads on their shins consisting of small bells that announce the dancers' presence.

During the performance, dancers use wooden sticks that they strike together or wave handkerchiefs to embellish their steps and movements. Some teams incorporate wooden or metal "swords" in their dances.

Red Herring Morris, the host team, has held its annual ale in several different cities and towns in the Boston area since 1994. This will be their first visit to the South Shore.

Don Kent, Paul Benzaquin In Broadcasters Hall Of Fame

Two former Quincy radio and television personalities have been inducted into the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame.

Don Kent and Paul Benzaquin, both of whom grew up in Quincy, were among other broadcasters formally inducted Wednesday at a luncheon at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Kent began his weather forecasting career on radio station WJDA in September 1947 a few days after the new station went on the air.

His first broadcast was tracking a hurricane off the Florida Coast, but his on-air name was Don Dixon.

The Kent family owned the Kent rug outlet on Quincy Shore Drive. But one of the newscast sponsors was Sheridan's store in downtown Quincy which happened to sell rugs. So Kent's name was quickly changed to Don Dixon not to offend a sponsor.

Kent remained with WJDA until 1951 when he moved to WBZ radio, but still couldn't use his own name. Until 1955 he was known as "Weatherbee, the BZ Weatherman."

Finally, when he moved over to WBZ-TV, he got to be Don Kent and became one of the most personable TV personalities in New England.

DON KENT

Kent retired from WBZ-TV in 1983 but continued to do weather spots on WBZ radio from his North Weymouth home until his retirement in 1985. He now lives in Sanbarton, N.H.

In 1996, Gov. William Weld dedicated "Don Kent Park" at Wollaston Beach where the Kent rug outlet was located and from where he made his first weather broadcast for WJDA. The station went off the air last year after 59 years.

Benzaquin was a radio and television talk show host for more than 35 years, following publication of his book "Holocaust: Fire In Boston's Coconut Grove."

Before that he was a reporter and feature writer for the Boston Globe and later a columnist for the Boston Herald.

He first went on the air in 1960 on WEEL, then owned by CBS, on a program called "LISTEN" and remaining there until 1969.

He went to Chicago for a year as host of a late-night TV show for ABC. He then returned to Boston to host a television show on Ch. 7 and resumed his afternoon radio talk show on WEEL. He later hosted talk radio shows for WBZ, WHDH and WRKO.

He retired from radio in 1994 and now lives in Duxbury.

Also inducted into the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame are:

Bob Elliott, Ray Goulding (posthumously), Frank Avruch, Tom Bergeron, Jess Cain, Fred B. Cole, Joyce Kulhawik, Harold Segal, Rex Trailer, Liz Walker and Bob Wilson.

Sacred Heart School 'Queen For A Night' Fundraiser May 19

Sacred Heart PTO's third annual "Queen for a Night" fundraising event will be held on Sat., May 19 from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m., 370 Hancock St., North Quincy.

This event dedicated to and in celebration of women, will be an evening filled with fun and relaxation. "Queen for a Night: Tickled Pink!" will feature a fashion show by Caryn's Corner, wine tasting, complimentary spa treatments, food sampling, specialty vendors, a silent auction, raffles, hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar and much more.

Local businesses and service providers have generously donated their time and expertise to help to provide an evening of pampering where guests may sample a variety of massage techniques and healing modalities, enjoy facial treatments, or try out a new hair style. Jewelers, interior designers, florists and event planners will share their secrets of the trade.

Co-chairwoman Abby Kelliher explains, "We timed the event this year to coincide with Mother's Day gift-giving, so that mothers, grandmothers, and daughters could enjoy a fantastic evening of pampering especially for them."

Among the items up for bid in the silent auction include unique clothing from "Liv'n Out Loud!" Clothes for the Soul, original art and pottery, free event/function hall rental, handyman services, one hundred dollars in lottery tickets as well as the opportunity to be a guest at the 2008 St. Patrick's Day Breakfast hosted by Senator Jack Hart.

This highly anticipated event drew over 225 women last year; that number is expected to swell to over 300 this year.

"We have fine-tuned this event over the past three years and expect this year to be our biggest and best event yet," declared co-chairwoman Nancy Figueiredo.

Tickets are selling fast and can be obtained by calling (617) 328-3830. The cost of a ticket is $30 and all proceeds from the event will benefit Sacred Heart School.

Italian American Heroes Book Author At Library May 22

Italian Americans are the heroes of author Stephen Puleo's new book, The Boston Italians: A Story of Pride, Perseverance and Paesani.

Puleo will outline the background of his new book at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street on Tuesday, May 22 at 7 p.m. During his presentation, Puleo will relate the story of how Italian Americans transformed themselves from poor immigrants to influential American citizens.

Previously, Puleo

authored the book, Dark Tide: The Great Molasses Flood of 1919, an account of an early tragedy when a molasses flood rolled through Boston's streets drowning people in its wake.

At the library lecture, Puleo will trace the history of Italian Americans from their arrival in Boston to the Depression and through World War II. Copies of The Boston Italians will be available for sale at the lecture. For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit the library website at thomascranerlibrary.org.

Through Mayor's $32.8M Energy Initiative

Energy Improvements For 40 City Buildings

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Forty of the city's municipal buildings will soon undergo major energy improvements through Mayor William Phelan's $32.8 million energy initiative.

The funding will become available after Phelan signs off on the $32.8 million loan agreement at 4.24% interest with Honeywell Global Finance, LLC. He is expected to sign the documents on May 18.

Once the paperwork is finalized, Phelan said that the work should begin in June and be completed in 18 months.

The City Council unanimously approved the 20-year $32.8 million energy project agreement on May 7 on the recommendation of the Council's Finance Committee and Energy Committee.

The loan will finance energy improvements at 22 school buildings and 18 other city facilities, such as libraries, fire stations, the police station and City Hall.

Such improvements are expected to more than pay for the cost of the loan over the next 20 years, according to a team from Honeywell Building Solutions, the city's energy management contractor.

Under the plan guaranteed by Honeywell, the city's electricity usage will be reduced by 25%, fuel usage by 27% and water usage by 35% with energy savings of $1,078,700 a year and water revenue gains of $1,253,000 a year.

The scheduled improvements include new boilers in ten buildings, new roofs in seven buildings, new windows in six buildings as well as a change in 18,000 lighting fixtures and the upgrading of 1300 steam traps.

According to the plans, the city will, also, have a centralized energy management system capable of tracking energy costs on completion.

"Over the term of 20 years, the savings generated will pay for the $32.8 million investment, reduce emissions and the results are guaranteed," according to Honeywell studies presented recently to the City Council by Kris Sticinski, Honeywell's Boston General Manager, and Doreen Hamilton, Sales Account Manager.

"They're guaranteeing $1 million a year in energy savings," Assistant City Solicitor Robert Quinn said in describing the project last week. He added that such savings could go as high as $2 million in future years.

Honeywell Building Solutions was chosen to assess and manage the city's energy program after a review of the five firms which responded to Quincy's Request for Qualifications (RFQ) on energy solutions last fall.

"We did go through that process," Quinn said of the RFQ, adding that Honeywell guaranteed the energy savings. "They will pay us."

As a result, Honeywell Building Solutions will act as the city's contractor and select sub-contractors privately for the work.

The energy loan is allowed under recent state legislation exempting certain energy savings projects from the state's bidding mandates and allowing municipalities to negotiate tax-exempt loans to finance energy savings projects.

Honeywell Business Solutions will act as the contractor and oversee the entire project, selecting sub-contractors as needed.

According to Quinn, Honeywell will not be subject to the state's public bidding laws in choosing contractors. However, he said that the contract will require all companies to adhere to prevailing wage standards as well as Quincy's Responsible Employee Ordinance.

Quinn noted that the contract does not require that the loan be originated through the company's finance arm, Honeywell Global Finance, LLC.

"The rate that Honeywell is giving us is as good or better (than other banks or firms)," Quinn said.

Honeywell's Sticinski also stated this week. "The city has a choice to use any lender they chose."

The city will pay $700,000 in interest only for the first two payments due December 1, 2007 and June 1, 2008. By December, 2008, the city's first full payment of $2,780,000 will be due. That will be the highest payment of the 20 year loan.

"We start making a profit in the ninth year," Quinn said. In that year, the energy savings total begins outstripping the payment totals.

Mayor Phelan was able to set the May 18 date because the City Council approved the $32.8 million loan on May 7. The vote was unanimous.

The Finance Committee began a review of the proposal in March. After the March meeting, City Council President Douglas Gutro appointed a 12-member Energy Committee which recommended passage by the City Council.

Prior to the council's vote, Energy Committee Chairman John Keenan outlined his committee's recommendations which suggest that a "point" person, such as a clerk of the works, be appointed to oversee the $32.8 million outlay.

Among other recommendations, the Energy Committee members asked that detailed specifications of all purchases be provided prior to purchase and installation.

Last week, Quinn said the energy loan payments are not in the mayor's 2008 budget because the City Council passed the $32.8 million energy measure on May 7, the same night as the mayor's budget presentation.

City Kicks Off Beautification Program

Mayor William Phelan, DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell, and Park Director Mark Jaehnig have kicked off the spring beautification efforts with members of Local 1139.

Crews will be bust throughout the city sweeping streets, planting flowers, cutting grass, and removing litter and an effort to keep Quincy looking clean and attractive.

"Quincy is a clean and safe city because of the hard work of our employees," said Phelan. "Our crews take great pride in keeping our city looking great and it shows. I also want to thank those who participate in our Adopt-an-Island program for helping us make Quincy a cleaner and greener place to live."

Street sweepers have been throughout Quincy neighborhoods over the past month. They will continue their schedule until every street in every neighborhood is swept. Sweepers also do regular cleaning of main roadways throughout Quincy on a weekly basis.

The Park Department is undertaking the flower planting efforts with direction from Frank McLaughlin. McLaughlin was the long-time Tree Warden for the city who now helps the city select and plant flowers to plant throughout the city.

Cutting, mowing, and cleaning crews will be working six and seven days a week to keep Quincy clean and beautiful throughout the upcoming year.

"When compared to other communities, and especially with other urban centers, I believe that Quincy does an outstanding job in keeping our city beautiful," said Phelan. "It's something that our citizens and workers take pride in and we will continue our efforts to improve our great city."

Crews from the Cemetery Department are preparing the municipal cemeteries for Memorial Day.

Blaze Threatened 11 Lives

Council Honors Cab Driver For Heroic Actions At Fire

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The City Council recently honored Quincy cabdriver Charlie Hattenburg for his "heroic act and quick-thinking" when a fire threatened the lives of 11 people on April 13.

In the pre-dawn hours that Friday, Hattenburg spotted black smoke billowing out of the top of the three-family house at 4 Merrymount Avenue.

Hattenburg immediately called 911, entered the building and roused the occupants. He then calmed two residents who were about to jump off the roof of the building and he tried, unsuccessfully, to find a ladder.

Within minutes, Quincy firefighters from Group 3 arrived at the scene in response to Hattenburg's 911 call. Lt. Ronnie Shannon and firefighters Paul Kearns, Mark Paolucci and Jack Cadigan rescued the victims from the roof and the unit extinguished the fire.

After the firefighters arrived, Hattenburg left the fire scene and drove off in his cab. But the 58-year-old cabby wasn't anonymous for long.

"The Quincy police tracked me down," Hattenburg said last week. "I used my cell phone and they traced it."

Once he was identified, media reunited him with the Merrymount Avenue families and his story hit newspapers, local television and CNN news reports and calls swamped Yellow Cab headquarters in Quincy.

At the City Council meeting on May 7, Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin presented Hattenburg with a citation for "Outstanding Service to the Community," which reads in part, "We wish to honor you today and express how proud we are to have you as a member of our community."

Councillors stood and applauded Hattenburg as did his wife Denise, three of his five children, and 10 of his 23 grandchildren, several co-workers and Yellow Cab General Manager Wayne McCulley.

McCulley then commended his driver and said that officials at Granite Links Golf Course, also, wanted to salute Hattenburg so they sent a certificate for a free round of golf for four, along with a golf cart for the foursome's use.

"He's an avid golfer,"

McCulley said and added, "It's so nice to hear a positive story today."

Contacted after the meeting, Hattenburg was asked to relate his experience. He insisted that, in the same circumstances, anybody would react as he did.

"It was still dark," Hattenburg said, but he saw smoke funnels rising only from the top of the building. The clouds got thicker as he approached. He used his cell phone to report the fire, then went up on the porch and into the building.

"There was no smoke or smell of fire (on the lower levels)," Hattenburg said, adding that the building's "smoke detectors never went off. The people on the first floor didn't believe me."

"I'm not kidding you," Hattenburg told them, "your house is on fire." He finally convinced them to flee and they left as did the second floor occupants when he woke them.

By that time, two third floor residents could not escape through the stairs and they fled to the roof.

It's not the first time that Hattenburg and his cab have been at a bad scene at the right time. He's driven taxis for 17 years. During that time, he has seen a lot. Nearly a decade ago, Hattenburg pulled the driver from a car that had plunged over an embankment near Hanover.

Now, the City Council citation will be hung on a special wall in his Brook Road home by his wife. "She's already planning a collage (of the news stories and pictures)."

After the story hit the news wires, Yellow Cab dispatcher Larry Cavanaugh was deluged with calls from news outlet, Hattenburg's friends, and his regular fares. Now, Cavanaugh teases Hattenburg, telling him that he is his press agent.

And now, while he's on his 12-hour shifts for Yellow Cab, he's recognized as Quincy's famous cabbie.

After the recent City Council ceremony, his riders told him, "I saw you on Community Access." Others, he said will look at him and say, "I know who you are. You saved all those people."

"It helps with the tips," laughed Hattenburg as he insisted again, "Anybody would do the same thing."

Actually, McCulley said that all the drivers of his 55 car fleet do keep alert 24-hours a day and try to report any incidents that require police or fire department response. In the past, they participated in Neighborhood Watch.

"This is our community," McCulley said, noting that his taxi drivers are in all parts of the city all through the night and day.

Quincy Fire Department's Group 3 was on duty during the May 7 City Council meeting and their commendation was postponed. City Council President Douglas Gutfreid has scheduled a ceremony for the firefighters on May 21.

Council Approves $1M For New Track At Pageant Field

at Pageant Field

• improvements to the Ryan Boathouse area

Park Board members approved the Pageant Field site May 8 with restrictions on fencing and new structures as well as the requirement that all concerns raised by the Adams family be addressed.

Chairman Bryant Carter and Commissioners Connie Driscoll and Betty DeChristofaro attended Monday's meeting but did not address the council.

Councillors questioned Murphy as to the sources of funding for the removal and relocation of the softball fields, the park department vehicles and the construction of a senior/teen center.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly asked Murphy why the administration had proceeded on the Adams site without contacting the family.

"How could you allow that to happen?" Kelly asked.

Council President Gutro cited the Adams/Phelan agreement that requires tree plantings throughout the area and asked Murphy, "Do we have your assurances the tree money (account) will not be raided for this at the expense of tree (planting) through the city?"

"The goal is to finish this project within the budget provided," Murphy said.

At this time, $250,000 is already available for the track project. Of that sum, $121,000 has already been encumbered to pay the track design firm, according to Councillor Michael McFarland.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond proposed the five-part motion voted by seven councillors which conditions the approval on additional information and approvals. The bond issue must now be approved by a formal vote of the City Council.

Raymond's motion requires that the mayor's office provide such new information as a detailed design plan for the track, plans for the relocation of softball fields, financing sources for the construction of a senior-teen center at Pageant Field, and a letter of approval of the plans from the Adams Historical Society and environmental agencies.

Several councillors said that Pageant Field was not their first choice for the new track but all the councillors at the meeting said they wanted the project to move forward as soon as possible.

"It's regrettable that it's taken so long," Gutro said, noting this was his third approval of a track project. "We've already said yes twice before. We're on the third shot."

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, also, agreed that he, too, wanted the city to "have that track as soon as possible."

Pageant Field was not the first choice for either Councillor John Keenan or Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin but both supported Raymond's motion.

"My concern is that we don't rush it; we do it right. We don't want to figure it out as we go along," Keenan said after calling the proposed track site "an absolutely spectacular spot."

All nine city councillors are members of the City Council Finance Committee. Seven members approved Raymond's motion. Absent was Councillor Joseph Finn who was unable to attend due to business in Colorado.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee called the track "a political football." McNamee was absent for the 7-0 vote which conditionally approved the track funding.

"Bond counsel is required to do this," McNamee said before he voted against an earlier motion which required proof that the school building bond will be reduced by the $1 million set aside for an athletic track.

That vote was 7-1.

Fr. McCarthy Recovering From Injuries In Falls

Rev. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church, is recovering from injuries suffered in falls.

John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, said Fr. McCarthy "came through surgery well and is in good spirits" but is expected to be at the rehabilitation hospital five weeks.

He is at RHCI, Rehabilitation Hospital for Cape Cod and the Islands.

The address is 311 Service Rd., East Sandwich, MA, 02537.

Emergency Response Training Class June 5

Mayor William Phelan announces classes for the New Version of Citizens Emergency Response Team (CERT) will be held Tuesday, June 5 from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex, 1 Merrymount Parkway.

Any person 18 years or over is welcome to attend, but those interested must call Quincy Emergency Management Agency at 617-376-1105 before May 31 to register.

The CERT members will help the Public Safety Department during storms when needed. Some of the areas that will be covered during the classes will be instruction on the operation of HAM radios and demonstrations from the Fire and Police Departments.

CERT students will be taught systems for accessing updates from the Health Department on the pandemic flu and the latest procedures in CPR and First Aid.

Sacred Heart Parish Good Friday Walk For Por Cristo

On Good Friday approximately 50 parishioners of Sacred Heart Parish in North Quincy walked five miles to raise funds for Por Cristo.

Por Cristo is a non-profit, medical volunteer services organization in the field of international health. It was founded by the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston in response to the 1979 visit to Boston of Pope John Paul II, who challenged the people of Boston to share their abundance with those in need, particularly in Latin America. For the past 20 years, Por Cristo has been working to meet that challenge.

Sacred Heart's parishioners gathered on the stairs of Sacred Heart School for a picture and a blessing. Father John O'Brien began the event by asking God to bless those who walked and those who would be helped by the funds raised in this walk.

Dr. Mark Jaehnig led all the walkers and he carried the cross throughout the entire five mile route. Everyone who walked would like to also thank the Quincy Police Officers on the bicycle detail who stopped traffic and insured that everyone crossed the many busy streets safely.

While all the participants traveled five miles, not all did so on their feet. There were young boys who "walked" on rollerblades, two young girls who bicycled and two little ones who were pushed in carriages. The smallest "walker" was Stephen Cuniff, who was less than a year old. His mom, Patrice Cuniff pushed him in his stroller the entire five miles and his brother Daniel walked as well. The dean of the walkers was Rosemary Feeny. She is a long time supporter of Por Cristo. She has participated in the walk for over 20 years. She spoke of how important it was to her to know that 92% of all the money she raised would be used to help people in need. According to Father O'Brien over $1,500 was raised for Por Cristo.

Students from Sacred Heart School participated in the walk as well. Matthew Licari, Abigail Yotts, Amanda Brandi, Julianne Downey, Caitlin Bulger and Eileen O'Connor were some of the middle school students who walked. Younger students who participated were Michael O'Brien, Matthew Keohane and Matthew Brandi.

It was a brisk and windy day for a walk, however, everyone was quite pleased to be out raising money for Por Cristo, an organization that does so much good for so many people.

Por Cristo works with a variety of partners in delivering healthcare services. Here are several examples of their recent activities.

- Tuberculosis is a growing problem for countries like Ecuador where education and medications are often lacking. Por Cristo is helping to train local community health promoters to educate, identify, and help treat TB and other respiratory diseases.

- Many clinics and hospitals in Ecuador are lacking the appropriate medical equipment, supplies and medications to treat patients effectively. Por Cristo has been collaborating with multiple generous partners to face this ongoing challenge and has sent equipment, supplies and medications via air and sea to many clinics outside both Guayaquil and Quito, Ecuador.

- In many impoverished areas of Ecuador, there is a vicious cycle of malnutrition and poverty. Por Cristo is working to develop a self-sustainable micro enterprise for mothers to learn how to bake and then sell nutritional breads in order to break this vicious cycle and to build self-esteem.

- The Por Cristo Nutrition Team, started in 1994, continues to grow strong with the development of new projects. This team continues to focus on preventive care and education to combat malnutrition on the Isla Trinitaria. In addition to the direct care, educational classes, nutritional supplements, medications, and food are provided.

- Improving burn care for children continues to be a priority for Por Cristo health professionals in Ecuador.

Koch Launches New Phase In Mayoral Campaign

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch announced Tuesday he is opening a new phase of his campaign that includes outdoor coffee hours, meetings with neighborhood groups, and grassroots door-knocking in every neighborhood in the city.

"The energy in our city for positive change is very real," Koch said. "People are ready for leadership that treats people respectfully, listens to their concerns, and has the experience to work together to solve any number of issues facing our city."

Koch, Quincy's Park Commissioner until resigning in January to run for mayor, said he has to date attended more than 50 coffee hours, visited almost every senior building in the city, and knocked on over 500 doors over the last few weeks.

In his visits with residents,

Koch speaks about his experience serving under three mayors and his beliefs that leadership can transform many of the city's problems into opportunities.

"I know we can do better for Quincy, and everyday people who believe in a better Quincy are coming on board," he said. "There's an incredible grassroots energy to this campaign and we're going to be working the next several months to spread the message across the city."

In an effort to meet as many Quincy residents as possible before summer, Koch announced that he will continue to attend coffee hours "as long as people keep scheduling them."

Koch said he enjoys coffee hours because it gives him a chance to discuss his platform with a small group of 10 to 20 people but still provides a venue for answering questions one-on-one.

"Answering questions directly is a big part of being mayor, and there is no better venue for that give-and-take than coffee hours," Koch said.

As warmer weather takes over, Koch said coffee hours will likely move from kitchens and living rooms to porches and back yards. Koch joked that coffee often is mandatory for the social gatherings.

"I wouldn't mind changing them to Root Beer Float hours for the summer," he mused.

Anyone interested in hosting a coffee hours should contact Koch headquarters at 617-472-1306 or visit online, www.kochforquincy.com.

Local Business Leaders Attend Breakfast On Healthcare Reform

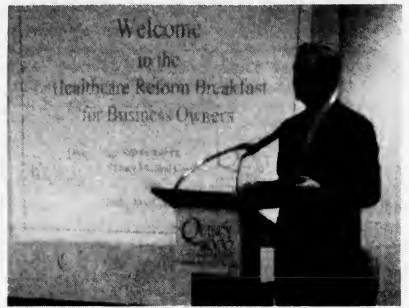

Nearly 100 local business owners and managers recently gathered at the President's Place Conference Center in Quincy Center with one common question in mind - How will the current healthcare reform impact my business?

The business leaders were attendees at a Business Owner's Breakfast on Healthcare Reform, co-sponsored by Quincy Medical Center and Quincy 2000.

The breakfast was designed to help demystify the current healthcare reform legislation for local business owners and to offer practical information about the responsibilities and obligations for local businesses - of all sizes - under the new healthcare reform law.

Topics covered during the breakfast included a review of the state's new Commonwealth Care and Commonwealth Choice insurance products, as well as subsidies available through the Commonwealth Insurance Partnership, a state and federally funded program that helps qualified businesses with uninsured employees and the self-employed to pay for health insurance.

The event included a

Quincy Credit Union Makes John Adams $1 Coin Available

In conjunction with the United States Mint Launch of the John Adams Presidential $1 Coin, the Quincy Credit Union will participate by distributing a complimentary John Adams Coin to the first 500 members that visit QCU on Tuesday, May 22, during business hours.

There will be one coin for each of the first 500 members while supplies last. The United States Mint has selected Quincy as the site for the national launch of the new $1 coin, which will be released to the general public.

This is the first time President John Adams has been honored with a regularly circulated coin or paper note. Research commissioned by the United States Mint indicates that the Presidential $1 Coin will be widely popular, similar to the 50 State Quarters Program that has attracted 140 million collectors.

Quincy Credit Union will have these historic coins available to members for sale or exchange beginning today (Thursday).

Membership is available to those who reside or work in Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, Dorchester and any family members. Quincy Credit Union is located at 100 Quincy Avenue, Quincy.

"It's Wrong to Vote on Rights."

Peter Hams

"My two moms have been together for 24 years. Seeing my parents get married in 2004 was one of the best days of my life."

It was great for the whole world to see that we're a family, and to have the same protections under the law that other families have. If all this was taken away from us, it would be devastating - to us and to many other families.

I don't think it's a good idea to vote on anyone's rights. It's just not American."

Some people think they should vote on whether Peter's moms should be married. State legislators are deciding whether or not to put a Constitutional amendment on the 2008 ballot that would take the right to marry away from same-sex couples - and with it, all the important protections for them and their children.

If you believe it's wrong to vote on rights, we need your help. Please ask your state representative and state senator to vote against this discriminatory Constitutional amendment.

OPINION

Firefighters Union Head Speaks Out On Health Care Plan

By ERNEST M. ARIENTI
President, Local 792
Quincy Fire Fighters Association

I feel it is time to respond to all the rumors that have been circulating about the Health Care Plan for the employees of the City of Quincy.

First, I would like to explain how the City and the Employees have gotten to the plan we now have. Years ago, the city had numerous plans that you as an employee could pick from to meet your needs. The expense of all these plans were getting too costly and the companies all wanted more members in their plan, so something needed to be done.

The then Mayor of the city met with all the City Unions and a Health Advisory Committee was established. This committee comprised of Union members and management members. This committee took all the plans and dissected them all to put a plan together, a plan that would appeal to all members, and did an excellent job at it.

This plan then went out for a bid and that is why we now have one company for all employees including management in this city, which has saved the city millions of dollars over the years. This was a combined effort by both management and labor.

Then back in the 1990s, the City again came to the unions during negotiations and stated about the fiscal crisis that the city was in. We realized what was at stake and needed to be done. We again helped out the city and agreed to a zero percent pay raise, and that was during negotiations. Therefore, that goes to show that we are not only there for ourselves but for the citizens also.

Now here we are again. The employees are being made out to be the bad guys, as if we have no concerns for the citizens of Quincy. This is 100 percent wrong. This is about the employees being told to take a pay cut. You are being told that this is only a 10 percent increase, but this actually a 123 percent increase to our members.

Also, over the course of the past three years, because the claims of the members have been lower than expected, we have left approximately $3 million dollars in the city coffers that we have agreed through our Bargaining Agreement that we would not get refunded for. This leaves the city the ability to use this money for other than health insurance. Through the city keeping this money, the employees are not paying 10%, but actually already paying 15% on our health care cost.

There has also been discussion about the State Group Insurance Commission (GIC). This is about going into the state health insurance plans and the cost should be less because of the larger pool of employees.

First is the makeup of the commission instead of being made up of a cross section of management and labor, it is mostly management. Labor will have no say in what will happen with our plans and the cost. At any time the state can change the co-payments and deductibles to what ever they want and labor has no recourse. Also, as the old proverb goes, "You get what you pay for." If the employees were to try and get a plan close to what we have now there would be very little if any savings with the state. Therefore, as you can see at this point, it is not a bargain as you have been told.

Now let us put all these rumors to bed and get on with business so that we can keep this great city moving in the right direction.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a request of Jervin & Veronica Erasquin, doing business as JNJ Turo Turo, 143 Water St. for a common victualer license. It was formerly a beauty salon.

•Granted a change of DBA from Honey Cafe to South Garden Seafood Restaurant, Kam Man Plaza, Quincy Ave. Matthew Thoi, manager.

•Granted a change of managers at Pat Flanagan's Parkingway, from James Lee to Austin O'Malley. Lee was manager for 20 years, and will still be part of the business. He thanked the board for their support. Police Chief Robert Crowley said he was always "well appreciated which speaks loudly for Lee."

•Granted Eileen McGrath, manager of The Half Door, 15-14 Hancock St. a Mimosa/brunch license on Sundays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

•Granted a change of Beneficial Ownership of the Marriott Hotel Services Inc. 1000 Marriott Drive, to Sunstone Wharf LLC Operation. Atty. Andrew Upton, counsel.

•Granted a one day alcoholic license to Jeanne

Allard, Quincy Animal Shelter, for the 2nd Annual Wine Tasting Fundraiser at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St. Sept. 14 from 6 to 9 p.m.

•Granted Stephen Smith of Steve's Auto Sales, 291 Water St. a Motor II, used car and garage repair license and the storage of 12 cars, 10 outside and four inside.

Vets Adviser At COA Office

John D. Miller of Home Care Partners, will be at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., each Wednesday to advise veterans or their surviving spouses of their in-home care benefits.

To schedule an appointment, call 617-376-1506.

Proposed 'Hot Pot' Chinese Restaurant Raises Concerns

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO
A Chinese "hot pot" restaurant proposed at 397 Hancock St., North Quincy, has raised concerns by Sacred Heart Church, and others.

A hearing on the license sought by Jimmy Liang, was continued until June 5 by the License Board Tuesday.

Board members had questions over a proposed open patio, location of dumpsters and deliveries at the former massage parlor.

Atty. Paul Hines, counsel for the Sacred Heart Church, said the church had not received proper notification of the proposal. Liang said he sent copies from the newspaper notice clippings to friends and neighbors around the church. The church said notification should have been sent to them.

Hines said the church was concerned with dumpsters and cars in the middle of Hancock St., and off street parking.

Hines said the proposed restaurant is across the street from the Sacred Heart Chapel and called it "detrimental to religious services, prayer groups and youth chapel."

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who while complimenting Liang on his "gold standard" of doing business in the city, and supporting his common victualer license, he said he had concerns over serving beer and wine.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said he was concerned over the "noise level near residents" and said he had a problem with closing at 11 p.m.

He said when there are outdoor patios, patrons seem to "gravitate outside".

Jay Duca, director of inspectional services motioned to continue until the issues of deliveries, dumpsters, patio and an egress were discussed.

Liang said his deliveries would be made in the back of the building on the Billings Road side.

Second Public Hearing May 21 On Urban Revitalization Plan

The Quincy City Council will hold a second Public Hearing on proposed revisions to the City's Urban Revitalization District Plan (URDP) Monday May 21 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The city's Planning and Community Development Department, acting as the city's Urban Renewal Agency, is proposing the adoption of a URDP or renewal district for a significant portion of Quincy Center.

Once adopted, the plan will be submitted to the state's Department of Housing and Community Development for final approval.

According to city planners, the city's efforts over the last 36 to revitalize the city's business district have not been successful and will require some public investment. Designation as a URDP district will allow public investment. The purpose of the URDP is to set forth a series of initiatives intended to stimulate investment in Quincy Center.

Copies of the URDP revised district map and application may be reviewed at the office of City Clerk at City Hall or in the Thomas Crane Public Library at 40 Washington Street or online at <http://www.ci.quincy.ma.us/>.

Damp House? Check Heating System

Q. In your response to the homeowner who was experiencing sticky wood surfaces and sagging floors, you stated that high humidity could be the reason, and that several factors could cause the humidity, such as blocked attic vents. Your piece did mention heating equipment (such as heat/hot water boilers) as a possible source, but not effectively. The humidity situation could also be caused by infiltration of exhaust gases from heating equipment into the living areas. This can cause deadly dangerous conditions, particularly to sleeping persons.

A friend of mine had a similar moisture situation 20 years ago in a house he purchased. The professionals he hired couldn't find the cause. Eventually, he located it himself: Critters nesting in his chimney had blocked the exiting gases, causing them to back up into his home. Additionally, in cold climates, snow can block exhaust vents; building specifications in the Northeast were only recently changed to prevent this kind of occurrence.

Another danger I believe needs attention is crumbling chimney stacks. In the Northeast, many "oil burners" have been converted to gas. These gas heaters are routinely hooked up to the pre-existing brick chimneys. Gas exhaust is cleaner, but more chemically corrosive and "wetter" than oil exhaust. It also condenses earlier than oil exhaust, leaving chemical deposits on the upper half of the chimney that break down the mortar and bricks much faster.

"Critters" and debris-blocked chimneys are just two among a litany of "quiet" problems that can develop in any home. I hope these are worth considering. — Rich L., Quincy, Mass.

A. They are definitely worth considering! Rich, thank you for bringing this potentially life-saving information to readers.

What's On Tap For The Modern Day Home?

Step into a modern home and take a look around. You'll likely see features such as architectural lighting, security cameras, and whole-house sound and video that until recently could be found only in luxury homes. Networked by structured cabling built into the walls or advanced wireless networks, these once-pricey amenities are now included on the menu for most new homebuyers, and are revolutionizing the way we live our lives.

In 2005, for example, 80% of homebuilders offered monitored security; 74% multi-room audio; and 69% home theaters, according to the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB). Lighting controls, home automation and energy management weren't far behind.

Lighting Controls

- Let you custom design sophisticated lighting scenes to fit every room and mood.
- Can be operated from a convenient remote control.
- Can turn lights on and off from anywhere in the house.

- Improve security, safety, and efficiency by automatically turning on outdoor lights and lights by doorways, halls, and other locations when people are present, and off again after they leave.
- Conserve energy and save money.

Security Cameras

- Provide high-quality color video output.
- Come in both outdoor and indoor models that can be discretely hidden.

- Can be monitored from inside the house or anywhere in the world over the Internet.
- Are excellent for security, or for just checking up on the kids.

Energy Management

- Helps conserve energy and saves you money by keeping lights and HVAC low when you are away from the home or sleeping.
- Can entitle you to a tax break.

Intercom System

- Interfaces with the home's telephone, audio, video, and surveillance systems for added convenience and security.
- Doubles as between-room monitors and intercoms.

- Can provide a helpful visible alert by activating lighting when visitors arrive.

Whole-House Audio and Video

- Plays your favorite music (CDs, MP3s, radio), movies (DVDs, DVRs), or cable/satellite feeds in any room in the house.
- Frees you from iPods, laptops, or boom boxes.
- Can be hidden in ceilings and walls, for an uncluttered, wire-free appearance.

Home Theater

- Provides real movie theater atmosphere right in your own home with large flat-screen televisions, surround sound, and even special seating.

Protect Valuable Electronics From Power Surge

Microchips—you'll find them everywhere in the modern household. Even everyday appliances like air conditioners and refrigerators use them.

There's only one problem: microchips are notoriously susceptible to power surges. One good jolt and your new giant flat panel TV or wholesale sound system can be toast—very expensive toast. And, contrary to popular opinion, lightning is not the most common cause of power surges. According to the Leviton Institute, 80% of temporary power surges come from inside the home, when appliances like refrigerators, washing machines or even laser printers cycle on and off.

What You Don't See Can

Hurt You

While less dramatic than a direct lightning strike that takes out everything in its path, everyday household dips and spikes in voltage do their damage over time, insidiously eroding performance of electronic components and especially sensitive gear like computers. Do the words "hard drive crash" strike fear into your heart?

Fortunately, surge protective devices (SPDs) offer outstanding protection from power surges, safeguarding your expensive appliances, electronics, and computers, and the irreplaceable information stored on them.

How They Work

SPDs are the wallflowers

of the electrical world. Most of the time, they sit there, unnoticed. Until you need them, that is; then, in the space of nanoseconds, they spring into action. A metal oxide varistor or gas discharge arrestor in the SPD diverts the potentially destructive surge of voltage to the ground wire, where it is safely channeled away.

SPDs come in a wide range of models to fit every budget. While they all offer protection, a whole-house network combining layers of SPDs provides protection in depth, and should stop anything short of a direct lightning hit.

Power Strip SPDs

- Are priced from $15 to $100, depending on features.

Reverse

Mortgage Topic

Ed Barrett, a reverse mortgage specialist, will discuss his specialty on the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 1 p.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy. A reverse mortgage allows seniors to convert a portion of their home equity into tax free cash. For an appointment, call Ann Bruce at 617-376-1506.

Surge Protective Receptacles

- Install in place of regular outlets.
- Keep your floor clear of wires.
- Offer sleek designer styling as well as ample protection.

Surge Panel and Meter Adaptors

- Meter Socket Surge Adaptors form a powerful first line of defense outside the house, and can be installed by your utility company.
- Panel-Mounted Surge Protectors, installed by a professional electrician near the breaker box, will tame most powerful surges before they can reach your valuable electronics.

Quincy Credit Union Holds Real Estate Education Seminar

Quincy Credit Union recently presented a Real Estate Education Seminar for consumers to learn about how the mortgage process works, what they need to know and how they can make the mortgage process a simple and easy experience.

QCU presented experts from the real estate and mortgage industry and they were on hand for a panel discussion.

Attorney John Nelson, a senior partner from Nelson and Roach Attorney, spoke of the importance retaining a lawyer to protect your interest during the real estate purchase. He stressed awareness of what you sign, because it's easy to get caught up in the excitement of purchasing your home and not realize the legality of the documents.

Mike Allanach, vice president of Allanach Mortgage explained the large variety of mortgage products available to suit many financial situations. Since the majority of the audience members were First Time Home Buyers, he talked about the benefits that come with first time homebuyers products.

Three key points during the presentation where the importance were: get pre-qualified, whatever you think your monthly mortgage payment may be, put it in a savings account to see if you can live without it and finally, don't start rate shopping before you get pre-qualified and know what you can afford. The rates will most likely change before you receive a commitment letter.

Aaron Adler, from Appraisals Unlimited, clarified the common misconception about appraisals versus assessed value of homes. Also participating on the panel were a home inspector and a Realtor who each offered insight on their respective specialty. QCU real estate staff contributed to the question and answer section of the seminar providing the audience with valuable information.

A limited supply of free Mortgage packets and gift bags are available at QCU with the information from the seminar including resources from Fannie Mae Foundation. Email marketing@qcu.org or call 617-479-5558 to request a mortgage packet.

Quincy Credit Union offers membership to those who work or reside in Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, Dorchester and any family Member. Quincy Credit Union is located at 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

EXPERTS FROM the real estate and mortgage industry address participants at a real estate education seminar recently presented by Quincy Credit Union.

Just like Family

by Jay

With James it wasn't about making a sale, it was about developing a relationship with us. He had the ability to walk into a house and see its' potential. He took the time to get to know what we wanted, a family-friendly atmosphere with room for the kids to play. He found us our dream home and even came by three months later to help open our pool! He wasn't just our CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent, he became our friend.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, May 4, at approximately 12:15 a.m., Officers Dan Parisi, Ron McKim and Chuck Landry were dispatched to the area of 10 Copeland St. for a report of a "male and female disorder in the street." As the officers were enroute, dispatch informed them that the female was standing in the middle of the street screaming for help. The officers arrived on scene and separated a male and a female. The female was hysterical and crying.

LT. DAN MINTON

Once the Officers were able to calm her, she said that she was headed home on the bus from Ashmont Station when she observed a male get on the bus, making it clear that she did not speak with him at any time. The female/victim said that she got off the bus on Copeland Street and noticed that the man also got off. She said that as she started to walk towards her home, the male suspect followed, attempting to speak with her.

The victim stated that she was concerned for her safety and began to yell for help in the middle of the street, while walking in a different direction from her house. She was able to flag down a motorist who called "911" for help. Officer Parisi interviewed the suspect, who stated that he met the victim in a bar in Ashmont and she invited him back to her place in Quincy. He said she began to "freak out" when they got off the bus.

Officer Parisi did not believe suspect's story. First, the victim had not been drinking, however the suspect had a strong odor of alcoholic beverage emitting from him. The victim was carrying a bag full of school books. The bottom line for the Officers was that the victim was fearful and did not want to be with the suspect, who was 6'1 and 210 pounds! The suspect did not have an extensive record and there were no warrants. Since no crime actually took place, the suspect's information was taken and he was sent on his way. The victim was transported home.

In this case, the victim made smart, rational decisions under stressful conditions. She quickly assessed the situation and realized that she was being followed and harassed in an area where no one was around. Very important; she did not wait for the circumstances to escalate. She took immediate action by yelling for help and then walking in the middle of the street.

This was a good move because it reduced the chances of her being dragged into a yard or hidden area. It put her in the open so that someone who heard yelling would be able to see her. It also forced any traffic to stop, which resulted in the "911" call.

The victim also led the suspect away from her home, so that she wouldn't have to fear retaliation from him. Under the circumstances, the victim took steps to protect herself before something happened.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY, 5:09 p.m., Maywood Ave. and Whitwell St. Broken nose. Incident occurred on Whitwell St. near Maywood Ave.

LARCENY, 6:53 p.m., Beale St. and Greenwood Ave. Female was walking when a male grabbed her pocketbook. Happened half hour ago. White male, 18 years old, thin build, last seen wearing white ball cap, white shirt with blue design and blue jeans. Suspect fled down Greenwood Ave. after grabbing a coin purse out of victim's hand; contained about $30 in cash and an empty Charlie MBTA card. No ID; purse is a Coach, color brown.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 8:37 p.m., Holyoke St. Running. Dented car now running with five yours. Running toward Newbury Ave. Damaged car jumping on it.

LARCENY, 9:21 p.m., Stop & Shop Supermarket, 495 Hancock St. Past.

FRIDAY, MAY 11

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 6:35 a.m., Hancock St. and Maple St. Punched a car. Male party walking down street. Arrest for malicious damage to a motor vehicle.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 6:43 a.m., 7 Farnum St. House. Someone threw paint all over house, front of house.

gency use or ask a friend if they have an old cell phone they no longer use. Although there may be no service to make or receive calls, all cell phones can be used to call "911." Lastly, look for a fire alarm box. This would be considered an emergency and the Police respond with the Fire Department.

QUICK ACTION: On Wednesday, May 2, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Officer Dan Francis was dispatched to a West Quincy address to investigate a missing person report. Officer Francis learned from family members that their 85-year-old mother, who suffers from dementia, walked away from their home and said that she was going to the ocean to kill herself.

As Officer Francis provided a description and obtained a photo of the victim to be dispersed to all Officers, Sgt. Sean Duggan scanned the home with an infrared camera, which detects body heat, to be sure that she was not hiding in the house. Lt. John Steele arrived on scene and created a perimeter of officers and assigned officers to the beach and Black's Creek area in the event that she made it to the water's edge.

All available officers are used when someone goes missing. In this case, the Community Policing Unit and various Detective Units joined patrol Officers in the search. State Police K-9 units were enroute and the State Police Search Team, in training at the Blue Hills, prepared to head to Quincy.

Less than 30 minutes later, Officer Matt Tobin found the lady by the War Memorial near the stadium and she was transported to the Quincy Medical Center for evaluation.

"Nice Work" goes out to all Officers and Communication personnel who assisted in finding this lady, who was clearly heading to the Ocean.

This lady is a great candidate for the H.E.L.P. (Handicapped-Elderly-Lost Person) program. This Quincy Police Department program is free and available to citizens of any age, who may have a tendency to wander from their home, community program or medical facility in Quincy. Possible reasons for wandering are Alzheimer's Disease, Dementia and Autism.

This program is also available to those with other medical issues, as well as the mentally challenged. The purpose of this program is to assist the Police and other emergency personnel in locating and returning these citizens home safely.

The H.E.L.P. program is free and it is simple to register. An officer will set up an appointment with the individual to take a digital photo and then complete the application.

Each individual will receive a gray rubber bracelet with the inscription, "H.E.L.P. 617 479 1212." With this information, the Police Department could locate the missing person quicker by distributing the individual's picture and information to Patrol Officers and emergency personnel.

Ideally, a citizen, who recognizes that an individual is having a problem and is wearing the bracelet, would call the Quincy Police. Officers will be able to cross-reference the information and safely return the individual to their home or medical facility.

To set up an appointment, contact either: Lieutenant Dan Minton at: 617 745 5719
Carol Flynn at: 617 745 5700 (4 - 12 P.M.)

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Total Nutrition Weighing In

By MINDY HERMANN (NAPS) — My friends and I used to enjoy comparing our weight to so-called "ideal" weight charts. We spent a lot of time making sure that our height was accurate and trying to figure out whether our frame was small, medium or large. Figuring out your recommended (or ideal) weight is easier today using body mass index (BMI) charts that are available online and in brochures.

Body weight is important because it is linked to good health. People who maintain a "healthy" body weight have less chance of developing long-term illnesses like diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure and arthritis. A BMI chart can tell you whether your weight is in the healthy, overweight or obese range.

The BMI chart may not be exactly right for you. For example, if you are muscular, the chart may say that you are overweight because muscle weighs a lot. "BMI charts can only offer a weight goal range based on your height," explains Robyn Flipse, MS, RD, a nutrition consultant and author of "The Wedding Dress Diet" and "Fighting the Freshman Fifteen." "I recommend that people focus instead on choosing a balanced diet and getting regular exercise, at least 30 minutes each day. The weight that they arrive at will be a healthy weight for them."

It is important to take action if your body weight falls in the overweight or obese range and your diet and activity routines are in need of improvement. Losing even 10 pounds and preventing further weight gain can go a long way toward improving your health.

Eliminate just 50 to 100 calories each day—it's as simple as avoiding seconds at dinner. In addition, regular physical activity can also help keep calories in balance to help you manage your weight.

Choose a diet rich in fiber—diets high in fiber sources like legumes, fruits, vegetables and whole grains are linked to a healthier body weight.

Include foods made from whole grains, like Whole

Grain Total, whole-wheat pasta, oatmeal, and whole grain corn tortillas. Whole grain can help you manage your weight.

Cut out sources of low-nutrient calories, like caloric soft drinks, full-fat salad dressing, butter and sugary foods.

Start the day with a smart breakfast. For example, a serving of Whole Grain Total has 100 calories (before adding milk) to help you lose weight and 100 percent whole grain to help you keep in shape.

Mindy Hermann, MBA, RD, is a nutrition writer for women's health and fitness magazines. She is the co-author of "Change One" and the American Medical Association's "Family Health Cookbook."

Toning Arms and Shoulders for Summer

Q. What type of exercises will help me tone and strengthen my arms and shoulders? I work out three days a week and have seen progress in my lower body strength, but seem to be much weaker in my arms and shoulders. Summer is almost here, and I want to be able to wear my short-sleeve shirts. HELP!

A. Strengthening and toning the muscles of the upper body can be a challenge. Although we use our arms and shoulders for everyday tasks such as taking a bag out of the car, lifting a briefcase or pocketbook or even putting a box on a shelf, often our upper bodies are not nearly as conditioned as our lower body.

Most people have a stronger lower body because we use our legs to walk or run, walk up stairs, bend and support our body weight throughout the day. That being said, there still are ways to improve the strength of your arms and shoulders.

Evaluate your current exercise program and identify the exercises that require you to use your arms and shoulders. If you find that the majority of your workout consists of lower body exercises, then a slight change in adding two or three upper-body exercises may help you begin to see results.

Exercises such as the chest press and lat pull-down (back) utilize your arms to help perform the exercise, but they are not exercises that focus on the arms or shoulders. Specific exercises such as a bicep curl (front part of arm), shoulder press and triceps push-down (back of arms) will help focus on strengthening the arms and shoulders.

After looking at your program, if you find that you are already performing two or three exercises for your arms and shoulders, then you may want to look at the amount of weight (intensity), the number of repetitions performed and your exercise technique. Each of these factors plays a big role in seeing progress.

Also, consider the length of time you have been performing your current exercise routine. If you have been doing the same routine consistently for more than three weeks, it may be time to progress to a more difficult intensity or to add an additional set of the exercise.

The way to identify if you are exercising at the correct intensity is to determine the number of sets and repetitions you would like to complete. Then choose a weight that will begin to fatigue your muscles during the last three. For example, if you choose to complete two sets and 15 repetitions, you should choose a weight that becomes challenging around the 12th or 13th repetition.

Consistency is the key. Be patient and keep working hard.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea@letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Ask Your Pharmacist: Healthy Aging

(NAPS) — Older Americans, more active than ever before, should take preventative measures to keep their bones strong and healthy. According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, an estimated 10 million Americans currently have osteoporosis, with another 34 million estimated to have low bone mass, which puts them at increased risk for the disease.

Loralie Lacharta, RPh, answers questions about osteoporosis and how older Americans can keep their bones strong to ensure a healthy and active future.

What is osteoporosis, and what causes it?

Osteoporosis is a disease that affects your bones, making them fragile and causing them to break easily. One in five American women will likely develop osteoporosis. It can occur in men as well, but because men have larger skeletons than women, they don't start to lose bone until later in life. An inactive lifestyle, heavy alcohol use and smoking can all increase risk of developing it if there is a history of the disease in your family or if you have had any fractures after the age of 50.

How do I know if my bones are healthy or thinning?

Osteoporosis can be difficult to detect because it has no symptoms. It can silently weaken your bones until they eventually break. A bone mineral density (BMD) test is the only way to tell if you have osteoporosis or not. The test is painless and easy to perform. It measures how strong your bones are and can help determine if you're at risk for osteoporosis.

What can I do to make my bones stronger and healthier?

The best way to prevent bone disease is to live a healthy lifestyle through a good diet and exercise. A diet with lots of calcium and vitamin D is essential. Calcium helps to strengthen your bones, while vitamin D makes the calcium more effective. There are many over-the-counter supplements available if you're not getting enough calcium or vitamin D in your diet. You should ask your doctor or pharmacist to help you pick out one that is right for you.

Where can I get more information if I need it?

Your pharmacy is a great resource. You can go to www.cvs.com to find a CVS/pharmacy nearby or call a CVS.com pharmacist at (888) 607-4287.

Foot Notes

Tips on Protecting Your Feet from the Heat

(NAPS) — "Even if you are just lying still on your back soaking up the rays, your feet are still vulnerable," says American Podiatric Medical Association member Dr. Jane Anderson. "You can seriously sunburn your feet, and no matter how upscale your hotel, athlete's foot can lurk in all public pool areas."

These tips will help you spend more time collecting seashells rather than doctor's bills:

- Limit walking barefoot, as it exposes feet to sunburn as well as plantar warts, athlete's foot, ringworm and other infections, and also increases risk of injury to your feet.
- Wear shoes or flip-flops around the pool, to the beach, in the locker room and even on the carpeting or in the bathroom of your hotel room to prevent injuries and limit the likelihood of contracting any bacterial infections.

- Remember to apply sunscreen all over your feet, especially the tops and fronts of ankles, and don't forget to reapply after you've been in the water.

- Stay hydrated by drinking plenty of water throughout the day. This will not only help with overall health, but will also minimize any foot swelling caused by the heat.

- Keep blood flowing with periodic ankle flexes, toe wiggles and calf stretches.
- Some activities at the beach, lake or river may require different types of footwear. To be safe, always pack an extra pair of protective water shoes. If your shoes will be getting wet, they should be dried out completely before your next wear to prevent bacteria or fungus from growing.

- In case of minor foot problems, be prepared with antibiotic cream to treat any skin injury, sunscreen to protect against the scorching sun and aloe vera to relieve sunburns.

- If you injure your foot or ankle on vacation, seek professional medical attention from a podiatric physician. Many often only contact a doctor when something is broken or sprained, but a podiatrist can begin treating your ailment immediately while you're away from home. You can find an American Podiatric Medical Association podiatrist in your travel area by calling (800) FOOTCARE or by logging on to www.apma.org.

ARRESTING THE PROGRESSION OF GINGIVITIS

When periodontal (gum) disease progresses to the point where bacteria-laden plaque hardens on the teeth to form calculus ("tartar"), the inflammatory condition known as "gingivitis" appears. Left untreated, the chronic inflammation can spread down to the underlying bone to create the potential for tooth loss. To prevent this outcome, patients with gingivitis are treated with scaling and root planing, to which removes calculus buildup on tooth surfaces above and below the gum line. The, as an adjunct to scaling and root planing, an anti-bacterial powder may be applied to the pockets that surround each treated tooth. This helps to prevent the return of the bacteria that threaten periodontal health, and it is more effective than scaling and root planing alone.

The best way to prevent the build up of calculus is through twice daily toothbrushing and flossing and cleaning visits based on a schedule recommended by your dental health care provider. Calculus accumulates more easily in some individuals, requiring more frequent brushing and dental visits. We would like to stress the importance of regular dental check-ups. If you would like more information or an appointment, call 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The dentist or hygienist can assess the severity of gingivitis by measuring the depth of the pocket (sulcus) that surrounds each tooth.

Quincy Bounces Back Against Brighton, Still In Playoff Hunt

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents are not down for the count just yet.

After losing three times last week, at home against Nauset (7-6), at Plymouth North (10-6) and on the road versus Sandwich (6-5 in eight innings), the Presidents rebounded with a huge 10-1 win Saturday over Brighton at Adams Field.

"To come back on Saturday and get that win was huge for our team," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "We played a heart-breaker on Friday night on the road at Sandwich in which we lost on a walk-off homerun in extra innings. It was a big momentum spark for the team and we are still in the running for a spot in the post-season because of that victory."

Quincy (6-8 overall) needs to win four out of their last six regular season games to qualify for the Division II South Sectionals.

"At the moment we are looking at a 6-8 record," Draicchio said. "With that huge win against Brighton, we need to win four out of our last six games. Three of the teams we play, we have already beaten. We still have our chance to get into the tournament."

Junior Mike LeBel was the hero against Brighton. LeBel, pitching for the first time this season, gave up one run over seven innings, allowing six hits and three walks while striking out three batters. LeBel went 3-for-4 at the plate with two runs scored and one RBI to help the Presidents score seven runs in the first three innings.

"Mike LeBel, in his first game on the mound for us, gave his team a huge boost," Draicchio added. "He pitched us to a much-needed victory."

Senior captains Steve Connolly (2-for-4, two RBI) and John Alexander (2-for-3, two runs scored, one RBI) stepped up for the Presidents when the team needed them the most. Connolly notched his first RBI in the bottom of the first inning and Alexander was involved in the scoring in both the first and the third innings as Quincy pulled away from previously unbeaten Brighton High

Senior designated hitter Dan O'Connell finished the game 1-for-2 with three RBI.

In their game versus Nauset High School on May 7, the Presidents had the game in their grasp, but fell by a hard-luck score of 7-6.

"It was a good game by both teams," Draicchio said. "We just had too many mistakes in the field and they cost us. This was a team we probably should have beat."

The offensive stars for Quincy were juniors Ricky Salvucci (2-for-4, RBI) and Mike LeBel (1-for-3, triple, 3 RBI) and seniors Steve Connolly (2-for-4, RBI) and Matt Boyle (1-for-4, RBI).

Against Plymouth North, Quincy could not hold off the Atlantic Coast League North Division leaders, and fell in defeat 10-6.

Mike LeBel and Matt Boyle both went 2-for-4 at the plate with one RBI. Senior Mike Leone finished the game 1-for-3 with one run scored and one RBI and junior Teddy Walsh went 0-for-2 with a fielder's choice RBI groundout in the sixth inning.

Starting pitcher Dan

Meyers drove in two runs with a triple in the second inning.

Last Friday versus Sandwich, the Presidents took the hosts to extra innings, but lost 6-5 on a walk-off solo homerun in the bottom of the eighth inning.

Senior John Alexander hit two solo homeruns (in the fourth and sixth innings) for Quincy and senior Mike Leone went 3-for-4 with one RBI. Steve Connolly (1-for-2, two BB, RBI) and junior Joe Reggininni (1-for-4, single) also contributed at the dish and in the field.

"This loss was tough to take," Draicchio said. "To lose in extra innings was tough, but we rebounded well against Brighton. Joe Reggininni caught a great game for us behind the plate and Alexander hit two homeruns. It was just too bad that they were both solo shots."

The Presidents played Whitman-Hanson on Monday at Adams Field and played last night against Marshfield. Their next home game is Monday night at 6:30 p.m. against North Quincy High School at Adams Field.

JACQUELYN (left) AND ALISON (right) Eeley stand next to the statue of Andrew Carnegie in front of the clubhouse at Carnegie Abbey Golf Course in Portsmouth, RI. Alison finished in third-place in the 18-hole division of the 22nd Annual Pippy O'Connor Independent Schools Girls Golf Classic, while Jacquelyn took home first-place honors in the 9-hole division.

Alison, Jacquelyn Eeley: Young Golf Phenoms

If you are a fan of the game of golf, here are two local names that you should remember in the coming years: Alison and Jacquelyn Eeley.

Alison, a seventh grader at Thayer Academy in Braintree, and Jacquelyn, a sixth grader at Meeting House Montessori School in Braintree, recently competed in the 22nd Annual Pippy O'Connor Independent Schools Girls Golf Classic at Carnegie Abbey in Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

Alison played in the 61-player, 18-hole division and finished in a tie for third place with a round of 81, while Jacquelyn competed in the 37-player, 9-hole division and finished in first-place with a round of 36.

The Pippy O'Connor golf tournament is made up of girls from the entire Independent League schools from all over New England. This year 34 different school schools participated in the tournament.

Alison is the only girl on the co-ed Thayer Academy varsity golf team and plays at the number eight position. She represented Massachusetts in the U.S. Kids World Golf Championship in Williamsburg, VA when she was 10 and 12 years old.

Jacquelyn was the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts State Champion in the 10 & under division in 2005 and she will be representing Massachusetts in the U.S. Kids World Golf Championships at Pinehurst at the end of July.

"Both of them are great golfers," said their father Peter Eeley. "Alison is so mentally tough on the course and Jacquelyn is very dangerous in her short game. The two of them, along with their brother Peter, have been playing golf for about five years. Both Alison and Jacquelyn play ice hockey for Quincy Youth Hockey, but golf is probably their best sport."

Alison and Jacquelyn's brother Peter is a ninth grader at Thayer Academy, and he is no slouch when it comes to golf. Peter plays at the number one position for the Thayer Academy golf team and was the Massachusetts Golf Association State Champion in the 13 & under division in 2004.

The Eeleys' practice their golf games at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham.

North Quincy Boys Lacrosse Edges Dennis-Yarmouth, 8-7

The North Quincy High School boys lacrosse team defeated Dennis-Yarmouth High School 8-7 last Friday in Atlantic Coast League play.

Senior Adam Tragellis' steal of a Dolphin pass, and his subsequent pass to teammate Terrence Sibley, resulted in the winning goal by Joe Morris with a minute left in the overtime period.

Sibley finished the game with four goals and three assists. Senior Jimmy Fitzpatrick scored three times and added two assists and Matt Martin played an all-around solid defensive game for the Red Raiders.

On Saturday, the Red Raiders earned their fourth win of the spring with a 9-5 victory over New Bedford in non-league play.

Jimmy Fitzpatrick scored five goals and sophomore midfielder Matt Furey notched four assists in the win.

North Quincy's record on the season now stands at 4-9 overall.

Point Webster Hoop Champs

The Point Webster School Gym defeated Montclair Gym 35-24 to capture the Quincy Recreation Department's All-City Basketball Middle School Championship.

Point Webster played a well-balanced game and saw seven players get on the score sheet. Mahmud Marhamo led all scorers with 10 points and Ryan Schultz scored nine points. Marhamo did most of his scoring in the second half (8 points), while Schultz scored six of his points in the first half.

Others scoring for Point Webster included Alex Buttari (6 points), Lonell Moody (4 points), Keenan Daniels (3 points), Bobby Kozlowski (2 points) and Thomas Paluzzi. Kevin Phan played stellar defense and Matt Kelly showed off his ball handling skills in the win.

The team was co-coached by veteran recreation supervisor Jonathan Brillo and first-year recreation leader Vincent Pastore. The coaches alternate games during the single elimination tournament.

Dean Zoia coached Montclair, the youngest of the two teams. Garrett Kelly was the team's leading scorer with 10 points and Dylan O'Neil scored seven points. Also contributing on the scoreboard for Montclair were Brendan Nealon (3 points), Jeff Dao (2 points) and Zerick Fadairo (2 points).

Daquan Williams and Shanon Nixon were outstanding on the boards. Bobby Page played a strong game on offense and Zoia cited Mike King for his playmaking and fine passing. Eddie King finished the game with several steals.

In the semifinals, Montclair defeated Atlantic 36-28 to advance to the finals. Alex Chan (15 pts.), Tiabao Shang (6 pts.), Anthony Chen (4 pts.), Huang Cu (2 pts.)

and Matria Mell (1 pt.) all scored for Atlantic. Paul Griffith coached the team.

In the other semifinal game, Point Webster defeated Snug Harbor 50-34. David Nhan was the only Snug Harbor player to score in double figures. He finished the game with 15 points. Also scoring for Snug Harbor were Brandon Dean (8 pts.), Johnny Lu (3 pts.), Reggie Cesar (3 pts.), Mike Ryan (2 pts.) and Derek Seto (3 pts.). Matt Lavery was the coach.

Also playing well in the earlier tournament rounds was a young entry from Merrymount Gym. Playing well for Merrymount were Jack McDonald (8 pts.), Kiley McDonald (4 pts.), Pat Gould (3 pts.), Chris Keenan, Connor Clifford and Dan Gould (all with 2 points). Coaches Corey Awed and Matt Carson had high praise for Christina Cahill's rebounding skills and Tim Keenan's ball handling skills.

Celebration In Honor Of 'The Yakoo,' Dr. Allan Yacubian June 10

On June 10, 2007 there will be a celebration of "fifty years" for North Quincy High School's Yakoo and a great benefactor to sports in general for the Quincy school's, Dr. Allan Yacubian.

This celebration, sponsored by the Quincy

High School Alumni Benefit Fund and the Classes of the 1950s, of Dr. Yacubian will be held at the Sons of Italy Social Hall on Quarry St. at 1 p.m. Tickets for the event will be $10. A cash bar and refreshments will be available.

It would be appreciated if you could contact any alumni of your class year to come and help us show our appreciation for all the good Dr. Yacubian has done for our schools over the years.

To purchase tickets, contact either Ron Ivil at (781) 337-0062 or Joe Minukas at (617) 328-4489.

Quincy, North Boys Volleyball Win

North Quincy (4-10 overall) got 23 digs and three aces from captain Danny Sok in their 3-1 victory over Durfee High School last Friday night in South Alliance boys volleyball action.

Dennis Martin (10 kills, five blocks) and Matt O'Neil (nine kills, six blocks) both played well around the net.

The game scores were 27-25, 25-19, 24-26 and 25-21.

In other action, Junior Andrew Paine recorded 20 kills to put him over 300 on the season to help lead the Quincy Presidents (12-3 overall) to a 3-1 victory over Brockton in non-league play.

Paine also contributed with 12 digs and three blocks. Junior Mike Mottola finished the game with nine kills and eight digs.

Tips On Trips Safety Checklist

(NAPS) - If you're ready for a road trip, following a few common tips can help you get to your destination safely.

• Check your tires for air pressure, tread and wear before leaving and don't forget your spare tire.

• Look under the hood and inspect the belts and hoses for possible wear and check that all your fluids-brake fluid, transmission and power steering-are at proper levels. If not, top them off.

• Don't forget pit stops for the driver. Regular stops for coffee, food and rest are vital. You can also use the break to check your e-mail at locations that offer Internet access.

For example, TravelCenters of America (TA) locations offer a wide variety of food options, snacks, beverages and wireless Internet service (or Wi-Fi) so you can check e-mail and be sure everything is okay at work or home-even get a better set of driving directions.

To learn more about travel center locations and Wi-Fi access, visit www.ta.travelcenters.com.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You Ewes and Rams will find your ideas cheered by a mostly receptive flock. Those few dissenters could well be turned around by your charm and powers of persuasion.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's time for the bold and beautiful Bovine to shake off the dust of the past and shape up with new ideas for the future. This could surprise some folks, but they'll soon adjust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those nagging new doubts about an upcoming decision should alert you to step back (at least temporarily) so you can reassess its potential impact from a new perspective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That unpleasant situation you hoped would go away by itself needs immediate attention before it affects an upcoming decision. Expect your supporters to rally around your cause.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're moving up and away from that recent setback. But remain cautious about finances. An exercise in thrift today helps cushion a possible end-of-the-month money squeeze.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're still dealing with overtones of pessimism that cause you to doubt your ability to make some needed changes. But the negative pressures will ease up by week's end.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be some fallout from the way you handled a recent family problem. But those who know that you were in the right won't hesitate to step in on your behalf.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Financial strains ease by week's end. Meanwhile, focus on cultivating that new relationship if you hope to have it blossom into something more meaningful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Health matters once again dominate the week. Be careful not to ignore recurrences of an old problem. An almost-forgotten commitment resurfaces.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The emergence of an unusual selfish streak could dismay those close to you. Defy it -- don't justify it -- so you can become your gracious self again.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Reassess your decision to stay with the status quo. It might seem like the sensible thing to do right now, but changes around you could make that choice a risky one.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Move decisively but cautiously when dealing with a delicate personal matter. The fewer mistakes you make now, the less likely it is that the problem will recur later on.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can find beauty where many cannot. And you enjoy sharing your discovery with others.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Why, Why, why WHY did this have to happen to me? When misfortune, disaster or tragedy occurs, the question is difficult to try to answer. Even if there is a known answer, and most of the time there is none, it is an unacceptable answer.

If one is presumptuous enough to try to answer: if one resorts to the retort of courage being needed, one knows how futile it can be.

Yet, when bewilderment and grief exist a mortal human being can help. In one such instance, there was an unforgettable scene which will always be remembered.

A close friend of a grief stricken family stopped in, unaware that tragedy had struck. Shocked at the bomb shell news, he stumbled around for words. Then in impromptu and certainly in unhearsd manner, he replied, "I can't tell you. No one can. I'm not an overly religious man as you know, but I think it will do us all good. Let's pray. I believe it would help."

It was a beautiful prayer. And it helped. It always can...

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS MASSACHUSETTS HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

A Design Public Hearing will be held by MassHighway to discuss the proposed Quincy Center Concourse roadway construction project in the City of Quincy.

WHERE: Thomas Crane Public Library
Large Meeting Room, First floor
40 Washington Street
Quincy, MA 02169

WHEN: Wednesday, May 30, 2007 at 7:00 P.M.

PURPOSE: The purpose of this hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to become fully acquainted with the proposed Quincy Center Concourse project. All views and comments made at the hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project consists of roadway and sidewalk reconstruction with new traffic signals along the new alignment from the end of the MassHighway Phase I project to the project limit west of the Washington Street intersection for a distance of 1900 feet. A 600 ft section of Quincy Avenue/Hancock Street is proposed for reconstruction including the intersection with Elm Street/School Street. The project continues along Elm Street improving the roadway layout and corner geometries. The project continues along Mechanic Street from 500 feet until the intersection with Revere Road.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Quincy is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassHighway's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassHighway subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout is available on the MassHighway website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to David Anderson, P.E., Acting Chief Engineer, Massachusetts Highway Department, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. The final date of receipt of these statements and exhibits for inclusion in the public hearing transcript will be ten (10) days after this Public Hearing.

The community has declared that this facility is accessible to all in compliance with the ADA/Title II. However, persons in need of ADA/Title II accommodations should contact Angela Rudikoff by phone at (617) 973-7005 or e-mail angela.rudikoff@eot.state.ma.us. Requests must be made at least 10 days prior to the date of the public hearing.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the MassHighway website <http://www.mass.gov/mhd>.

Quincy Community Action Programs Annual Meeting, Awards Ceremony May 23

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) Board of Directors will induct new board members and officers at its annual meeting and awards ceremony Wednesday, May 23 at 5:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy.

The meeting is open to the public.

Retiring Board President, Charles J. Phelan, Jr. will be recognized at the event for his long time service to QCAP's Board of Directors.

The Board of Directors will also present their annual Extra Mile Community Awards to community members who go the extra mile on behalf of the agency, clients and our mission without the expectation of recognition.

This year's award recipients include

- Patrick Corcoran for his commitment to revitalizing the Brewer's Corner Neighborhood in Southwest

Quincy and supporting QCAP's Southwest Community Center;

- QCAP's 2007 Volunteer Tax Counselors - Mike Berry, Marcell Bittle, Sharon Bradshaw, Cindy Cheng, Peter Donohoe, John Freeman, Mike Iacovello, Fay Leong, Linda MacDonald, Christopher Neligon, Jason Pesaturo, Marguerite Paul, Margaret Sweeney, Shi Xia (Amy) Wu, a group of dedicated people who donated a tremendous amount of time and talent providing free tax preparation services to low-income taxpayers within our community; and

- Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Inc., a dedicated corporate partner, and their Blue Crew, a team of employee volunteers donating their labor to build a community garden at QCAP's Emergency Food Center, clean-up grounds at QCAP's Eldridge School Head Start Center, and for donations of equipment, furniture and funds to QCAP's Emergency Food Center and Adult Education Programs.

In addition, Tracy Donahue, QCAP's Director of Planning and Development, will be presented the Lois Craig Memorial Employee Award, for her dedication, commitment and extraordinary contributions to developing and expanding QCAP's programs.

In addition, QCAP employees, Susan Fitzpatrick, Secretary and Deborah Griffin, Head Start Teacher, will be honored for 20 years of dedicated service to QCAP's clients.

"This event is a wonderful opportunity for QCAP to honor the contributions and achievements of our community's unsung heroes, our Board President and our staff. These people make a difference every day and provide essential support to QCAP that helps us achieve our mission," said Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

Sheriff Bellotti Receives Social Justice Award From Sons Of Italy Grand Lodge

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti recently received the Sons of Italy Social Justice Award given to Italian-Americans who are positive role models and have performed outstanding services in the community.

"I am greatly honored and humbled to receive this award," Bellotti said. "To receive the same award my father (former Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti) did 21 years ago makes it very special to me."

Bellotti was recognized for his willingness and ability to reach outside prison walls and touch the lives of people in the community, including senior citizens, juveniles at-risk and victims of crime.

Since being elected in November 1998, the sheriff has established strong partnerships with local police, fire departments, schools and councils on aging to develop and operate important public safety and crime prevention programs such as the Are You O.K.? Program for the elderly, the search and rescue program Project Lifesaver, the Victim Services Unit and the Youth Leadership Academy.

Middlesex County Sheriff James DiPaola (also a past recipient) introduced Sheriff Bellotti to a standing-room-only crowd of 400 guests and presented him with the award.

The Social Justice Award is given by the Sons of Italy Commission for Social Justice, an anti-defamation group founded in 1979 that fights racism, prejudice and stereotyping of all races, religions and cultures, including stereotyping of Italian-Americans by the entertainment, advertising and news industries.

Bellotti was nominated for the award by the Weymouth Sons of Italy.

In addition to Sheriff Bellotti's father and Sheriff DiPaola, past recipients include Mayor Thomas Menino, former Governor Paul Cellucci, House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi and former Senate President Robert Travaglini.

Second President Praised

John Adams $1 Coin Hailed At Issuance Here

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

U.S. Mint Director Edmund C. Moy formally issued the new John Adams $1 coin Tuesday, and praised him for his "significant accomplishments in a critical part of our nation's history."

He added he hoped America will re-acquaint themselves with John Adams for his role.

Moy told the large gathering at City Hall Plaza, that he was "honored to make the John Adams Coin "depicting the first time he was on a coin." He said "if not for all of you in Quincy, this would never have happened."

By LAURA GRIFFIN

It may never be Shopperstown USA again but supporters believe a new vision for Quincy Center will even better suit the city in the 21st century.

The City Council approved that renewal plan for Quincy Center Monday and will consider a proposed $30 million District Improvement Financing (DIF) investment in the project on May 29.

By a 7-0 vote, the City Council adopted the Quincy Center Urban Revitalization District Plan (URDP) which envisions a makeover of 55 acres of the 113-acre Quincy Center.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington presented the proposal to the public hearing prior to the City Council meeting. Mayor William Phelan initiated the project in January 2003. Since then, steps have been taken to obtain community input, design plans, and the required zoning changes.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly chaired the hearing held jointly by the Downtown Committee and the Finance Committee. Before the formal council vote, Kelly described his support of the project and said, "We just can't go on and on and watch our downtown and watch it go down the drain."

"The downtown needs significant improvement," Harrington said as he outlined the goals of the renewal project which include a mixed-use center, shopping district, housing services and commerce built around Hancock Street as Quincy's "Main Street."

Harrington also said that, at this time, the City plan "does not call for eminent domain... Quite possibly, they could be in the future."

However, he said all property owners in the targeted area have been informed that there is a possibility of future land-takings and, "They are in an impact zone."

The URDP specifically targets the five-acre Hancock Parking Lot

Three Unions Agree To Larger Share In Health Care Costs

Mayor William Phelan announced that the three contracts agreed upon to date between the City of Quincy and various collective bargaining units have included the employees assuming a larger share of the costs of employee benefits.

The Library employees, Police Patrol Officers, and Police Superior Officer unions have all agreed to a roll-back of 85% in Fiscal Year 2008 and 80% in Fiscal Year 2009.

"I appreciate the understanding of our employees that the current rate of employee benefits is unsustainable," said Phelan. "It is in the future interest of our City's financial health that we begin to take steps to address this unsustainable situation."

"Though not a popular position

Early Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Memorial Day holiday Monday, there will be an early news and advertising deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

News, church, organizations and youth sports releases, retail and classified advertising and legal notices should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by noon tomorrow (Friday) to assure publication in the May 31 issue.

For more information, call The Sun office, 617-471-3100.

Rev. John Swanson, Navy Chaplain, Speaker

Memorial Day Parade, Ceremonies Monday

Rev. John Carl Swanson, a veteran Navy chaplain and pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, will be the guest speaker at Quincy's Memorial Day ceremonies Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Rev. Swanson also serves as a substance abuse counselor at Quincy's Bay State Community Service and as an adjunct professor of Bible, Philosophy and Government at Eastern Nazarene College.

A native of Quincy, he was commissioned a Naval officer in October, 1983, while a student at Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., and graduated from the Navy Chaplain School in Newport, R.I.

He served in the Navy for 10 years in billets that included service in the field with the Marines and Seabees and aboard ship with the Navy and Coast Guard, most notably on the submarine Pargo and the Cutter Spencer.

Marching units in the parade will assemble no later than 10 a.m. Monday on School Street and march down School Street, Hancock, Coddington and Sea Streets to the cemetery where all units will remain in formation during the ceremonies.

The parade will rest in Quincy Square while wreaths are placed on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

Parade Marshal Lorraine Ahern, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (QVC), and guests will review the parade from a stand on Sea Street across from the cemetery entrance.

The parade is expected to begin at 10:30 a.m.

In case of inclement weather, the exercises will be held in the Center for Technical Education gym on Codding Street at 11 a.m.

After the services, the parade will disband and the veterans will retire to their respective posts.

John Racke, chaplain of the QVC, will open the ceremonies with the invocation followed by the introduction of the invited guests by Lawrence Norton, the master of ceremonies.

Commander Ahern, Mayor William Phelan, Council President Douglas Gutro and Henry Bradley, REV. JOHN SWANSON director of Veterans Services, will deliver greetings and remarks.

Daniel Tinney, junior vice commander of the QVC, will read General Logan's order creating the first Memorial Day, and Stephen Dunlea, senior vice commander of the QVC, will read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

The Rev. Swanson will deliver the main address.

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Services Department, will extend greetings and remarks, an adjutant will call the roll of deceased comrades and the Memorial Day poem, "In Flanders Field," will be read by Robert Noble.

Commander Ahern will place a wreath and others follow with wreaths of all

32-Page Complaint Filed

Teachers Union Charges City With Unfair Labor Practices

The Quincy Education Association (QEA) has filed an unfair labor practice charge against both the City of Quincy and the Quincy School Committee, according to QEA President Paul Phillips.

The 32-page complaint filed with the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission charges that the city and the school committee are not bargaining in good faith which is a violation of state law.

Phillips noted that his members have been working without a contract since the end of August and have engaged in 23 bargaining sessions.

The crux of the charge, Phillips said, is that the teachers have been subjected to a "bait and switch" approach to bargaining.

"The Quincy public school teachers give their best to the children of this city," Phillips said. "Now it is time for the city and the school committee to afford the teachers the respect they earn every day in the classroom."

On the key issue of health insurance, Phillips charges that the city placed an offer on the table at one meeting and declared it "illegal" when the same proposal was offered by the union at a later date.

"I have been involved in teacher negotiations for over two decades and have worked with every mayor and school committee during that period."

"While we have had differences of opinion, we always worked them out through the give and take of bargaining," Phillips said, adding, "In all my years of education, I have never had to deal with a city leader who doesn't seem to care about the opinions of workers. This is the challenge that we are now facing."

"The longer this struggle continues, the more likely it is that the district is going to lose really good teachers to other school systems," Phillips said. "Our request is simple. We would like to settle this contract so we can focus all our attention on educating the children of the city of Quincy."

QEA members are distributing more than 20,000 fliers to Quincy homes to call attention to their contract struggle. In addition, supporters of the QEA have raised some 1200 red and white signs on lawns across the city, which read, "We Support Quincy Teachers."

In the single page flier, the QEA writes, "we are disturbed by the mayor's tactics." The teachers' union claims that Mayor William Phelan has "...used the press and his ability to mail costly letters to every resident to tell part of a story."

Among the facts cited on the QEA sheet are claims that experienced teachers "are paid less than teachers in many other communities."

Quincy teachers with an advanced degree now earn from $9,564 to $12,207 less than teachers in such places as Brookline, Braintree, Newton and Boston.

In addition, the QEA claims that the union offered to increase their co-pay by 100% in response to a similar proposal by the Quincy School Committee. When they offered to proposal, it was turned down.

"The School Committee rejected that offer by saying that it was against the law to bargain co-pays. Confused? So are the teachers!"

The statement continues, "Our proposal could have saved the city more than $2 million."

$16,000 Diamond Stolen But Quickly Recovered

It may have been the briefest jewelry heist of all time: the $16,000 diamond was missing for 10 minutes, 15 at the outside.

"I was showing the man the diamond under the microscope," said Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry store in downtown Quincy.

"He asked me to show him a certificate of authenticity. I turned to get it and he scooped the diamond out of the tweezers and ran with it."

Luckily, Jim Edwards, the architect next door, was in the store at the time and he gave chase, catching up with the man as he was getting into his car.

Edwards, who is also president of the Quincy Historical Society, got the number of the car and alerted authorities.

The car was spotted by Officer Dan Francis, who was on a paid detail at the corner of Robertson and Quarry Streets in West Quincy.

With an assist from Officer E. J. Hartnett, Francis pulled the car over and the would-be jewel thief was in custody where it was discovered he had 16 warrants outstanding against him.

And the diamond, valued at $16,000, was back in Bertman's custody after what may have been history's briefest jewel robbery.

Remembering Tommy

Many of us were fortunate to have had Tommy Burke in our lives.

He was someone special.

A City Hall legend, a political pioneer and - a profile in courage.

With a keen sense of humor and an impish grin to go with it that sometimes made you wonder if he had a bit of Leprechaun in him.

Tommy, who served 31 years as assistant city clerk before his retirement in 1991, died May 15 at age 83.

Those weren't 83 easy years.

He spent most of them on crutches after having been stricken with polio at age 3. But he never complained. And it never slowed him down or stopped him in his career or personal life.

One of the great moments in Tommy's life was the day President Franklin D. Roosevelt, a fellow polio victim, came to town.

FDR was here in October, 1936 on a re-election campaign stop. His car drew up in front of First Parish Church across from City Hall.

Tommy, then 12, was in the crowd that was there to welcome the President. He was happy just to have the chance to see FDR in person, never dreaming he was about to actually meet him.

Former City Clerk John Gillis, Tommy's close friend for over 70 years, recalls:

"Suddenly Frank Foy, Quincy businessman and Roosevelt's New England campaign coordinator, picked Tommy up and put him on the President's lap."

Tommy was thrilled and never forgot that moment. FDR became his inspiration and political hero. And no doubt the reason he became a staunch young Democrat.

Tommy later would meet two other Presidents - Harry Truman and John F. Kennedy.

Tommy and Gillis, now a Norfolk County commissioner, were political pioneers and allies, and friends who were as close as brothers.

They used to head up each other's campaigns when they were young Democrats in the early 1950s in Republican-dominated Quincy.

Tommy ran three times for state representative with Gillis his campaign manager. Gillis ran twice for the city council with Tommy as his campaign manager.

Tommy owned an old Oldsmobile back then and had it painted white. When he ran, they painted "Burke State Representative" in bright red all over the car.

When Gillis ran, the red was whitened out and "Gillis for City Council" was painted in green.

"They were low budget campaigns," Tommy once recalled. "A couple hundred bucks was all we spent - and all we had to spend."

They didn't win any of those elections, though

Tommy lost by only 136 votes in 1952.

Victory was finally their's in 1992 when Gillis, who had retired as city clerk, won a Norfolk County Commission seat with Tommy as his campaign manager. They did it without the old Oldsmobile.

But back in the 1930s, 1940s and early 1950s, young Democrats didn't have much of a chance in a city and county GOP stronghold.

"There were so few Democrats around," Gillis often muses, "they used to joke that Democrats could hold a rally in a telephone booth."

But another young Democrat came back from World War II and ran for Congress. And things changed. His name: John F. Kennedy.

He launched Democratic registration drives that numerically turned the tables for Democrats in the state, Norfolk County and Quincy.

When Tommy retired in 1991, a "Who's Who" in Quincy politics turned out to honor him at a dinner.

Jim Sheets, who was mayor at the time, and former Mayors Walter Hannon, Frank McCauley and Arthur Tobin issued a joint "Executive Declaration" making him "Honorary Mayor of Quincy."

The declaration had a humorous note:

"Whereas, he surprised everyone by convincing a lovely girl named Connie, to marry him (he said he wanted someone to cut the grass) and they have a wonderful child named Marilyn who luckily looks like her mother. ..."

And, a serious one:

"Whereas, Tom has won the affection and acclaim of everyone who knows him, Tom's work with the Young Democrats and as Assistant City Clerk for 31 years, his involvement with the Bocce Club, the Knights of Columbus and the Quincy City Club has made Quincy a better place to live and City Hall a better place to work."

The four mayors presented him with a blue jacket with his name, the city seal and "Honorary Mayor" imprinted on it.

There were serious words with a sprinkling of humor at Tommy's funeral Mass Saturday at St. John's Church.

Fr. Richard Cannon, pastor and celebrant, noted that Tommy was active in many ways in Quincy, but "His life was centered in his family, his wife, Connie, and his daughter, Marilyn."

Gillis, who gave the remembrance, told Tommy's wife and daughter: "Connie, you made his life. Marilyn, you were the apple of his life."

Gillis said Tommy never let his disability get him down.

"He had guts. He always fought for the little guy," And, he added, "He could also drink more beer than I could."

The funeral Mass program had a formal photo of Tommy on the front. And on the back, a snapshot of him, with baseball cap on, relaxing in a patio chair and hoisting a can of his favorite Budweiser as in a fond farewell.

Tommy would have liked that.

Senior Fair June 7 At River Bay Club

River Bay Club, an independent and assisted living community, will hold their 16th Annual Senior Fair on Thursday, June 7 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Club is located at 99 Brackett Street.

"Each year, River Bay Club holds this interactive Senior Fair with many vendors conducting screenings as well as offering valuable information," according to Suzanne Davis, spokesperson for the Club. Davis expects even more vendors and raffles at the fair this year.

The Fair will feature health screenings, raffles, prizes and free coffee and pastries throughout the day. Visitors will have access to booths sponsored by local hospitals, nursing homes, visiting nurse groups, homecare agencies, chiropractors, and financial planners.

A special treat this year is

Guests will be able to participate in numerous medical checkups, such as spinal screenings, blood pressure screenings, and hearing and cataract examinations, as well as balance and posture screenings.

City Rubbish Contract Extended Six Months

By FRANK McCAULEY

The city of Quincy has decided to exercise its option to extend the present rubbish contract with Marinucci Bros. for six months after the expiration date of May 31.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa authorized Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert to notify the Marinucci firm.

Under the contract executed three years ago the city retained that privilege. The rates for the next six months will be the same as those in effect for the past three years.

The city needs added time to re-advertise for new bids, since the mayor has rejected the two proposals opened several months ago when John M. Cashman of Quincy underbid Marinucci Bros. by $20,000 a year.

FOUR MORE ON LIST FOR PAY RAISES

The names of four municipal officials have been added to the list of approximately 100 city employees recommended for salary adjustments by the salary schedule appeal committee, Mayor Della Chiesa revealed.

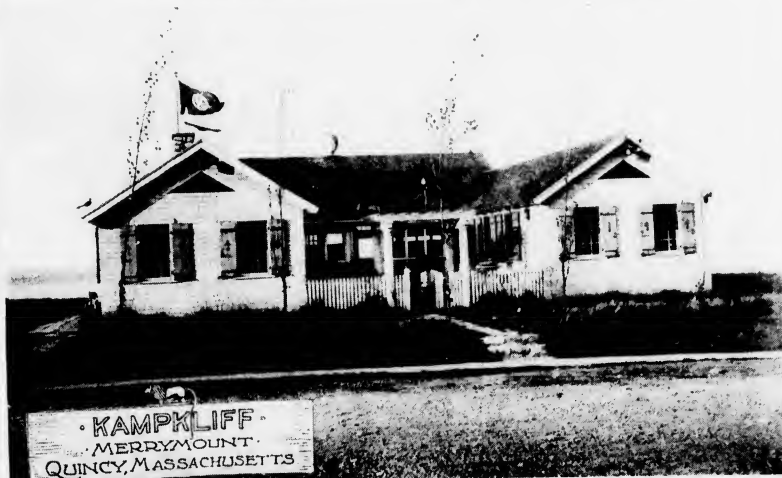

The mayor said that the names of City Solicitor Douglas Randall, assistant Solicitor Stephen T. Keete, Jr., Librarian Gertrude Callahan and Anthony Venna, Director of Welfare, will be included on the list. The total cost for the four officials added to the list amounts to $15,869.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox were in 9th place in the 10 team American League with a record of 13 wins and 20 losses. The Sox were 7 games behind the first place New York Yankees.

THIS 1935 POSTCARD is a view of Quincy banker Decevalere King's famous seaside resort Kampkliff. When it was built in 1920 it was the first and only building on Pasonageset Knoll, now Shore Avenue in Adams Shore. King built this to be used as a bachelor's playhouse. Note the flat with the K on the chimney at left. During the first two years he invited thousands of guests to "Come play at my house." He hosted his friends, children and hospital groups and even the whole city when he placed an ad on the front page of The Patriot Ledger for an open house on July 4, 1922. Kampkliff has a protective Quincy granite seawall. There were 15 bath-houses along the shore with searchlights for nighttime swimming on an offshore float. The house was near the end of Narragansett and Chickatabot Roads. After he married, King added living quarters and Kampkliff became his family home until his father Theophilus died in 1935. He then moved to the old King family homestead at 270 Adams St. He sold Kampkliff in 1938. It has since been replaced with other houses. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

We Had Fun Helping Friends

This May, for the first time in over 50 years, there will be no opening night for Koch Club Baseball in Quincy.

As part of the "on-field operations" staff since the passing of Mr. Richard J. Koch, we would like to thank the Koch family, the parents/coaches, and most of all the kids, for all of the enjoyment you have brought to us. A special note of thanks goes out of David Barnes (now Father Barnes), who at age 17 stepped up and ran the program in 1988.

At one point in the 1960s, there were over 1,000 boys and girls participating, at five different locals city-wide. Many folks may be disappointed, and we will miss it as much as any eager 5-year-old. Nowadays, there are many fine programs for young people, and we are most grateful and proud of what the City and so many dedicated groups have to offer.

We should all remember that the most valuable "training" for young boys and girls might be for parents to bring a bunch of neighborhood kids down to the nearest playground with a ball to bat or throw (or kick!), keep the rules to a minimum, and just let hem run around.

The Koch Club emblem, with the words Recreational, Charitable, Social printed on the jerseys and hats, might have been a mouthful for little kids, so let us try to rephrase a bit: we had Fun Helping Friends.

Ken Burns and World War II

On May 2, five Quincy combat veterans and I were invited by patriot Jennifer Logue from Channel 2 and also from Quincy, to attend a showing at the Coolidge Corner theater to see a one-hour clip of Ken Burns' new WW II film and afterwards a question and answer session.

Needless to say, the theater was packed since there was no charge.

The various segments from WW II, including those from the concentration camps left the audience gasping. I, as an American soldier, was in four of them. Those sights never leave you.

With me were the following combat veterans:

John Laukkanen, Marine Corps, who fought on Okinawa; Anthony Pagnano, Army 101st Airborne Division, who landed at 0230 behind Omaha Beach to kill the enemy; Earl Kuja, Army and a Pearl Harbor survivor, who also fought in Saipan and Tinian; Robert Carella, Navy, who served on the heavy cruiser, USS Baltimore, and shot down Japanese kamikaze planes; and Peter Gacicia, Navy, who served in the Pacific and also in Europe as a signal man and also as an engineer building portable harbors on Omaha Beach while under fire.

As for me, I, being, a former member of the Devil's Brigade, Army, in Europe, landed at Omaha Beach on June 6, 1944 and also fought in the Battle of the Bulge and because of our assistance to the 10th Armored Division, the first in the Bulge, was made a honorary member of that unit of which I am proud.

Our unit did not abide by the rules of the Geneva Convention. We took no prisoners since this war was one of totality.

In my question to Ken Burns, I asked him if he ever met any veteran from my brigade. Surprisingly, Burns said he did, and I asked him what he said, and he stated, "The same as you."

I also thought that the story in The Patriot Ledger should have concentrated more on the six veterans.

SCYC To Present 'Beauty And The Beast'

The Quantum Community Youth Choir (SCYC) is in production of its third annual spring musical, "Beauty and the Beast," which will be performed June 2 and June 3 at the Cove Auditorium at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm Ave.

This enchanting story tells the tale of two celestial outcasts who both find themselves deceived by appearances. Belle, an optimistic "bookworm," is a beautiful young girl with a vast imagination. The downtrodden Beast, on the other hand, is an illiterate and hideous creature, with a spell cast upon him and his castle.

Down in the village, when the town "hunk" Gaston proposes to Belle, she turns him down because of his arrogant comments and immature behavior. Belle dreams of excitement and adventure. And she finds it. Soon after looking for her father (an inventor, who ends up lost in the woods), Belle finds herself locked in the Beast's castle. She wonders if she'll ever see her father again, while the Beast wonders if he will ever find true love before it is too late.

Showtimes are Saturday, June 2 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, June 3 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5 per person, and children under five-years old will be admitted free. Tickets may be purchased at the door. For more information or to reserve tickets, call (617) 479-4449 or send questions/reservations to SquantumCYC@comcast.net.

The SCYC was established in November 2004,

BELLE & BEAST: Meaghan White (Belle) and Zach Dwyer (Beast).

Mass Memories Road Show At Crane Library June 2

The Mass Memories Road Show will visit the Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington Street, Quincy Center, Saturday, June 2 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Road Show tells the story of cities and towns throughout the state through family photographs and stories.

Quincy residents are invited to bring photos that illustrate their families' early days here. The photos will be scanned on site and the originals immediately returned to their owners.

Professionals will be present from the New England Archivists to advise contributors on how to care for and protect precious family photos.

The Mass Memories Road Show is an initiation of the Massachusetts Studies Project at UMass Boston Graduate College of Education.

Photographs can be viewed at www.MassMemories.org.

Montclair/Wollaston School Band Performs For Neighborhood Association

The Montclair/Wollaston School Band recently performed for the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association (MWNA) at the Church of the Good Shepherd, North Quincy.

Carolyn Hughes directed the band.

The MWNA Association has received funds from the Quincy Community Development Grant Program, which allows their partnership with the students' musical instrument program.

Members of the MWNA also participated in Quincy's Cleaner Greener program.

It's Kite Day June 2 At Wollaston Beach

If anyone tells you to "go fly a kite" you will be able to accommodate them Saturday, June 2, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Wollaston Beach.

The Friends of Wollaston Beach and its owner, the State Department of Conservation and Recreation, have proclaimed it Family Kite Day.

The action will take place at the northern end of the beach between Herbert Road and Billings Street where space will be available for kite launching.

Participants may bring their own kites or purchase one throughout the day. There will also be a "kite-making activity" for children.

Friends of Wollaston Beach T-shirts will be available for $8.

Three-Year-Old Garden Club Wins Favor In Houghs Neck

The Houghs Neck Garden Club is barely three years old but already it has made its presence felt in the tight-knit peninsular community.

The Houghs Neck Sons of the American Legion has made "a generous donation" to the club in appreciation of its work in beautifying the community, including the Veterans Memorial at Brill Field.

Squadron 380 of the Sons was represented in the presentation by Tom Timcoe.

"This is a wonderful show of support for our club," said President Jo Morris in a message of thanks. "It's great when friends and neighbors and even strangers appreciate the efforts put forth."

The Houghs Neck Garden Club began with 29

members three years ago with the stated purpose to "encourage individual creativity, promote civic involvement through beautification and cultivate the seeds of friendship in the community."

The next event on the club's schedule is the third annual Wildflower Festival Saturday, June 30, at 9:30 a.m. at Nut Island.

The event is open to the public and the $10 admission includes a brunch, a wildflower slide show, an exhibit of wildlife pictures of marsh life in Quincy by Joe Poggi and a walking tour of Nut Island led by botanist Tom Palmer.

For tickets or for more information, call Norma Jane Langford at 617-328-7279.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY - Larry and Marie Watts of Wollaston recently celebrated 50 years of marriage. The Watts were married May 18, 1957 at Saint Ann's Church in Wollaston. The couple have two children, Brian of Duxbury and Gerard of Halifax. They also have six grandchildren.

OPINION

Mayor William Phelan:

'The Truth About Teachers' Salaries'

There have been a number of people expressing their support for Quincy teachers in recent months. Well, I'd like to express my support for Quincy's taxpayers and tell you the truth about teacher salaries.

Let me tell you the straight facts: Quincy's teachers are currently the best compensated teachers on the entire South Shore and it is all of us Quincy taxpayers that continue to support our teachers.

A first-year schoolteacher who started the same year I took office (2002) has received a minimum of a 51.11% raise since then. How many taxpayers have seen their income rise by more than fifty-one percent? Allowances for educational incentives would take that figure even higher.

Here is an important fact that both our teachers and our taxpayers should know. Benchmark communities, such as Milton Cohasset, Weymouth, Braintree, Canton, Hingham, Hanover, Duxbury, are behind Quincy when it comes to overall teacher compensation.

Let's look at some samples from across the board to support that fact:

A first-year teacher in Quincy with a Bachelor's Degree starts at $36,371 in salary and pays 10% of their employee benefits. Only two of the 19 sample South Shore communities would make a higher base salary, Cohasset and Norwell. Yet when benefits are factored in, an important part of any compensation package, the value of the contract in Quincy is more than every other community on the South Shore.

How about teachers with a Masters Degree? Only Norwell pays a higher base salary out of the 19 communities and the Quincy benefits package again makes Quincy's teachers the best compensated on the South Shore. Exactly the same is true for a teacher with a Master's plus 15 credits. A teacher with a Masters Degree plus 30 credits enjoys the bountiful combination of the highest salary package on the South Shore and the most generous benefits package on the South Shore.

In 2006 alone, Quincy teachers received a raise of between 7.16% to 15.28%. Our last contract with the Quincy Educators Association allowed for 1%, 4%, 5% and 7% raises over four years. Some criticized that agreement as too generous. But the truth is Quincy has not tried hard enough in the past to attract and hold the best teachers, so I fought to correct that by supporting a generous, but fair contract.

Most teachers also receive a step-level raise each year amounting to an additional 5% raise on top of the 1%, 4%, 5%, and 7% raises cited above. Therefore, any teacher with less than ten years in our system—a significant percentage of our workforce—received a 12% raise last year.

Finally, in addition to the double-digit raises, Quincy's schoolteachers only paid 10% of their health insurance costs while Quincy's taxpayers paid the remaining 90%. Compare that to teachers in communities all around Quincy. Braintree requires their teachers to pay 42%; Canton, 49%; Cohasset, 25%; Hanover, 25%; Hingham, 50%; Hottelbrook, 50%; Hull, 50%; Milton, 30%; Norwell, 20% and Weymouth, 30%. No other community's taxpayers pay a more generous percentage of their employee benefit package as Quincy's taxpayers.

Attracting and maintaining good teachers is obviously important, but to me supporting public education is about supporting our children. I believe that Quincy's record of supporting the public schools and our schoolchildren is a proud one that speaks for itself.

Since 2002, Quincy's Education budget has increased each and every year at a pace unmatched by any other department (the exception being Veterans' Services). In fact, since my first budget as Mayor, the Education budget is up more than $19 million or approximately 24%.

While communities all around Quincy are slashing school budgets, charging additional fees for after-school programs and considering Proposition 2 1/2 override votes, Quincy is adding early literacy programs, insinuating all-day kindergarten, lowering our class sizes, fixing school infrastructure, giving raises to our educators, hiring new teachers and teacher aides, improving technology, and implementing drop-out prevention programs in our high schools.

Next month, we are slated to break ground on a new comprehensive $125 million high school. We just announced this week a first-in-the-State $32 million energy efficiency plan to improve the environs at all our schools and municipal buildings.

In the period from 2003 through 2007, Quincy's overall educational spending has increased more than any other town around us. Quincy's school spending rose $14 million while Weymouth added $7.5, Hingham added $5.7 million and Braintree added $2.3 million.

As a father of four Quincy public schoolchildren, I have the utmost respect for our teachers, and I wish I could give them everything they wanted. But I can't. I can't ask struggling Quincy taxpayers—already facing their own skyrocketing health care insurance bills—to pay $500 to $1000 more in their average property tax bill to pay to continue this extraordinarily generous and unsustainable health care benefit.

Things can get emotional during contract negotiations over issues of salary and benefits, and the facts can get lost. I am assured regularly by our negotiating team that they are working hard to resolve all differences. As Mayor—and as a parent of four Quincy public school children—I sincerely want this matter resolved as quickly and as fairly as possible.

But as Mayor, I also have to stand up for fairness, for Quincy's taxpayers as well as for our teachers.

OBITUARY

Thomas R. Burke, 83 Former Assistant City Clerk And Political Pioneer

By TOM HENSHAW

Tommy Burke was three years old, long before the days of the Salk and Sabin vaccines, when he was struck down by the dreaded disease polio while on a family vacation.

For the next 80 years, he lived in heavy leg braces, maneuvering himself around on crutches as he served the city of Quincy as assistant city clerk for 32 years.

"He never complained," said John Gillis, the county commissioner and retired city clerk with whom he worked for so long. "He was so good to so many people."

For two years, Mr. Burke served as executive secretary to Mayor Arthur Tobin, who had similar recollections of the man who was born and raised and lived his whole life in Quincy.

"I never heard him complain, even though he had to wear those heavy braces just to move around," said Tobin, now clerk-magistrate at Quincy District Court.

"He was a remarkable young man."

That remarkable young man, Thomas R. Burke, died May 15 after a brief illness at the Radius Specialty Hospital in Quincy at the age of 83.

A funeral mass was celebrated last Saturday at St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy and burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

THOMAS R. BURKE

Pall bearers included longtime friends Tobin, Gillis, former Mayor Walter Hannon and former Assistant State Highway Commissioner Joseph Donovan and nephews William Rogers and Robert Ellis.

"I knew him for about 70 years," said Tobin. "He used to hang out with my brother. I was honored to be asked to be an honorary pall bearer at his funeral."

Mr. Burke was once possibly the best known Democrat in a city that was heavily Republican, a measure of fame that could be attributed to another polio victim.

"When he was about 12," said Gillis, "President Roosevelt came to Quincy and Frank Foy took Tommy down to the Square to meet him. He sat on FDR's lap. That confirmed him as a Democrat."

As a result, he was the founder of the Young Democratic Club of Quincy and treasurer of the Young Democratic Club of Massachusetts.

Mr. Burke was educated in Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School.

He was appointed by Mayor Tobin to head a Special Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped and was named by President Kennedy to the Selective Service Commission in the 1960s.

He was a charter member of the Quincy City Club, a member of the South Quincy Bocce Club, a lifelong parishioner of St. John the Baptist Parish and a former member of the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Burke leaves his wife of 40 years, Constance R. "Connie" (Roberts) Burke; a daughter, Marilyn C. Burke of Quincy; and many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, One Independence Ave. The funeral mass was celebrated by the Rev. Richard Cannon, pastor of St. John's Church.

Memorial donations may be made to the Quincy City Club, c/o 31 Greene St., Quincy MA 02170 or to the charity of choice.

Menz Appointed To Housing Authority Board

John Menz, Deacon of Holy Trinity Parish, has been appointed to the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Directors.

He succeeds Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church and founder of Father Bill's Place.

Menz will sit on the five-member board with Kevin Cotter, Jean Kennedy, Jim McDonald and Christine Cedrone.

"Deacon Menz's reputation and commitment to our community made this an easy selection," said Mayor William Phelan. "He has given of himself throughout his life and his service to the residents and employees of the Quincy Housing Authority will likely be no different. His compassionate approach to people will be a fine addition to an already good Board."

Menz has been the chaplain of the Quincy Police Department, Holy Trinity Parish, comprising of the former Our Lady of Good Counsel, Saint Boniface, and The Most Blessed Sacrament churches.

"John and his wife have been pillars of our community for many years," said Phelan. "I am pleased that he accepted my offer to serve the Housing Authority and our residents in general. I look forward to working with him in the years to come."

Enjoy Your Achievement But Don't Lose Momentum Toward Next Goal, Graduates Told

229 Graduate At Quincy College Spring Commencement

Quincy College graduated 229 students at its spring commencement Saturday in the Presidents Ballroom of the Quincy Marriott.

Students, faculty, staff, Quincy College executives and Board of Governors, along with the Quincy Mayor William Phelan made a grand procession into the flag and flower decorated ballroom.

The graduates represented over 60 communities in Massachusetts and 19 countries around the world. The call to order was given by faculty member Susan Cahill, who was given the distinction of Mace Bearer this year. The Mace Bearer is the recipient of the President's Award for Excellence, which is given every year to an esteemed faculty member.

Bobby Gallegos, a Quincy College student, opened the ceremonies with the Star Spangled Banner on his instrument and received a standing ovation.

Quincy College Board of Governors President Vice Chairman Day A.M. Dennis welcomed the students and their families. Mayor Phelan also greeted the crowd.

Sue Harris, president of Quincy College, welcomed the graduates and guests and congratulated them on the special day.

Thomas J. McNamara, President and Chairman of College Courses, Incorporated (also known as CCI) was the distinguished speaker. He recommended graduates take time to enjoy their achievement of graduation, but not so much time that they lose momentum on their next goal.

McNamara was awarded a perpetual plaque by Quincy College for CCT's 50 years of service and dedication to students.

College Courses Incorporated is a private non-profit organization that has donated between $20,000 and $40,000 in scholarships for students each year for many years. The organization has also paid for such projects as the library expansion, the furniture for Temple Hall, the camera security system, and next year they will fund two part time faculty members for the Plymouth campus.

The student speaker, Annmarie Pula, advised her fellow graduates and the crowd that it was the supportive staff at Quincy College that provided her with the confidence she needed to finish her degree.

The Lorenz Adjunct Faculty Award was presented to Paul Kasper, who has been an adjunct instructor since 2001 teaching computer and business courses.

Each student who was awarded an Associate Degree or Certificate Completion was congratulated by President Harris along with the mayor and the Quincy College Board of Governors.

Quincy College is a fully-accredited two-year college offering over 500 courses to over 3,500 students and

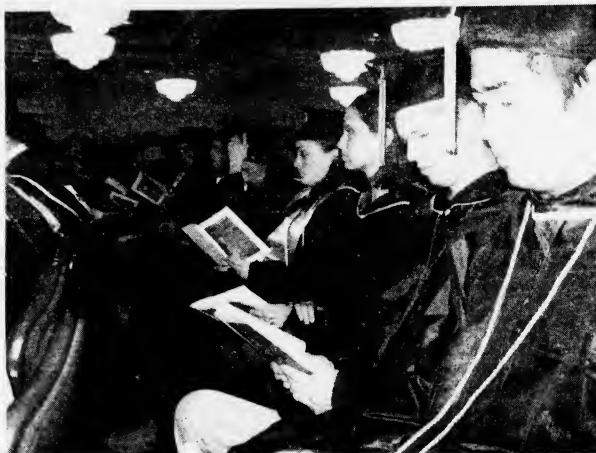

SOME OF THE 184 graduates representing more than 60 communities in Massachusetts and 19 countries around the awarding Associate degrees and certificates of completion in a variety of studies. Quincy College is a public college operating under the auspices of the City of Quincy with campuses in both Quincy and Plymouth, Massachusetts.

The mission statement of the college is "As an open access institution which encourages academic achievement, diversity, economic opportunity and lifelong learning, Quincy College facilitates valuable learning relationships with students whose educational and professional futures might otherwise remain unrealized."

Koch Plans Positive Attitude Change In Mayor's Office

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has unveiled the first part of his vision for Quincy's future, calling for a "dramatic and positive change of tone" in the mayor's office.

"The tone of the mayor's office drives every issue, large and small," Koch said. "You may not be able to assign it a dollar value or pass a bill to legislate it, but there is no question that the tenor set by the mayor's office is the foundation of leadership."

Koch's plan, entitled "Believe in a Better Quincy," was released on the campaign's website www.kochforquincy.com, and is available to anyone who wants a copy by calling (617) 472-1306.

It lays out in detail a series of changes Koch said he will make if elected, highlighted by an open, respectful, and responsive administration. The vision statement will include several more parts, but Koch said that a policy outlining a positive leadership style is one of the most important elements. He noted that the tone set by the mayor's office is a driving force affecting every major issue facing the city today, including plans to build a new Quincy High School, bitter contract fights with city workers, and attracting the best talent for jobs like traffic engineer.

"If I make one promise in this campaign, it is this: We may not always agree, but no person will ever leave our office feeling intimidated or treated disrespectfully," Koch said. "We're going to repair that critical connection between the public and its government and it will be the first thing we do."

The plan calls for all functions of the current Office of Constituent Services to be moved into the mayor's office from its current location two floors away in City Hall and for the city's website to be completely overhauled to provide more services and useful information to residents.

"In Quincy, the mayor is the director of constituent services," Koch said. "To have those functions located in a separate office two floors away at City Hall sends the wrong message to the public."

Koch also highlighted a new policy for communicating with residents that will require phone calls to the mayor's office be returned; e-mails answered; and a two-way dialogue be implemented to inform residents about major projects or issues in their neighborhoods.

Koch said the new tone means that mayor's office will "always keep its door open and look for ways to work together, not against each other."

"If we use this kind of common sense approach, we can avoid confrontation that doesn't help anyone and most of time ends up hurting everyone-including taxpayers," Koch said.

Council Approves Downtown Renewal Plan

and the 5.3 acre Ross Garage on Parkway and surrounding areas, such as the A.J. Wright building, as the foundation for the plan.

The proposal identifies these two city-owned parking parcels "that the City will dispose of to stimulate private redevelopment."

"This plan will also give the City the ability to negotiate directly with potential developers for the redevelopment of these parcels, and will also provide a mechanism for acquiring select parcels necessary to accomplish redevelopment objectives."

Harrington said that 400 persons were notified of the Public Hearing which drew 30 persons, including a former Mayor and a former City Council president to City Council Chambers.

Former Mayor Walter Hannon who serves on the Citizen Advisory Committee, told the audience, "This is an opportunity we can not let go."

Hannon then described decades and decades of efforts to revitalize Quincy Center going back 32 years and noted, "32 years goes by pretty quickly. I won't be around in the next 32."

Former City Council President Michael Cheney also warned of the lost time on renewal projects, "Every mayor that I recall has had a downtown redevelopment plan."

However, Cheney said he was pleased that the URDP offers "a more formalized plan of action." In addition, he noted that the re-zoning has been completed.

As for the benefits,

Cheney said the plan may need tweaking but, "If we ever had a chance, this is it."

As an example, Cheney said that, if a building, such as 400 Crown Colony, were placed along Hancock Street today, there could be some 5000 additional full time jobs added to the city's base and "increased tax revenues by 20 fold."

Instead, speakers like Patrick Joyce of Pontiac Road described city areas where "For Lease" signs outnumber the number of retailers.

"We need tax relief and businesses to come into the city," Joyce said, adding that five percent of the city's business taxes have evaporated in five years.

Jerry Forde of Computer Troubleshooters said he just opened his business in Quincy Square and he tried to attract friends with similar companies, but the city needs change.

"This is the time to do it," said Dean Rizzo of Quincy 2000, suggesting that the council "keep the momentum going." Maralin Manning of the Quincy Business Association also supported the proposal.

However, Jennifer Logue, a candidate for City Council, said she had "grave concerns" regarding the renewal project.

Logue said, "This plan has been kicking around for quite some time." She also warned that the people who will suffer most will be the local businesses who have been so loyal during the city's downturn.

"It's going to knock out anywhere from 10 to 20 businesses. Where is that anticipated tax growth coming from?" Logue also referred to the proposed "Concourse" as a "four-lane highway" planned across the city.

Another speaker, Robert Boulos said he's currently renovating the former Kelly's Restaurant and has invested all his funds there. Now, he learns that the building may come down.

"Where do I go?" Boulos asked.

Harrington said that Boulos was told in November that he was about to invest in an "impact zone."

Boulos responded, "Impact zone? What does that mean?"

Prior to voting for the plan, City Councillor John Keenan said the city could either accept the "status quo" or move forward. "It's time to make a change in the downtown."

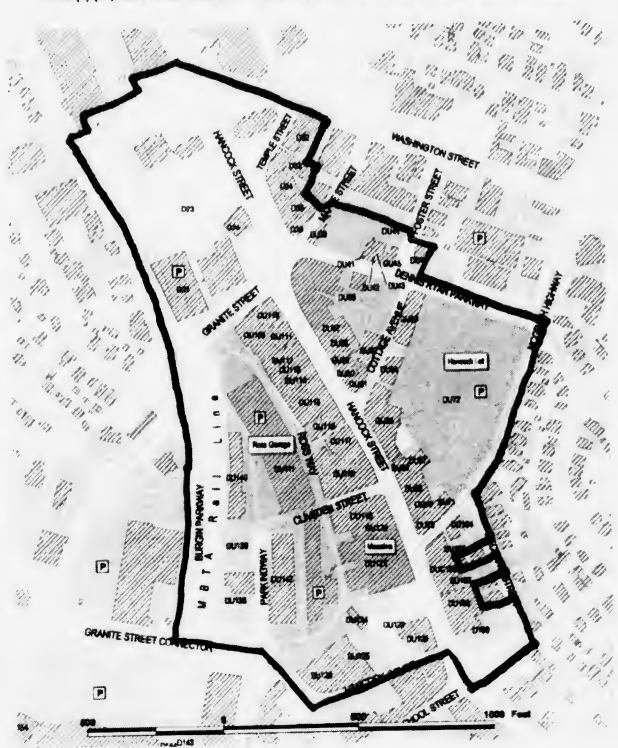

"This is a final opportunity to bring a renaissance to our downtown." Council President Douglas Gutro said, but did note that, sadly, "Some people will be caught in the crossfire (with the changes)."

"We're never going to go back to Shopperstown," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who added that the plan gives the city an opportunity to "reclaim some of our former luster."

Councillors Michael McFarland, Joseph Finn and Kevin Coughlin of Ward 3 noted that the URDP gives city officials the tools needed as far as funding potential and zoning.

Prior to the Public Hearing, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis left council chambers and did not return until after the vote. Both have financial interests in the area.

Homeless Man Charged In Octogenarian's Rape

Brandon Patrick Wells, 42, homeless, was released from jail in Boston May 3 after serving a 30-day stretch for trespassing on private property.

Four days later, he was back in the slammer after leading Braintree police on a chase through a swamp on suspicion of breaking and entering a home.

In between, police say, he broke into a School Street apartment in Quincy Center where he raped and robbed the 78-year-old woman occupant.

Quincy Police Lt. Patrick Glynn said finger prints found on a sliding glass door in the School Street apartment pointed authorities to Wells.

A sample of DNA taken from the scene was found on the state database to match that of Wells, who is identified as an unregistered Level 3 sex offender, the worst kind.

Glynn listed the charges against him in Quincy as:

Aggravated assault with a weapon, burglary, rape, assault and battery on an elderly person, kidnapping, unarmed robbery on a victim over 60 and threats to commit a crime.

"Right now he's being held in the Dedham House of Correction on $2,000 bail for attempted breaking and entering in Braintree," said Glynn.

"He'll be arraigned in Quincy District Court on our charges in a day or two (Wednesday or Thursday)."

City Council Votes To Join Shade Tree Trust

The City Council Monday voted 7-1 to join the Massachusetts Public Shade Tree Trust in an effort to obtain reimbursement from the gas company for dead trees lost through gas leaks.

Prior to the vote, David Murphy, Mayor William Phelan's Director of Operations, said, "The Mayor does support the Shade Tree Trust."

The Council acted on a motion by Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin who proposed joining the trust on April 23.

"We are supposed to look at trees as a major asset," Coughlin said, citing federal accounting standards for cities and towns. "If there are gas leaks, we should be up front in pursuing just compensation."

As for planting trees while other trees are dying, Coughlin said, "We're squandering taxpayers' money."

Under the plan, the Trust will provide a study of the city's public ways and a report on all gas leaks located during their work. They also report all leaks to the gas company.

The Trust will then identify the number of trees they claim have been damaged by gas leaks reducing oxygen in the soil and seek payment from the gas company.

Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee warned that the Trust's actions will only result in higher utility bills for the taxpayer and voted against the motion. Ward 4 Councilor Jay Davis was absent for the vote.

"We have no sense of the breadth (of the problem of gas leaks)," said Councilor Joseph Finn who noted that some gas service lines in his area date to 1911 and 1913.

Finn voted for the Trust as did Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymond who cited an incident in the past on Southern Artery.

All along the street, Raymond said "mature, developed trees" just died and "the gas company agreed to replace the trees."

Also supporting the project was Council president Douglas Gutro who commended Coughlin for bringing the "innovative approach" to the Council and noted the program "doesn't cost the taxpayer a dime."

At the previous meeting on the Trust project, Coughlin introduced attorney Jan Schlietmann, who is one of the major directors of the Trust operation and Bob Ackley of Gas Safety Inc.

Schlietmann told councilors that the Trust will provide the city, first, with an inventory of gas leaks and, then, a list of trees they believe have been damaged by gas leaks draining oxygen from the soil.

In the final step, the Trust will seek damages from the gas company for the damaged trees and split the proceeds with the City. The Trust will retain 40% of the payment funds and the City 60%.

McNamee also opposed the Trust contingency agreement, suggesting the 40/60 split was not favorable to the city.

Councilors John Keenan, Michael McFarland and Ward 1 Councilor Leo Kelly all supported the Trust motion.

Jennifer Logue Fundraiser June 6

The Committee to Elect Jennifer McCauley Logue will hold a fundraiser reception Wednesday, June 6, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd., Quincy Center.

The event, featuring hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar, will offer voters a chance to discuss the issues facing Quincy with Logue, who is running for city councillor at-large.

Logue, the former executive director of Discover Quincy and daughter of former Mayor Francis X

McCauley, is making her first run for public office.

Tickets for the reception are $100 and will be available at the door. To order tickets in advance or to request bumper stickers, call 617-328-1384.

FOOT NOTES

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ATHLETE'S FOOT

What people often mistake for simply dry, cracking skin on their feet can actually be athlete's foot. Athlete's foot is a fungal infection that commonly occurs between the toes or on the sides and soles of the feet. It can also spread from the toes to the toenails. When it is acute, it will itch and show up as blisters that sometimes weep. A prescription cream from the podiatrist is the best frontline defense against athlete's foot. Athlete's foot comes from common areas that are moist (such as locker room showers), where a person walks barefoot. To prevent athlete's foot, keep your feet clean and dry at all times. Wash them daily, and use a foot powder as well.

Self-diagnosis and treatment for problems such as athlete's foot many not always be in your best interest. Whatever problems your feet encounter, give them professional attention while the problems are still in their minor stages. It's much better, easier, and less costly to deal with problems early on than to face major treatment at a later date. Remember, foot problems usually don't just disappear on their own. Remember, too, that we are here at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER to help when your feet hurt. Call us for an appointment at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

Pavement Management Plan Continues City-Wide

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell and Mayor William Phelan are asking residents to cooperate during a busy 2007 paving season.

In the past three and a half years, the city has paved more than 66 streets under the Pavement Management Plan, they said.

"I appreciate the patience of residents as we systematically repair infrastructure and repair our roads," said Phelan. "We have invested in properly repairing our streets and we will continue to do so. We have made great strides but there is more to be done."

The city is preparing the bid specifications for the next round of paving to be done this summer and fall.

Crews are currently out paving Atlantic Street, Billings Street, Hovey Road, Wadsworth Road and at the intersection of Rawson Road and Hamden Circle. The work is being completed as part of the second phase of the sewer rehabilitation project along Quincy Shore Drive.

Contractors are also in the process of finishing up a major drainage correction on Carlisle Street in North Quincy. A new pump station was installed and new pavement was laid to help alleviate chronic problems in the areas.

Work crews from D & R Construction continue to install new sidewalks along Chickatabot Road, Wampatuck Road, Algonquin Road, and Hobomack Road. New paving will be installed soon after the sidewalks are completed.

D & R will then move onto Agawam Road where they will pave the street around the early-school dismissal schedule for Tuesday afternoons.

Water main work continues throughout Wollaston with Standish Avenue, Carruth Street, and Gilmore Street currently under construction. Once the aging infrastructure is repaired, new pavement will be overlaid on all three streets.

"This is a busy year and we encourage residents to cooperate whenever possible," said O'Donnell. "The more help we get, the more streets we can get to this year."

Haley Replaces McCauley On Retirement Board

Mayor William Phelan has named Robert Haley of Quincy to replace former Mayor Frank McCauley as his representative to the Quincy Retirement Board.

Haley serves as the Town Treasurer of Hanover and is a former officer in the Quincy Taxpayer's Association.

Haley will sit on the five-member Board that includes City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick, Richard Crespi, George McRay, and Roger Perletti.

The Board oversees the management of more than $300 million in assets. They are responsible for reviewing applications for credible services, benefits, refunds, and transfers.

It meets on a monthly basis.

"Few people can combine Bob's knowledge of municipal finance and passion for the City of Quincy," said Phelan. "I am pleased that he has answered the call to service as my appointment to the Retirement Board. I know he will always represent our citizens and taxpayers in every decision made."

Phelan also praised former Mayor Frank McCauley for his service to the Board.

"Frank was a near ideal fit for the Board and he will be missed. I appreciate the service that he continues to provide our great city even after his terms of elected office are complete. Frank is truly one of the finest public servants this city has ever known."

"It's Wrong to Vote on Rights."

Peter Huns

"My two moms have been together for 24 years.

Seeing my parents get married in 2004 was one of the best days of my life.

It was great for the whole world to see that we're a family, and to have the same protections under the law that other families have.

If all this was taken away from us, it would be devastating - to us and to many other families.

I don't think it's a good idea to vote on anyone's rights. It's just not American."

Some people think they should vote on whether Peter's moms should be married.

State legislators are deciding whether or not to put a Constitutional amendment on the 2008 ballot that would take the right to marry away from same-sex couples - and with it, all the important protections for them and their children.

If you believe it's wrong to vote on rights, we need your help.

Please ask your state representative and state senator to vote against this discriminatory Constitutional amendment.

U.S. MINT DIRECTOR Edmund C. Moy presenting a John Adams $1 coin to the ninth generation of the Adams family, Gabriella Ames, at City Hall Plaza on Tuesday.

PETER BOYLSTON ADAMS, a seventh generation Adams family member, speaking at City Hall Plaza Tuesday on the issuance of the new $1 John Adams coin.

The George Washington coin was released in February, and the Adams coin will be followed by Thomas Jefferson and James Madison.

The John Quincy Adams coin is due out next year.

The coin is inscribed on one side: John Adams, 2nd President 1797-1801. On the other side is the Statue of Liberty. "In God We Trust" is on the edge of the coin.

It was a scene at City Hall Plaza that John Adams would have been so proud-with his seventh, eighth and ninth generations attending the introduction to the new coin.

Crowds, balloons, vendors, and John Adams interpreter Sam Goodyear of Cooperstown, N.Y. greeted guests and interacted with local school children.

Goodyear said he has played the part of John Adams since 1995, and said of all the characters he has portrayed, he found John Adams the most interesting.

In describing the coin, Goodyear, holding the coin in the palm of his hand, said "John Adams is truly in the hands of the American people."

Moy said there are $500 million coins now in circulation, and said he hoped the American people will use this coin as a part of a collection, educational programs and in everyday commerce."

Peter Boylston Adams, seventh great grandson of John Adams said bequests left in Quincy from John Adams have been honored and kept in good faith. He called the City of Quincy, a flower slowly opening," and added, "with that trust, I salute you."

Brooks Ames, the eighth generation (Peter Boylston Adams is his great uncle.), introduced his daughter four year old Gabriella Ames, ninth generation of John Adams.

Peter Boylston Adams introduced to the audience, the designer of the coin, Joel Iskowitz. Iskowitz said it took him six weeks to come up with the design for the coin. He researched for four weeks before designing the coin.

When asked what inspired him for the design, he answered "everything about John Adams inspired me." He complimented Charles Vickers, U.S. Mint, as the sculptor of the coin.

In addressing Mayor William Phelan, Moy cited Quincy as a "city of warmth" and that "John Adams would have been proud to see what Quincy has become."

Phelan said no other community has gained more publicity and reminded everyone that Quincy is the only community that produced two presidents.

He said that "John Adams remains the most valuable part of our community."

Later each child from Central Junior High, the Atherton Hough Elementary School where the children adorned white wigs, and the Frances W. Parker School, were given two coins each, "one to spend and one to save."

Moy had indicated he would spend a John Adams coin Tuesday. When asked by a Sun reporter where he would spend it he replied "I've got my eye on a cannoli out there."

Phelan Proposes Multi-Family Development Design Guidelines

Mayor William Phelan, working with the City's Smart Zoning Committee, has proposed the creation of design guidelines to direct developers regarding the construction of multi-unit residential properties.

Phelan included $15,000 in the proposed Fiscal Year 2008 budget to develop the guidelines that would create aesthetic benchmarks for developers when considering multi-family properties.

"We have put the brakes on regarding the over-development of our neighborhoods, but we need to give our boards and commission the tools they need to properly balance the protection of our neighborhoods with property rights," said Phelan.

"By creating design guidelines for multi-family properties, we can ensure that our neighborhoods are not negatively impacted by new development yet monies are still reinvested in our housing stock to upgrade existing, older homes. We need to strike that balance to be a successful."

If the allocation is approved, the Planning Department will hire an independent firm to work with the Smart Zoning Committee in an effort to develop the design guidelines. Currently, design guidelines exist for new projects in the downtown district but no such direction exists for projects outside of the downtown district.

"We must steer development to where it can be sustained, into our downtown, Crown Colony, the shipyard, and other areas," Phelan said. "A city must continue to grow and improve, yet we strive to hold onto the character of our neighborhoods. I believe we can accomplish that through the creation of design guidelines as a primary, but necessarily penultimate, step."

with my fellow City workers, the cost-sharing component for employee benefits is very important to our taxpayers. It may not be a popular position to take, but it's the right one for our taxpayers."

Both the Superior Officers and the Police Patrol units have agreed to a provision that would support the City joining the State's Group Insurance Commission (G.I.C.) Plan if the provision is passed by the State Legislature. Participation in the State's G.I.C. Plan would save the City of Quincy millions of dollars.

"The true long-term solution for both our taxpayers and our employees may be the G.I.C. Plan," Phelan said. "We cannot continue on our current track."

The cost of employee health care was an $18 million line-item in the Fiscal Year 2008 budget. This year, the City has allocated $42 million to cover the costs of employee benefits. Health care costs are rising at a pace double the inflation rate and far outpacing employee income increases, Phelan said. Nationally, the cost of family health insurance has risen 87% since 2000.

Quincy's rate of 90% coverage for employees is the highest in the State. In addition, Quincy's current plan allows for $5 co-payments for employees, another provision that is being restructured.

Energy-Saving Light Bulbs Are Safe

Q. I've heard on the news that the energy-saving twisty lights can cause fire. I have a lot of them — my place can be dark, and I leave them on a lot, and I like them. Should I get rid of all of them, or is it not that serious? They haven't been taken off the market yet. — Grace from Canada

A. A check of the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission Web site (www.cpsc.gov) showed that while two brands of energy-saving, compact fluorescent lights (CFLs) were recalled in 2004, no recalls have been issued recently, and there have been no warnings of such bulbs posing a fire hazard.

An article in "The Green Guide" (www.greenguide.com) discusses the burn marks and melted plastic that some bulb owners have noticed when a CFL burns out. The burns and melting indicate that the burnout took place properly. The way it works is a bit complicated, involving several components of the bulb — including the ballast (the plastic base) and a built-in resistor that operates like a fuse in a home's circuit box. The resistor burns out when the ballast overheats, cutting the electrical circuit and thereby preventing a fire.

However, one should always use common sense around any light source. Use proper lampshades, and keep flammable materials away from the bulbs. When changing a burned-out bulb, turn off the power switch. Also, when installing CFLs, handle them carefully so that the seal between the ballast and glass tubes doesn't crack — an issue that can shorten the life of the bulb and cause minor smoking on burnout.

Remember that, like most things in life, you get what you pay for. Cheaper bulbs are likely to burn out much sooner than more expensive types, meaning you won't save the money the package claims you will save. Make certain when purchasing a CFL that the product is Underwriter's Laboratory (UL) certified — the UL marking should be on the plastic base.

New Mortgage Simulator Empowers Loan Applicants

(NAPS) — If you're ever searching to unlock the mystery of how mortgage lenders view you when you apply for a home loan, look to your computer.

An online tool at truecredit.com/mortgage offers a "Mortgage Simulator" that delivers a report customized for you based not only on debt, income and target home information, but also on your most up-to-date credit information.

It then delivers a listing of mortgage rates for which you should qualify, based on a nationwide survey of rates from the Heitman Group. Rates are continuously updated so you can also check back to see if your rates have changed. The site also has a "What If" tool that helps illustrate how changing various factors—such as a current credit score or debt-to-income ratio—can improve your borrowing power. Sliding the toolbar in a category quickly illustrates how that potential change can impact what you'll pay for years to come. For most people, this should be a real motivator toward taking steps in the right direction.

The bottom line is that by automatically factoring you current credit information into its analysis, this Mortgage Simulator can help you view yourself the way a lender will, which can really empower you as a loan applicant.

Did You Know?

• If your credit needs a boost, you should start actively working to improve your score six to 12 months before you plan to secure a new mortgage.

• A credit-monitoring service can allow you to check all of your reports and scores as often as you want and alert you automatically by e-mail whenever a critical change occurs on any of your three reports.

• There's a wealth of free credit education information available online that can help you better understand the topic of credit and how you can learn to manage your own financial health.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Targeting Those "Problem" Areas

Q. I have been working out and eating well for the past several months, and I am seeing good results and feel great. I can tell my body is changing by how my clothes look and by how I feel. However, I'm still not seeing a significant change in my "problem areas." Is there anything I can do about this?

A. You're not alone, as many people share this same concern. Although you are seeing results throughout your whole body, there are still a few places that seem to be cooperating. There are a few factors to consider when wanting to see body composition changes.

Workout progressions, nutritional and lifestyle habits, in addition to medical conditions and genetics, play a large part in how your body responds to exercise and nutrition. Developing a plan that takes into consideration all of these factors can guide you toward reaching your goals.

Unfortunately, we have to rule out the option of spot training. Being able to focus your exercise routine on one particular muscle group in hopes of seeing results in that area alone is not possible. A total body exercise routine that consists of resistance and cardiovascular training will help you gain lean muscle mass and lose fat throughout your whole body.

Monitor your exercise program, and be sure to keep progressing. If you're performing the same workout routine for long periods of time, your body will become efficient at performing the exercises and not have to exert as much effort. This is your cue to change or modify your program to create a challenge.

Nutrition and lifestyle habits are other factors to evaluate. Practicing balanced eating habits and keeping a stress-free lifestyle are necessary for your body to fully have the opportunity to change. As with exercise, you want to monitor your eating and lifestyle habits to be sure they are complementing each other.

It is important to recognize the role that certain medical conditions and genetics play in regards to your body composition. Speak with your physician about any medical conditions and medications that may have an effect on your body. Be sure to be honest about your activity level and nutritional habits.

Genetics play a big role in determining how your body will respond to exercise and where it decides to place body fat. Looking at an immediate family member can sometimes give you an idea of places such as hips or thighs that you may find if you are not happy about what you see. Keep working hard and stay consistent to see the results you desire.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kws@heartsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Understanding Medicine

Medicare Strives To Help You Stay Healthy

(NAPS) - If you have Medicare, three important steps can help put you on the road to better health.

• Step 1: Know your health history.

• Step 2: Talk to your doctor about the Medicare preventive services that are right for you.

• Step 3: Register for My Medicare.gov on any computer.

These three easy steps can take you toward a healthier life.

Being physically active, eating a healthy diet, staying at a healthy weight and not smoking all work to keep you healthy and help you live longer. But there is more you can do to protect your health and prevent disease.

Don't overlook routine preventive services such as cancer screenings (mammogram, colorectal, prostate) and cardiovascular screenings and simple things such as getting a flu shot. These tests and services are critical to your overall health and can help you prevent diseases or detect them early, when treatment works best.

If you need help remembering the services you received and the tests you need each year, you can use the MyMedicare.gov Web tool to help you (1) track the preventive services you used and (2) remind yourself about other covered services that are right for you. You can visit the MyMedicare.gov Web site from any computer with Internet access to take advantage of these benefits. If you don't have a computer with Internet access, ask family members of loved ones if they do. Or visit your local library, where there are usually public computers with Internet access.

Start taking your three steps to prevention today. Know your health history, talk to your doctor about the screenings and services that are best for you and register for MyMedicare.gov. Set an example for your family and friends. Taking these steps can lead to better health and quality of life for you and those you love.

Look for a "Healthier US Starts Here" event in your area to learn more about Medicare preventive services. Or visit www.medicare.gov on the Web or call (800) MEDICARE (800-633-4227) to get a free copy of "Staying Healthy: Medicare's Preventive Services." On the Web, select "Find a Medicare Publication" under "Search Tools."

Foot Facts: Pointers on Pedicures

(NAPS) - When it comes to putting your best foot forward, few things can compare to treating your toes to a pedicure. Fortunately, with a few professional tips and tools, you can indulge yourself anytime you need a relaxing treat.

Step 1: Start by removing old polish with acetone polish remover, then soak feet in a warm bath. To really refresh feet, try an aromatherapy foot soak. You can also add an effervescent whitening soak to remove stains and whiten nails. OrigiNails Bubble White works wonders on nails stained from dark polishes.

Step 2: Use a foot file or a pumice stone to smooth softened calluses. A sloughing lotion or polishing scrub can make this easier. Apply a cuticle remover to the cuticles. In general, try not to cut your cuticles, as it can actually promote hangnails or infect the area. While the cuticle remover is doing its job, trim toenails and shape the nails with a fine-grit cushioned file.

Step 3: Use a birchwood stick wrapped in cotton to push back the cuticle, then gently buff the nails with a buffer block.

Step 4: Massage feet and legs with moisturizing lotion, paying special attention to heels; then clean the surface of the nails with acetone-moistened cotton so the polish adheres better.

Step 5: Use toe separators or cotton balls to spread toes and help prevent any polish smudges. Apply base coat, then two coats of polish and finish with a protective topcoat. A topcoat with UV protection will also keep your polish from yellowing. That can be a problem for light-colored polishes.

If your toes get a lot of exposure to sand and surf, prevent your polish from chipping by reapplying a topcoat every two to three days. Feet can also get overheated and less than pleasant during long, hot days. Just a spritz of Heel to Toe Refreshing Foot Spray can cool feet and eliminate any odor.

Keep feet moisturized by applying a balm or body butter just before bed and sleep with socks on to seal that moisture in.

The 25th annual Jimmy Fund Scooper Bowl will visit the Central Middle School in Quincy on June 5-7.

Central Middle School will pay tribute to the late Patrick White, a former student who lost his battle with rhabdomyosarcoma, a soft tissue cancer. Patrick's twin sisters now attend Central and are in the sixth grade.

On Friday, May 25, students will have an opportunity to buy a ticket and enjoy an ice cream sundae with their teacher and classmates.

According to the organizer of this effort, Joanne Minton, teachers, staff and members of the White family will help serve the ice cream.

This year marks the 25th annual Jimmy Fund Scooper Bowl. Schools, youth groups, and other student organizations can plan and run an ice cream fundraiser to benefit cancer research and care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Groups can host an ice cream social, set up an ice cream booth in the school cafeteria, or dish up an ice cream eating contest. The goal is for students to be creative, build self-confidence, and most importantly, understand the significance of giving back to the community.

The Jimmy Fund will support participating schools or groups with ice cream cups and banners for the fundraisers. A special Jimmy Fund Scooper Schools Plaque will be given to the top fundraising organization.

The nation's largest all-you-can-eat ice cream festival is open from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday, June 5, and Thursday, June 7. Hours are extended to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, June 6. Schools that raise more than $1,000 will earn free admission to the Jimmy Fund Scooper Bowl for 120 students. Students who raise $500 or more will earn free admission for 70 children.

Patient Appreciation Day To Support Jeannie Cleary Fund

Dr. Steven M. Windwer president of Milton Chiropractic & Rehabilitation, Inc. will host the 17th annual Patient Appreciation Day on Thursday June 7, at his place of business, 111 Willard St., Suite 2A, Quincy, MA.

The hours will be 8:30 a.m. to noon and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. All proceeds will be donated to the Jeannie Cleary Fund.

Jeannie is a 39-year old and $250 or more earns free admission for 30 students.

To become a Scooper School contact Sarah Neukom at (617) 632-5008.

Scooper Bowl admission is $7 for adults, $3 for children ages 3-9, and free for children younger than 3.

There is a Scooper Pass for $15, which allows ticket holders to skip the line and enter the Scooper Bowl up to three times. The Scooper Pass is on sale until June 4.

For advance ticket sales and more information, visit www.scooperbowl.org.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MOTHER'S GUM DISEASE MAY POSE RISK TO UNBORN

Women should be particularly diligent about scheduling regular professional dental cleanings and exams before, during, and after their pregnancies. One particularly good reason for doing so is that a recent study shows that pregnant women with periodontal (gum) disease are at increased risk for delivering their babies prematurely. Aside from delivering early, women with pregnancy gingivitis may also give birth to smaller babies, whether they are born prematurely or at term. The potential threat posed to infants by gum disease in their mothers may be explained by the fact that the bacteria in plaque can enter the bloodstream. The body then responds to resultant infections by producing chemicals known as prostaglandins, which can signal labor to begin.

Are you pregnant or thinking of becoming pregnant?

When was the last time you had your teeth examined by your dentist? If you need answers to your questions about dental health concerns, don't hesitate to contact us. We feel that dental visits should be positive experiences. Keeping teeth and gums healthy with contribute to overall health and enjoyment of life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where teaching you how to preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime is our primary goal. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Pregnant women with gingivitis may also develop growths on their gums called "pregnancy tumors" (pyogenic granulomas), which are non-cancerous growths caused by plaque-induced inflammation.

Quincy Clinches League Crown Presidents Rule The Court

By SEAN BRENNAN
The Quincy High School boys' volleyball team is quickly becoming "the greatest show on court."

The Presidents enter the final week of the spring season with a 15-3 overall record. On top of that, Quincy has already clinched the South Alliance League championship with its perfect 10-0 league record.

The Presidents played on Monday night against Weymouth High School in their final 2007 regular season game, but regardless of the outcome of that game, Quincy will be playing in the South Sectional tournament for the first time in three years starting next week. The team is already guaranteed a first-round home game and should be seeded among the top 2-3 teams in the post-season field.

"I am lucky to have a true team this spring," said head coach Ed Smith, a former Quincy President volleyball player himself (1994-1998) and a science teacher at the high school. "We have a team full of kids who are working together. We started the season with a home loss to Weymouth, but we have also rolled over the weaker teams that we should have beat."

The Presidents won three out of their first five games (with their second loss coming at New Bedford), before stringing together a 12-1 record over their next thirteen games. Included in this 12-1 stretch were two victories over defending South Alliance League champions Greater New Bedford Vocational High School and two wins over cross-city rival and league runner-up last year, North Quincy High School.

"This year's team is different from any team I have had in the past," said Smith. "Our advantage was that we have a group of players who have dedicated themselves to volleyball as their sole sport. The roster is made up of two seniors, eight juniors, one sophomore and one freshman. These guys—and especially my juniors—made a pact their freshman year that they would dedicate themselves to volleyball and to each other and the program."

Junior Andrew Paine (middle hitter), considered by the experts to be a top-10 player in Massachusetts, is a member of the national team and one of the brightest stars in high school volleyball. Paine has 373 kills, only 89 errors, a hitting percentage of .364 and an average of

CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL recently participated in the Walk for Hunger. This year's total donation of $2,080 was the largest donation in the school's three-year history of participation. Jim Phelan, a Central Middle School eighth grade social studies teacher, spearheaded the project. Fourth Annual 100 Innings Charity Event At Adams Field This Weekend

Local sports marketing firm, Charity Hop, will be hosting the 4th annual 100 Innings of Baseball Spectacular this weekend, May 26-27, at Adams Field.

The first pitch of the game will be thrown at 9 a.m. on Saturday. The contest will then continue on, with no breaks in the action, until 100 complete innings are in the books on Sunday evening. This will be the fourth straight year that this marathon game will be attempted. Upwards of 100 local players are expected to suit up and raise funds over the course of the event—and more are welcomed and encouraged to sign up at the field or by visiting www.100innings.com.

The 100 Innings of Baseball Spectacular is far more significant than just 91 extra innings. The game will aim to bring awareness and raise funds to help eliminate Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease. Proceeds will go directly to benefit the ALS Association MA Chapter and its Curt's Pitch for ALS program—the initiative started by Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling and his wife Shonda.

Michael Lembo, co-founder of Charity Hop and coordinator of the event, has been thrilled with the success that the 100 Innings contest has brought in its three year run.

"We are so proud that this event has raised over $300,000 in just three years, and we are excited for the prospects this weekend may bring."

Sponsors for the 2007 event include the City of Quincy, CVS/pharmacy, Vitamin Water, WEEI Radio, Authentic Awards, Reebok, Longball Vineyards and the MA Baseball Umpire Association.

To sign up to play, make a donation, become a sponsor, or for more information visit www.100innings.com or come down to Adams Field in person.

St. John's Baseball Highlights

The St. John's Baseball League started off their 2007 season, at both their first little league and first farm league game, with a dedication to Anthony Constantino, Constantino, the founder of the St. John's Baseball League, recently passed away.

His son, Bob, threw out the first ball at the little league game, and shouted out his father's famous words, "Play ball."

St. John's Baseball League began its 49th year this spring.

Little League results Pirates 10, Giants 5

It was a tough start for the defending champions, the Giants. They gave up five runs in the first inning, but then Brian "the wild thing" Fisher came on in relief and did a nice job.

Second baseman Billy Escobar stood out on defense for the Giants.

Giants 8, Athletics 3 Chris Lamont pitched three shutout innings for the Giants. Shawn Thomas came in to pitch in the fourth inning and did a nice job.

Robbie Cameron knocked in two runs for the Giants.

Yankees 12, Athletics 8

Dillon Darcy, Adam Cook and Richie Turpin all played well for the Yankees.

Pirates 8, Yankees 0

Outstanding players for the Yankees included Franklin Pany, Christian Fuller and Charlie Montes.

Farm League results

Tigers 4, Red Sox 0

Outstanding players for the Tigers included Mike Kostka (1-for-1), Tristan McCormick, Kimberly Dunn and Julie Silverman.

Orioles 2, Tigers 1

Outstanding player for the Red Sox was Dan Wenerwiez who had eight strikeouts in three innings.

Red Sox 11, Angles 3

Shyam Shukla had a RBI in the third inning for the Red Sox.

Orioles 4, Angles 2

Outstanding players of the game for the Orioles were Josh Campbell and Mark Haajar.

Orioles 2, Tigers 1

Presidents Rule The Court

20.7 kills per match this season. Paine has played a major role in all 18 matches this season.

"Andrew plays the game at such a high level," said Smith. "He is a member of the national team and he plays volleyball all year-round. His ability is what makes him one of the top player in the state."

Junior Brendan Paine is the team's defensive specialist, and junior Mike Mottola (middle hitter) has 129 kills, only 48 errors and a 7.2 kills per match average. Mottola plays club volleyball in the off-season.

Tan, only a sophomore plays at the setter position. He has 596 assists (with a high of 55 versus Weymouth in the season-opener) and 62 digs on the spring.

freshmen Vasil Palo (defensive specialist) and Joe Spargo (outside hitter).

In the Presidents clinching league title match, Quincy knocked off North Quincy three games to one. The final scores for the games were 25-13, 25-21, 23-25 and 25-17.

Andrew Paine finished the match with 25 kills and Brendan Paine added 13 digs for the Presidents.

On the season, Quincy defeated Taunton (twice), Wareham (twice), Barnstable (twice), Duxbury (twice), Brockton (twice), NQ (twice), Greater New Bedford Vocational (twice) and Newton South (once). They lost to Weymouth and New Bedford (twice).

"We lost to New Bedford, but they are a super-power every year in volleyball," said Smith. "Every other team we knocked off. We have earned the high seed which we will be getting when the seeding come out. We are about to earn the first home tournament game in team history."

The Quincy Presidents are the South Alliance League champions, and they are one of a small number of teams that will be vying for a South Sectional tournament title.

Go check them out. The "greatest show on court" will be performing at Quincy High School's East Gym next week.

Lady Presidents Travel Basketball

The Lady Presidents Travel Basketball teams recently completed a phenomenal season by having a great showing in the Old Colony League playoffs.

Two of the four teams won their divisional league championship; one team was the runner-up and another lost in double overtime in the league semifinals.

Fifth Grade (16-0 overall record) League Champions

The Quincy Lady Presidents 5th grade travel team capped off their 16-0 season by defeating Scituate, Braintree and Pembroke to capture the Old Colony League championship. All of the team members showed great sportsmanship throughout the season, making all involved with this program proud.

The members of this year's championship team included Julie Bloomer, Taylor Parry, Rachel Papile, Emma Papile, Alyssa Lydon, Dominique Lucier, Kayla McArdle, Cassidy Toldness, Kyra Hockey, Kelsey Tucker, Alycia Spargo, Lauren Gambon and Elena McDonough.

Sixth Grade (13-2 overall record) League Semifinalists

The sixth grade team had a fantastic year. Their defensive traps were key in the games and helped led them to a 13-2 overall record. The team lost their division in a hard-fought double-overtime semifinal.

The members of this year's semifinalist team included Caitlin Bulger, Callie Cabral, Kathleen Conroy, Ashley Daniels, Julianne Downey, Maryssa Dwyer, Christine Kelliher, Liz Kelly, Sam McArdle, Lisa McCarthy, Devin McMahon, Jackie Merchant, Emma Murphy and Abigale Yotts.

Seventh Grade (15-1 overall record) League Champions

The seventh grade team began their championship playoff run with a 37-12 victory over Weymouth in the conference quarterfinals. Quincy was led by Lizzie Kelley's eight points and Therese Triglia's four points along with the fine defensive efforts by Shannon Moriarty, Erin Chiochio and Donna Niosi.

Quincy defeated Rockland 35-25 in the conference semifinals behind Emily Nguyen and Olivia Toldness' four points along with the full court defensive pressure applied by Julia Murphy, Julia Toomer and Jacki Hughes.

In the conference finals, Quincy defeated Whitman by a score of 34-21. Kylie McDonald lead all scorers with 11 points, Nicole Parry scored 10 points and Nicole Lamie scored six points for the Lady Presidents.

In the league championship game, Quincy played East Bridgewater, the only team that defeated the seventh grade team during the regular season. The Lady Presidents jumped out to an early 14-2 lead and never looked back.

Offensively Kylie McDonald's 8 points, Nicole Lamie's five points and Lizzie Kelley's five points paced the team. Defensively the team was lead by Caitlyn Lowry, Janelle Leone and Nicole Parry.

Eighth Grade (12-4 overall record) League Finalists

The eighth grade team was made up of 11 dedicated basketball players. The team started the playoffs by beating Weymouth 38-28. Katie Curran, Talia Hampton and Uyen Vu all played well.

In the conference semifinals, Quincy knocked off Scituate 34-28. The team never trailed and had seven players score. Julia White played an outstanding game along with Brittany Brennan who dominated in the post.

In the conference finals, Quincy earned some revenge over Whitman (they had defeated Quincy 25-22 in the regular season) with a 42-35 victory. Kori Sorensen scored a season-high 25 points and Kaleigh McKeon scored 11 points. Also playing well were Shelby Oliver, Christina Cahill and Courtney Peters.

In the league championship game, Quincy lost a hard-fought game to East Bridgewater 45-35.

The Lady Presidents were down 23-12 at halftime, but their valiant comeback in the final minutes (down by 5 points with two minutes to play) fell just short. Erin Hockey, who was injured throughout the playoffs, contributed with great team spirit throughout the post season.

Third Annual Quincy Soccer Clinic June 19-22

The third annual Quincy Soccer Clinic for players in grades 1-8 will be held June 19-22 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

SPRING CAR CARE

Personal Or Commercial Car Insurance?

(NAPS) - If, like many Americans, your family car is also used for purposes that could be considered commercial use, you may want to steer yourself into a chair and look over your insurance policy.

You'll need to consider buying a commercial policy or making sure that your existing personal auto policy covers the vehicle for business use. Whether or not you need a commercial policy depends on how you use your vehicle and what company you have it insured with. Every company has different guidelines and may surcharge for business-use coverage on a personal auto policy.

If you're not sure whether business use is covered on your personal policy, it's important to call your insurance company or agent. The Progressive Group of Insurance Companies has put together these four questions you may want to ask:

• How do companies

determine "commercial use"? One definition could include "engaging in transporting goods for compensation or a fee," which includes pizza or newspaper delivery, catering, door-to-door consulting services, landscaping or snowplowing services, logging business, day care/church van services or farm-to-market delivery. People who do these kinds of work should consider purchasing a commercial vehicle policy.

• Do you need more liability coverage than a personal auto policy provides? Generally, a commercial auto policy offers higher limits of liability, but less or no coverage in areas that are typically not associated with commercial auto risks.

• Do you need special coverage for situations encountered while conducting business? Commercial auto policies usually offer these coverages, and they're normally not available with personal auto policies. These include hired and nonowned auto coverage and coverage for towing a trailer for business use.

• Do you need to list any employees as drivers? Commercial auto policies allow you to list anyone that you employ. You don't have that option with a personal auto policy. In general, you'll need commercial auto coverage if the vehicle you use is owned by a corporate partnership or driven by employees, or if it's used to haul tools or equipment weighing more than 500 pounds, make deliveries or heavy enough to require state or federal filings.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, May 6, at approximately 9:10 p.m., Officers Steven Elmes and Robert Curtis responded to Newbury Avenue on a report of a disorder.

Officer Curtis arrived on scene first. Officer Curtis stated when he approached the door, he could hear yelling and then a female voice state, "I'll f--- & @& kill you." He then heard a male scream, "Stop it, get away from me - now."

Officer Curtis then heard banging as if there was a scuffle. The officer banged on the door loudly and announced that it was the Quincy Police at the door and radioed for Officer Elmes to speed up his response. Officer Curtis banged on the door again and when no one came to the door, he tried to open the door but it was locked. He again yelled it was the Quincy Police and as he readied to force the door, a male with blood on his head, face and clothing opened it. As soon as the male saw the officer, he said "Please help me - stop her - she stabbed me. She's in the kitchen."

As Officer Curtis stepped toward the kitchen, the female came into the living room and yelled, "Get him out of here. He don't live here." She had blood on her as well as fresh bruises on her face. The officer also noted the female appeared unsteady on her feet. Officer Curtis told the female to sit on the couch numerous times as he tried to separate them.

As Officer Curtis called for an ambulance and waited assistance, the male and female increased their hostilities towards each other. After numerous warnings to cease, Officer Curtis handcuffed the male for his own protection. The female continued to scream at the male. Officer Curtis examined her wounds and at the same time determined that she was drunk. The female said the fight was over her boyfriend's refusal to go to church with her earlier that day.

Officers Elmes and Lane Watkins arrived and the investigation continued. Officer Elmes interviewed the male, who had several scrapes and marks on his face. He confirmed they lived together and were boyfriend-girlfriend. He said he came home and sat down to eat when she attacked him at the table, punching him in the face. He said she was acting like a lunatic and blurted out that she stabbed him!

When asked where he was stabbed in his body, the male said he was unsure where, but was positive he was stabbed, describing the knife as a brown, gold and folding. Officer Elmes attempted to question the female about the incident, but she was now incoherent and rambling loudly. She said her boyfriend came home and began yelling and pushing her around. She stated he broke a glass over her head. The officer asked her to show him the broken glass. She led him to the kitchen but there was no broken glass.

She then said he did not break glass on her head. The female then changed her story many times and spoke incoherently as she ranted and raved.

Officer Elmes looked around the kitchen. He noted there was a plate and food on the table, supporting the male's account of the incident. Officer Elmes received permission from the male and female to search the apartment and minutes later he found the folding knife, which had blood on it. Officer Elmes then placed the 50-year-old female under arrest for assault and battery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Fallon Ambulance technicians attempted to examine her prior to being transported to the station, but she fused medical assistance. With Fallon Ambulance there, Officer Elmes told black belt, tan khaki pants, and black dress shoes.

LARCENY, 2:13 p.m., 83 Conant St. Baby carriage. Last Munday a Peregé stroller valued at $300 was stolen from yard.

VANDALISM/PROPERTY, 2:33 p.m., 15 Pray St. Spray paint to house. JG spray painted twice on the side of the house.

LARCENY, 8:58 p.m., Stop & Shop Supermarket, 495 Southern Artery, Waller.

THURSDAY, MAY 17

MOST RECENT SCAM: A Wollaston mother brought this scam to my attention. Her son is a college student and he received a letter enclosed with a $300 debit Gift Card with the "MasterCard" emblem on the front of the card. There was also an expiration date of 10/07 on the front of the card.

The letter is from PCFS, but does not identify what the initials stand for. The letter is also very ambiguous, especially if read with the belief that you have already provided your testimony about their "free service." There are red flags in the letter itself. The MasterCard emblem looked faded, there was a note stating the card would have to be activated, which means you must first contact them, and on the back in small letters, it states you must meet certain criteria. "This offer is not guaranteed if you do not meet our requirements."

The first question one must ask after contemplating the old adage of "if it's too good to be true, it probably isn't," is "Did I ever provide testimony to this company?" The first step was to check online by typing in "PCFS," which provided the group's name of Post Collegiate Financial Services, located in Holiday, Fla. There was also numerous links to negative comments about the free $300 gift card because it comes with obligations.

I then called the number on the letter to make inquiries. The PCFS employee told me the card is not activated until the recipient passes a prescreening which would qualify that person to consolidate their college loans at a different rate. It is only after the recipient qualifies that the testimonial stage kicks in.

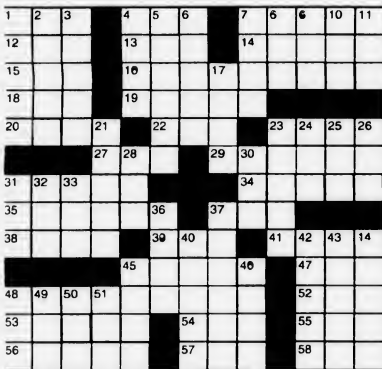

When I inquired about those callers who have passed the prescreening but do not refinance and consolidate their loans with PCFS, how many callers had their gift cards activated, the employee said it is usually when a college student actually switches over to PCFS.

Remember, when activation is required, it involves conversing with the company and it is then that you find out the price for the $300 gift card. I can bet it will be over $300!

The Garden Bug

Beneficial bug

Attract adult lacewings to lay eggs around your garden by growing alyssum, daisies or dillweed, and placing stones in a water source so they can rest and drink. Their larvae eat up to 200 aphids, thrips, mites, whiteflies or other soft-bodied garden pests each week.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A stubborn refusal to go ahead on a project mystifies colleagues who expected more flexibility. But once you explain your position, they'll understand and even applaud you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A relationship seems to be stuck in the same place. Now it's up to you, dear Bovine, to decide how far you want it to go and how intense you want it to be. Choose well and choose soon.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relationship progresses more slowly than you would prefer. Best advice: Insist on a frank and open discussion. What is learned could change minds and, maybe, hearts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's all right to be grateful to a workplace colleague who has done you a good turn. But gratitude shouldn't be a life-long obligation. The time to break this cycle is now.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's going to be especially nice to be the King of the Zodiac at this time. A recent money squeeze eases. Plans start to work out, and new friends enter Your Majesty's domain.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Before you make a commitment on any level (personal, professional, legal), get all the facts. There might be hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Personal relationships improve. Professional prospects also brighten. A job offer could come through by month's end. An old friend seeks to make contact.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your senses detect that something is not quite right about a matter involving a workplace colleague. Best advice: Follow your keen instincts and don't get involved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A prospect offers rewards, but it also demands that you assume a great deal of responsibility. Knowing you, you're up to the challenge, so go for it, and good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A favor you did a long time ago is repaid, as a trusted colleague steps in to help you with a suddenly expanded workload. A family member has important news.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new job offer could require moving across the country. But before you let your doubts determine your decision, learn more about the potentials involved.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sense of fair play doesn't allow you to rush to judgment about a friend who might have betrayed you. Good! Because all the facts are not yet in.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a romantic nature that allows you to find the best in people. You would excel at poetry and drama.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Memorial Day is an occasion of inspiration and sorrow. We are inspired by the valor of those who placed our nation's safety above personal survival; saddened by the loss of bright and honorable lives.

Whether the weather is sombre and stormy, or sunny and springlike, traditional parades, speeches, bugler sounded taps and neighborhood wreath-laying observances are seen every where on Memorial Day. American flags fly nearly everywhere in the work in memory of all our heroic dead who served their country in the time of need.

Americanism at its finest is in the scene of homage on this holiday. In the solemn tribute to our military dead, in recognition of their lives, dreams and hopes cut short, let us hope our prayers are heard for the deliverance from the horrors of future wars. With God's help, each living generation must avoid situations of our young men and women ever again being put in harm's way...

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS MASSACHUSETTS HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

A Design Public Hearing will be held by MassHighway to discuss the proposed Quincy Center Concourse roadway construction project in the City of Quincy.

WHERE: Thomas Crane Public Library
Large Meeting Room, First floor
40 Washington Street
Quincy, MA 02169

WHEN: Wednesday, May 30, 2007 at 7:00 P.M.

PURPOSE: The purpose of this hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to become fully acquainted with the proposed Quincy Center Concourse project. All views and comments made at the hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project consists of roadway and sidewalk reconstruction with new traffic signals along the new alignment from the end of the MassHighway Phase I project to the project limit west of the Washington Street intersection for a distance of 1900 feet. A 600 ft section of Quincy Avenue/Hancock Street is proposed for reconstruction including the intersection with Elm Street/School Street. The project continues along Elm Street improving the roadway layout and corner geometries. The project continues along Mechanic Street from 500 feet until the intersection with Revere Road.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Quincy is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassHighway's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassHighway subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout is available on the MassHighway website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to David Anderson, P.E., Acting Chief Engineer, Massachusetts Highway Department, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. The final date of receipt of these statements and exhibits for inclusion in the public hearing transcript will be ten (10) days after this Public Hearing.

The community has declared that this facility is accessible to all in compliance with the ADA/Title II. However, persons in need of ADA/Title II accommodations should contact Angela Rudikoff by phone at (617) 973-7005 or e-mail angela.rudikoff@eot.state.ma.us. Requests must be made at least 10 days prior to the date of the public hearing.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the MassHighway website <http://www.mass.gov/mhd>.

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR PROBATE OF WILL

To all persons interested in the above captioned estate, a petition has been presented praying that a document purporting to be the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed, and that HANNELORE GLASER LYASOFF also known as HANNELORE GLASER of BROOKLINE in the County of NORFOLK or some other suitable person be appointed executor, named in the will to serve without surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT CANTON ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON (10:00AM) ON JULY 11, 2007.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, HON. DAVID H. KOPELMAN, ESQUIRE, First Justice of said Court at CANTON this day, May 10, 2007.

Quincy Shore Drive Repaving Project To Begin June 4

The Department of Conservation & Recreation has issued a traffic advisory on the "cold planing" or scraping prior to resurfacing Quincy Shore Drive between East Squantum and Fenno Streets.

"According to the DCR engineers, scraping is expected to occur between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on Monday, June 4, and should be completed by Friday, June 8," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

During the designated hours of construction, traffic on Quincy Shore Drive will be reduced to one lane in each direction. The hours of construction are designed to avoid rush hour congestion.

"Similar work has just taken place on Quincy Shore Drive from East Squantum Street to the Neponset Bridge," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

The actual repaving work is scheduled to be performed from June 15 through June 29 with lane marking work to follow on July 9 through July 13.

Constituent questions or concerns should be addressed to Morrissey's State House office at 617-722-1494.

QHS, NQHS Graduations At Adams Field

Quincy and North Quincy High School graduations will be held at Adams Field.

The North Quincy graduation is scheduled for Monday, June 4 at 6 p.m.

The Quincy High School graduation will be Tuesday, June 5 at 6 p.m.

Rain date for both high schools is Wednesday, June 6 at 6 p.m. at Adams Field.

Rev. Swanson In Memorial Day Warning:

'Reckless' Iraq War Comments Draw Strong Criticism

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, used the lectern Monday to denounce those celebrities, columnists and ex-Presidents who make reckless and uninformed comments on the war in Iraq. "This kind of behavior," he said, "reflects a shallowness and self-inflation that can not only harm but even be fatal to democracy."

"Let us stand up and, in every way possible, in front of the whole world, love, honor and cherish this blessed nation of ours, this greatest nation on God's green earth."

Swanson, who also served as a Navy chaplain for 10 years, was the guest speaker at the World War II Memorial in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery as Quincy folks defied an intermittent rain to attend the annual Memorial Day parade.

The marching units set off promptly at 10:30 a.m., proceeding down Hancock Street to United First Parish Church, where Mayor William Phelan and Lorraine Ahern, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (QVC), placed wreaths on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams.

Parade viewers put down their umbrellas long enough to applaud the marching veterans as the procession resumed, turning down Coddington Street to the cemetery where hundreds of flags waved over the graves of departed veterans.

At the War Memorial, the audience was greeted by Commander Ahern, who reminded them that "there are no popular wars... freedom is not free. No soldier, not even one, comes home from war unscathed. That is the price we all pay for freedom."

Mayor Phelan called the veterans' section of the cemetery the "Memorial Day" with its colorful red, white and blue flags, "the most beautiful sight in all of Quincy."

"Hundreds of American flags mark the service of generations of Quincy men and women," he said. "Each marker and every flag may all be the same, but each story of sacrifice and service to country is different."

The mayor stressed the importance of "taking time on days like today and every day throughout the year to remember our servicemen and women... people who on this very day are in dangerous situations throughout

Quincy Shore Drive Repaving Project To Begin June 4

The Department of Conservation & Recreation has issued a traffic advisory on the "cold planing" or scraping prior to resurfacing Quincy Shore Drive between East Squantum and Fenno Streets.

"According to the DC&R engineers, scraping is expected to occur between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on Monday, June 4, and should be completed by Friday, June 8," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

During the designated hours of construction, traffic on Quincy Shore Drive will be reduced to one lane in each direction. The hours of construction are designed to avoid rush hour congestion.

"Similar work has just taken place on Quincy Shore Drive from East Squantum Street to the Neponset Bridge," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

The actual repaving work is scheduled to be performed from June 15 through June 29 with lane marking work to follow on July 9 through July 13.

Constituent questions or concerns should be addressed to Morrissey's State House office at 617-722-1494.

QHS, NORTH Graduations At Adams Field

Quincy and North Quincy High School graduations will be held at Adams Field.

The North Quincy graduation is scheduled for Monday, June 4 at 6 p.m.

The Quincy High School graduation will be Tuesday, June 5 at 6 p.m.

Rain date for both high schools is Wednesday, June 6 at 6 p.m. at Adams Field.

Rev. Swanson In Memorial Day Warning:

'Reckless' Iraq War Comments Draw Strong Criticism

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, used the lectern Monday to denounce those celebrities, columnists and x-Presidents who make reckless and uninformed comments on the war in Iraq.

"This kind of behavior," he said, "reflects a shallowness and self-inflation that can not only harm but even be fatal to democracy."

"Let us stand up and, in every way possible, in front of the whole world, love, honor and cherish this blessed nation of ours, this greatest nation on God's green earth."

Swanson, who also served as a Navy chaplain for 10 years, was the guest speaker at the World War II Memorial in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery as Quincy folks defied an intermittent rain to attend the annual Memorial Day parade.

The marching units set off promptly at 10:30 a.m., proceeding down Hancock Street to United First Parish Church where Mayor William Phelan and Lorraine Ahern, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (QVC) placed wreaths on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams.

Parade viewers put down their umbrellas long enough to applaud the marching veterans as the procession resumed, turning down Coddington Street to the cemetery where hundreds of flags waved over the graves of departed veterans.

At the War Memorial, the audience was greeted by Commander Ahern, who reminded them that "there are no popular wars... freedom is not free. No soldier, not even one, comes home from war unscathed. That is the price we all pay for freedom."

Mayor Phelan called the veterans' section of the cemetery on Memorial Day with its colorful red, white and blue flags, "the most beautiful sight in all of Quincy."

"Hundreds of American flags mark the service of generations of Quincy men and women," he said. "Each marker and every flag may all be the same, but each story of sacrifice and service to country is different."

The mayor stressed the importance of "taking time on days like today and every day throughout the year to remember our servicemen and women... people who on this very day are in dangerous situations throughout

Quincy Asian Resources Receives $90,000 Grant From Comcast

The Comcast Foundation announces a three-year, $90,000 grant to support the expansion of English language education at Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), a nonprofit organization serving the Asian community in Quincy.

The funds will enable QARI to accommodate additional students and grow its current English language curriculum to include citizenship preparedness.

In addition, the Comcast grant will support QARI's Information and Referral Program (I&R), which helps members of the local Asian community access various human service agencies. Through this program, QARI helps people access services, win referrals to job training programs and translate documents.

More than 900 members of Quincy's Asian community used this service last year.

QARI is also offering a number of seminars through the Information and Referral Program (I&R) such as a free legal education seminar offered in conjunction with the Asian American Lawyers Association of Massachusetts on June 9.

"Comcast is committed to investing in the communities where our customers and our employees live," said Tom Coughlin, vice president of Comcast's Southeastern Massachusetts Region. "QARI is making a powerful impact in Quincy, and we're excited to renew our partnership with them and the City of Quincy to invest in the future of this community, and we look forward to helping this important program continue to flourish."

With the new ESOL for Citizenship training, QARI will help more students understand the power of citizenship, said Tackey Chan, treasurer of the QARI Board of Directors.

"Our goal here at QARI is to help newcomers to America find their version of the American Dream," he said. "Thanks to Comcast's support, we now can show our English language students even more of the possibilities that this country holds for them."

"We want them to understand that success here isn't just about getting a job, buying a home and supporting your family. It's about becoming a citizen, voting for the government you want and taking part in the American conversation."

In addition to Comcast's support, the City of Quincy has also partnered with QARI, providing classroom space in City Hall since September 2005.

"I am proud to support QARI and the many valuable programs that it provides to our communities. QARI not only provides valuable services to our Asian citizens, they are a bridge across cultures, bringing all Quincy citizens together," said Mayor, William J. Phelan.

Sen. Michael W.

FRANK POON (left) of South Shore Elder Services and QARI's Board of Directors speaks with several participants at the community meeting room at the Thomas Crane Public Library. During the program, the Comcast Foundation announced a three-year, $90,000 grant to support Quincy Asian Resources.

Morrissey, also a longtime supporter of QARI, praised the nonprofit agency, Comcast and the City of Quincy for this commitment to English language training.

"QARI's commitment to civic education is unparalleled. Our community is grateful to partnering corporations in our area like Comcast who donate valuable time and resources to our important civic and community organizations," said Senator Morrissey.

According to statistics cited by QARI, the Asian population in Quincy has rapidly increased over the last 15 years, underscoring the importance of enhancing support services as these individuals transition into the greater Massachusetts community.

Data from the 2000 U.S. Census indicates that Quincy's Asian American population grew by 144 percent since 1990, making it the fastest growing racial group in the City. At that time, Asian Americans made up 15.4 percent of the total Quincy population. In 2006, Asians made up more 28 percent of the students in the Quincy school system.

In 2006, the Comcast Foundation awarded QARI a one-year $25,000 grant, boosting enrollment in the ESOL for Living and Employment program by 100. The 2006 Comcast Foundation grant allowed QARI to serve more than 240 students and significantly reduce its waiting list. Funds also supported curriculum development and training, supervision to classroom assistants and tutors, supplemental one-on-one tutoring and computer-based practice sessions.

The Comcast Foundation was founded by Comcast Corporation in June 1999 and is the company's chief source of charitable support to qualified non-profit organizations. Since its inception, The Comcast Foundation has donated more than $30 million to organizations in the communities where Comcast serves.

More information about The Foundation and its programs is available at www.comcast.com under "In the Community."

Firefighters Commended For Courageous Action At Merrymount Road Fire

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy firefighters not only saved two lives during an early morning fire on April 13 but the firefighters very likely saved a Merrymount Road neighborhood from the disastrous fast-moving flames, according to City Council President Douglas Gutro.

Both Gutro and Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli spoke during a recent City Council ceremony officially commending the 34 members of the Fire Department's Group 3 unit which includes the Ladder 2 team for their courage on April 13.

All 34 names were called out for honor and all received applause during the standing ovation.

"The actions of the Fire Department saved lives and protected neighboring properties," Gutro said, adding that residents there tell him, "They saved this neighborhood."

Both Gutro and Pettinelli described the "dangerous ladder rescue" performed by the Ladder 2 team of Lt. Ronald Shannon and firefighters, John Cadegan, Mark Paolucci and Paul Kearns.

The rescues were only possible because the City provides sufficient manpower for the ladder company crews, according to Pettinelli.

Quincy "recognizes the manpower needs" of the fire department, said Pettinelli who referred to a tragic fire in nearby Randolph on May 16. Those ladder crews manned with fewer firefighters could not save the lives of two young boys.

"Time and again, firefighters have demonstrated their heroics," said Gutro who also cited the Quincy firefighters' work in containing multiple fires in early May, including "the blazes across Broad Meadows marsh."

In the early morning hours of Friday, April 13, the Quincy firefighters Group 3 responded to a 911 call from cabdriver Charlie Hattenburg who had seen smoke and began rousing the residents.

The firefighters responded within minutes of the call and the ladder crew rescued the two victims, Liem Lam and Yuan Lam, who were fleeing the flames in the three-story building.

According to Pettinelli, one victim was hanging from a second floor gutter and the second precariously balanced on the roof when firefighters arrived.

"Within seconds after the rescue, the third floor was engulfed in flames," said

Gutro

"We want you to know how proud we are to have you as members of the Quincy Fire Department," Gutro said as he commended the unit for a "job well done."

The commendation also states, "Because of your immediate response, two family members were rescued from the roof while others were calmly evacuated without incident."

In addition to Shannon, Cadegan, Paolucci and Kearns, the following members of the department were recognized.

Kenneth Lippens, Daniel Polvere, Stephen Walsh, Robert Gilbody, John Goddard, Daniel Sullivan, Gary Patten, Deputy Chief Joseph Barron, Gerard Ceurvels, Daniel Coletti, John Carroll, Stephen Stanton, William O'Neil, Joseph Jackson, James Connolly, Patrick Bryan, Thomas Bowes, Jr.,

Andrew Smith, Jason Tierney, Michael Slade, Thomas Malvesti, Mark Whouley, Joseph Barron, Eric Wirtz, Michael Kerr, Matthew Kiesel, James Kelley and Gerald McCourt.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 31, 1870, Professor Edward Joseph De Smet of the American Asphalt Pavement Company, New York City, receives two patents for his invention of the first practical version of sheet asphalt. On July 29 of the same year, the first road pavement of sheet asphalt was laid on William Street in Newark, N.J.

• On June 2, 1886, President Grover Cleveland becomes the first sitting president to marry in the White House. His new wife, Frances Folsom, was the daughter of a former law partner and Cleveland's legal ward; Cleveland had literally known her since she was born.

• On May 29, 1914, in one of the worst ship disasters in history, the British liner Empress of Ireland collides with the Norwegian freighter Storstad in the Gulf of Canada's St. Lawrence River. The Storstad penetrated 15 feet into the Empress of Ireland's starboard side, and the vessel sank within 14 minutes, drowning 1,012 of its passengers and crew.

• On May 28, 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge, one of the world's largest single-span suspension bridges at 6,450 feet, opens to vehicular traffic. More than 80,000 miles of wire went into its construction.

• On June 3, 1940, the German air force bombs Paris, killing 254 people, most of them civilians. The bombing succeeded in provoking just the right amount of terror; France's minister of the interior could only keep government officials from fleeing Paris by threatening them with severe penalties.

• On June 1, 1968, Helen Keller dies in Westport, Conn., at the age of 87. Blind and deaf since infancy, Keller learned to sign via a hand alphabet on the palm, and later learned to read lips by placing a finger on the speaker's lips.

• On May 30, 1971, the U.S. unmanned space probe Mariner 9 is launched on a mission to gather scientific information on Mars. The first spacecraft to orbit a planet other than Earth, Mariner 9 sent back more than 7,000 pictures of the "Red Planet."

A Mayoral Preliminary Election?

Question on the political front:
Will there be a mayoral preliminary election this year?

Right now, the answer appears to be in the hands of Charles Dennehy, Jr., 58, of Willard St., West Quincy.

He was one of the first to take out nomination papers when they became available May 2.

If he files his with 50 valid voter signatures before the July 31 deadline, it will force the preliminary.

If he doesn't, there apparently won't be one as no other names are being mentioned as a possible third candidate for mayor. But, of course, that could change.

Both incumbent William Phelan, seeking his fourth term and challenger Tom Koch are quite interested in what Dennehy does.

For them a September preliminary election would mean a lot more campaigning and more money to pay for it.

PHELAN

KOCH

Who would benefit the most?

Phelan has a bigger war chest than Koch. But Koch has been doing pretty well in that department. And if he came close or took the top spot in the preliminary it would be a roaring send-off to November. If Phelan won by a wide margin, it might be all over.

A preliminary election could benefit both Phelan and Koch. It would detect any weaknesses and other problems in their campaigns. And give them time to plug the holes before November.

Dennehy took out nomination papers for mayor two years ago but did not return them. But he ran on stickers instead. Sticker candidates seldom if ever win. Phelan cruised to an easy third term.

Dennehy has until July 31 to keep Phelan and Koch wondering.

THE LAST MAYORAL preliminary was in 2003 with former Ward 6 councillor Joseph Newton and businessman Harvey Kurtzman challenging Phelan.

Newton, a last minute candidate, got the nomination but was no match for Phelan in the final election.

Perhaps the best remembered mayoral preliminary was in 1989 that brought out four strong contenders to succeed Frank McCauley who was stepping down after four terms.

The four: Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia who came within 460 votes of upsetting McCauley in 1987, Councillors Steve McGrath and Jim Sheets and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell, making his political debut.

Sheets, who had served eight terms (16 years) as Ward 4 councillor and O'Connell won the nominations. Sheets went on to win the November showdown and six terms as mayor before losing the office to Phelan in 2001 by 17 scant votes.

Koch, who resigned as Quincy Park Commissioner to run against Phelan is considered the latter's biggest threat since that upset win over Sheets.

LIANG

JIMMY LIANG is making a third bid for a city council at-large seat.

Liang, a restaurant owner, and Quincy's first Asian American city council candidate, has taken out nomination papers.

He first ran in 2001 and again in 2003, finishing fifth each time with respective votes of 7,173 and 6,654.

He apparently is hoping there's something to that old adage that "the third time never fails."

ALSO WITH NOMINATION papers: Eileen Mullen, who ran two years ago, and Stanley Underwood, both for school committee. John Rodophele has papers out, too, but didn't say for what.

THOSE JOHN ADAMS $1 coins are going pretty fast. Some 13,000 of them were scooped up from the Colonial Federal Savings Bank at the issuance ceremony at City Hall Plaza, May 22.

So notes Bob Guarnieri, president of Colonial, which was, designated the official bank for the John Adams coin exchange.

Since then another 7,000 have been picked up at the bank's Beach Street, Wollaston headquarters.

"We have about another 5,000 to 6,000 left," Guarnieri says.

If you want one or more better hurry.

REASON WHY Robert Haley is replacing Frank McCauley on the Quincy Retirement Board:

McCauley resigned to avoid any possible conflict in campaigning and fundraising for his daughter, Jennifer Logue, who is running for a city council at-large seat.

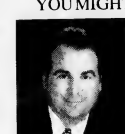

Haley, appointed by Mayor Phelan as his representative on the board, is a Quincy resident, town treasurer of Hanover, and a former officer in the Quincy Taxpayers' Association.

"The mayor made a good choice," says former mayor McCauley. "Bob will do a good job."

YOU MIGHT SAY City Council President Doug Gutro is getting off to a sweet start in his re-election bid to his Ward 5 seat.

Gutro has a "Make Your Own Ice Cream Sundae Campaign Kickoff" set for Tuesday, June 12, 6 to 8 p.m. at the Adams Inn Gazebo, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Suggested donations: $10 per person, $25 per family.

GUTRO

TIM RUSSETT's recent interview of Lee Iacocca on his new book "Where Have All The Leaders Gone," brought back memories for former Mayor Joe LaRaia.

Iacocca was president of the Ford Motor Co. when LaRaia was an executive trainee at Ford.

LaRaia attended a conference in Detroit in the early 1960s at which Iacocca was the keynote speaker.

LaRaia, who found him a dynamic speaker, notes that he was also a dynamic leader.

"Under his leadership, the sporty Ford Mustang was introduced in 1964 and drew attention all over the country," LaRaia recalls.

LaRaia was president of the City Council when he left Ford in 1965, preferring to remain close to home, rather than face the prospect of being reassigned outside the area.

LaRaia was at Ford's Natick plant when he made his decision.

JOE "TEX" FASCI is back in the saddle in Granbury, Texas, after his annual return to his Quincy roots.

Joe came back for the Fore River Shipyard Retired Employees annual dinner and reunion with family and long-time pal, Tom Tehan. The pair had a Quincy based ultrasonic testing firm.

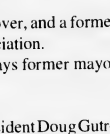

While here, son Joe, Jr., a popular DJ hosted a surprise birthday party for him. Don't say we told you, but it was his 80th.

But Joe is a young 80, very active in veterans and civic causes in Granbury with his daughter, Rev. Kathryn Fasci Veterans Services Officer for Hood County, Texas.

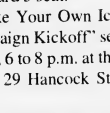

Happy birthday, kid.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of Merry Mount Park showing what was then called The Drive. Although the park hasn't changed much since this picture was taken, it is pretty much impossible to determine just where in the park this roadway was located. It was in 1888 that Charles Francis Adams, Jr., the grandson of President John Quincy Adams, donated this 80-acre preservation to the City. He stipulated it was to be used "for the enjoyment of the inhabitants and for no other purpose."

Quincy is fortunate to have this beautiful park as part of over 30 percent of the land within its corporate boundaries that is protected open space. Most of this undeveloped land, totaling more than 3,200 acres, or five square miles, remains as it was when what we now know as Quincy was first settled by white men almost 400 years ago. READERS FORUM

Our Children Are Our Future

In a recent flier from the Quincy Education Association, dropped off at houses in my neighborhood, Quincy teachers were asking for our support.

In the first paragraph, the teachers state, "Politicians have a way of turning a phrase. After a year of bargaining, Mayor Phelan used the press and his ability to mail costly letters to every resident to tell part of the story."

In the May 24 Quincy Sun news story about the teachers union charging the city with unfair labor practices, the teachers union has filed a 32-page complaint with the Mass. Labor Relations Commission charging the city and school committee are not bargaining in good faith.

A few pages later in The Quincy Sun the mayor has a long opinion piece talking about "The Truth" about teacher salaries.

Why is the mayor doing an apparent end run around the bargaining table? When I hear someone talk about the truth, I see another pol by the name of Pontius Pilate who once said, "What is truth?"

This is not the first time the mayor has used the media to make his case public. He did it on the editorial page of the Patriot Ledger back on April 16. Also, in between April 16 and May 24, his committee sent out a re-print of the April 16 commentary with a cover letter from the mayor.

Apparently, the strategy seems to be to make teachers the straws knocked down as the mayor pits teachers against taxpayers.

When it comes to services that sustain a community's quality of life, after police and fire fighting services, public education is a necessity a growing community can not do without.

Public schoolteachers are not the enemy. The enemy is scare tactics trying to put down what teachers actually do in the public classrooms of this city.

Our children are our future and our future taxpayers. Without our young people, Quincy would fold up.

We must find a way to get everyone back to the bargaining table and out of newspaper headlines. The issues are there and must be reckoned with. Hopefully, both sides can come to a fair agreement without City Hall going political on our school kids.

Court Action Possible On School Budget

By FRANK McCauley

Several school committee members believe that nothing short of a lawsuit can get their $28.4 million dollar budget into the City Council Chambers for consideration.

But no one seemed ready to fire the first shot at Mayor Arthur Tobin.

Tobin gained the edge last week in the budget battle when the state Department of Revenue ruled that under Prop 2 1/2 mayors in the state can set the school budget bottom line.

The decision came as a shock to the School Committee which was recently told by its counsel that Tobin's $26.7 million budget submitted in February was "premature and invalid."

School Committee member Patricia Toland said that she spoke with Paul Gordon, executive secretary of the Mass. Association of School Committees, who, she said, told her the Revenue Department ruling, will stand "unless challenged by a lawsuit."

APPROVAL EXPECTED FOR 'REASONABLE' CONDO LAW

"It may not be the best legislation," said City Councillor Joanne Condon, "but it's a step in the right direction. Without the Rent Grievance Board there is no protection for anyone."

The Condon proposal provides that:

- No residential property can be converted to a condominium unless a notice of intent has been submitted to the Board of Appeals with notices being given to the tenants of the building.

- Tenants will have six months notice to vacate or if the elderly or on a fixed income, they will have two years to vacate.

- The Board of Appeals will hold a public hearing on the conversion application within 120 days of filing.

- Tenants will have 120 days to decide whether to purchase the unit in which they live.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Illicit Love, Children At War June Film Fare At Library

An Oscar-nominated R-rated film of forbidden love and a heart-wrenching flick of Finnish children whose lives are disrupted by World War II are the free movies offered in June at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Judi Dench and Cate Blanchett star in Notes on a Scandal Thursday, June 7, at 7 p.m.

It's the story of an ironfisted teacher who leads a lonely life outside the classroom until she meets a new art teacher only to discover that she is having an affair with a student. Her jealousy spirals out of control.

Mother of Mine, winner of three Finnish Oscars, will be shown Thursday, June 21, at 7:30 p.m. It's recommended for age 17 and older.

The film is about a 9-year-old Finnish boy who is evacuated to Sweden to avoid the war and increasingly feels abandoned by his Finnish mother yet not fully attached to his Swedish surrogate mom. When he returns to Finland his confusion intensifies.

June Reopening Seen For Early Childhood Center

The Early Childhood Education Center at Beechwood on the Bay has been relicensed for an expanded number of 124 children and Sharon Fayette, director of Early Childhood Ed., says she anticipates reopening enrollment in June.

"We are excited with the design to the Outdoor Classroom and an indoor 'Discovery Zone,'" said Executive Director Sharron Beals. "Both new learning centers will add extraordinarily to the children's classroom experiences."

"Teachers of our 3, 4 and 5-year-olds are working with the pre-school director and an educational consultant to finalize planning and purchases for both new centers."

Beals credited the success of the Center's recent annual fundraiser for its ability to conclude expansion planning prior to September.

Enrollment is now underway for Beechwood's Summer Program, consisting of 10 special weeks of "themed" camps for 3, 4 and 5-year-olds. Printed information describing each week is available at the Center.

Beechwood's Infant-Toddler Program has expanded from its historic three-room offering to a five-tier/five classroom program. Enrollment has already begun. Private visits and tours of the Center can be scheduled by calling 617-471-5712.

"Beechwood has provided Early Childhood Education in a unique intergenerational setting for 26 years," said Beals.

"The original mission, drafted in 1981 by Dr. Cecil Paul and others with the city of Quincy continues to be a 'Life-long Learning and Care in an Intergenerational milieu' in partnership with the city of Quincy."

"Our private, non-profit status as an educational and charitable organization permits us to fundraise and write grants, thus enriching our Early Childhood Ed program and offering public services without needing city tax revenues to the senior community."

QUINCY PUBLIC SCHOOLS Assistant Supt. Dr. Carmen Mariano visits the Merrymount School "Animals & Habitats Fair." With him are Merrymount third graders Tyler Sheldone and Mike Fernald.

Merrymount Third Graders Hold 'Animals & Habitats Fair'

Third grade students at Merrymount School recently held an "Animals & Habitats Fair" in the school gymnasium.

This culminating activity was a wonderful opportunity for third grade students to showcase and share their findings with parents, relatives, teachers, and younger students in kindergarten through grade 2.

Each third grader completed a written research report, a project display board, and a shoebox diorama of the animal and its habitat.

Prior to the fair, the students completed an in-depth study of an animal and its habitat. By investigating facts about the animal and where it lives, students acted like scientists, asking questions and seeking answers.

Further, the students learned how to complete research and manage a long-term project, key skills they will need and use throughout their education.

The project was funded in part by a grant through the Quincy School - Community Partnership and the Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education.

Thomas Crane Library To Mark 125 Anniversary

The Friends of Thomas Crane Library will celebrate the 125th anniversary of the Library, Friday, June 8 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Wine tasting will be provided by Wollaston Wines and Spirits, hors d'oeuvres by several local restaurants, music by Mabel Biagini and the opening of the art exhibit "Beautiful Ruins" by Mary Smith.

Montilio's of Quincy will provide a cake for the event depicting the Richardson Building.

A glass bowl with an etching of the Richardson Building, circa 1902, on it will be on display. The bowl was designed and made in recognition of the 125th anniversary by Pairpoint Glass Co. of Sandwich.

A silent auction will be held with the opportunity to bid on Red Sox tickets, a golf foursome at Granite Links Golf Course and pieces of jewelry, among other items. There will be the opportunity to purchase chances on many donated prizes ranging from supermarket and restaurant gift certificates to dental services.

Tickets are $50 per person and include complimentary wine and beer. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Main Library, also, by calling 617-479-7440 or 617-471-8910. They may, also, be purchased at the door on the evening of the event. Credit card services will not be available.

Proceeds from this major fundraising event will be used to continue to bring a variety of programs to the citizens of Quincy. Adult programs include lectures, presentations and musical concerts. Programs for children include puppet shows, science workshops and summer reading incentives. The Friends also fund free and discounted museum passes.

The Friends of the Library are a committee of the Thomas Crane Public Library Foundation, a federally approved 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. All donations are tax deductible to the extent allowed by the law.

Koch Launches Blog On Campaign Website

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has launched a new blog on the campaign's Web site to talk about issues, answer questions and share what he called his positive vision for Quincy's future.

"We've been talking a lot about repairing that critical connection between the public and its elected leaders, and an active, lively blog is a great way to sow the seeds for that new connection," Koch said.

The blog can be found at www.kochforquincy.com.

Koch called the blog the next step in the evolution of the campaign's online presence, which he said continually expand as the campaign moves forward.

"It's a great testament to the hard work and energy of several volunteers who have worked tirelessly to give us an online presence," Koch said. "It is evolving constantly and it's being done entirely by volunteers. I think it's a great symbol of the grassroots campaign we are mounting."

QEA President:

It's Not Bargaining, It's Bullying

Well, the Mayor and the School Committee have certainly been bargaining in public recently, haven't they? First, it was about health insurance, and the Mayor publicized the specific proposal on the table.

Yes, that violates the ground rules we signed, but so be it. Bargaining in public is also against the letter and spirit of Chapter 150E of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. That law provides for bargaining in Executive Session. In other words, it provides for bargaining at the table and not in public. You may recall that Mayor Phelan swore to uphold those laws.

If you don't believe that this is bargaining in public, then try demanding that Mayor Phelan provide a similar article on (as an example) "The Truth About All Quincy Employee Salaries," or any other public sector employee group. Or, "The Truth About School Committee Compensation." He won't, because his article is not about "truth," it is about positioning in bargaining. Bargaining in the press is counterproductive. I will not engage in it. I will not talk about any specific items on the table, other than the ones the Mayor has gone about publicizing.

As anyone knows who follows Quincy politics, the items that settle contracts are rarely made public. The Mayor, elsewhere in The Quincy Sun, says he "appreciates the understanding of our employees" who settled contracts that changed health insurance. His statement makes it sound as if the City did not give anything for the concessions that the three settled unions gave him. He wants you to believe that the salary offer reported in the press got their acceptance. Don't believe that for a second. That salary offer barely covers expected costs of living increases. The City bargained with those unions, and those unions "got" something as well as "gave" something. And that is the way it should be. The bargaining should go on at the table, not in the newspaper.

Mayor Phelan claimed, in one of his public bargaining stunts on cable TV, that the teachers who testified at the School Committee claimed "mistreatment of newly hired teachers." He was not listening, obviously. Instead, two things were said repeatedly by 40 testifying teachers: First, benefits have been the difference in attracting the best educators to Quincy. Remove that advantage, and why would anyone come here and stay here? And second, they want the School Committee to bargain. Instead, the Mayor used the next meeting to present highly misleading statistics regarding salaries. Why? It had nothing to do with informing the public. It had everything to do with bargaining in public. The School Committee did not have the courage or sense to stop him. His intimidation tactics extends to them, too. Let's make it clear: even if the Mayor's disputed facts are correct (and we dispute them), should teachers apologize for them? Should we hand over our benefits for nothing?

The School Committee has chosen, so far, to REFUSE to bargain for their demanded changes. Instead they have allowed the Chair of the School Committee, Mayor Phelan, to "go public." The teachers have demanded only one thing all through this bargaining: that the City actually BARGAIN. If the City is truly interested in settling a contract, they should make offers to us. This is called "bargaining."

We have not been shy about letting them know what is important to us. And some of those things are even little or no cost! We will not talk about these proposals in public, because it's wrong to do so. They need to "get real." We have something that is obviously important to them. Do they expect us to hand it over? That's not bargaining. That's bullying, that's intimidation. And that's the current Quincy Method of bargaining.

We have great respect for the School Committee of Quincy; but the Chair's bullying tactics, and flaunting of the letter and spirit of the collective bargaining laws cannot go unchallenged. I will commit to the Citizens of Quincy that the Quincy Education Association will try every avenue, follow every possibility, to get this School Committee and its chair to bargain fairly. We have maintained our voluntary activities all year, in spite of the School Committee's neglect of their duties. A North Quincy High student recently won the state science fair, and seven North students placed highly. I asked science teachers to keep track of voluntary hours in this effort. It came out to 450 free hours. While the science fair was running, every other employee group represented in that building was earning overtime or compensation. Except the teachers. And this was during a bargaining year when we've been stonewalled for over a year.

It takes a great deal to anger teachers. Now, we're angry. There's still time left before June 8th. Citizens should tell the City to get down to bargaining, not phony posturing.

"Who are we to judge if one family is better than another?"

Sophie, Kristen, and Leo

Vera and Nigel Godley's daughter, Sophie, is married to Kristen. Sophie and Kristen have a 3-year-old son, Leo.

"Sophie, Kristen, and our grandson Leo are a beloved part of our family. There's no reason for Leo to feel that his family is less than any other family.

The thought of a statewide vote on our daughter's marriage makes us heartsick.

People should not vote on whether one family is better than another family."

State legislators are deciding whether or not to put a Constitutional amendment on the 2008 election ballot that would take the right to marry away from same-sex couples - and with it, all the important protections for them and their children.

If you believe it's wrong to vote on rights, we need your help.

Please ask your state representative and state senator to vote against this discriminatory Constitutional amendment.

Kevin Coughlin To Seek City Council Re-election

Citing the importance of transparency in government and a strong partnership between residents and elected officials, Kevin Coughlin announced his intention to run for reelection to a fourth term as City Councillor from Ward 3.

"I believe that those of us in elected office at every level are charged with shining a light and bringing understanding to the process of government," he told supporters at a kickoff reception in the Adams Inn.

"What we do as public servants and how we do it should always be transparent and easily comprehended and ultimately clearly and convincingly for the public good."

"Those of us in elected office should bring clarity out of confusion; we should create calm and reason in those circumstances where there is conflict and uncertainty; we should represent hope that is embodied in concrete actions, not sound bites and bumper-sticker slogans."

"It is, I believe, a fundamental role of city leaders to cultivate a dialogue and benefit from the exchange of ideas of many minds that is the fruit of active public participation in the process of government."

"To harness the energy that is brought about by that citizen participation for our 'one purpose,' to create and recreate a Quincy that is a better place to live for all of us."

Coughlin said the focus of

his tenure on the City Council has been a prompt response to the needs of his constituents and he cited a litany of accomplishments and initiatives, including:

- Introduction and passage of the city's wireless communications ordinance which protects the neighborhoods against unregulated siting of commercial wireless antennae.

- Introduction of the concept of rezoning to protect neighborhoods against overdevelopment.

- Initiation of the state model for Senior Citizen Safety Zones to protect senior pedestrians.

- Passage of the city's Neighborhood Property Preservation or blight ordinance.

- Introduction of a home rule petition to reduce speed limits in all densely populated neighborhoods from 30 miles per hour to 20 mph.

- Adoption of legislation to provide property tax deferral to active duty citizen soldiers serving in harms way.

Coughlin has also been in the forefront of many legislative efforts to address environmental concerns including enhanced recycling.

"For the last five-plus years I have had the honor to serve the residents of Quincy as a city councillor," he said.

"I have committed myself to hard work and persistence and to the singular task of always trying to discern that which is in the best interests of those who placed me here to be their voice."

"I not only endeavor to respond to every communication from every source and to resolve the most fundamental concerns, I try to look beyond that role of ombudsman and to be a proactive legislator."

"I have listened and looked to the most basic concerns of our neighborhoods in areas of true quality of life issues such as zoning, property conditions, traffic and parking."

"I have sought to raise the level of dialogue regarding our environment, whether it's in terms of enhanced recycling or renewable energy, or the protection and growth of our urban forest, because it is critical in our role as stewards of our children's future to act decisively now to lessen our carbon footprint."

"I believe that with a partnership of persistence and hard work we can resolve any challenge that we face as a community and that our best days lie ahead."

Quincy Center Career Fair At Presidents Place Today

Mayor William Phelan and several community partners will host the first annual Quincy Career Fair Thursday, May 31, from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Atrium of Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Over 30 participating companies and agencies will be on-hand to showcase a variety of career opportunities, both full and part-time.

"I am excited about the opportunity to connect our citizens with a variety of businesses, organizations, state agencies and city departments who need their workforce skills in Quincy's growing economy," said Phelan.

In addition to the employment opportunities, attendees will learn how to apply for a state and/or city position, take the Civil Service Exam, or brush up on their interviewing and resume writing skills. Bi-lingual support will be provided in Mandarin, Cantonese, Vietnamese and Portuguese to help attendees match their skills with the best employment opportunities available. Expert assistance will be available for job seekers with disabilities, including interpreter services for deaf and hard of hearing people, by the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission.

The Quincy Career Fair is sponsored in partnership by Mayor Phelan and the City of Quincy, Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the Quincy Career Center, the Quincy Housing Authority, the Quincy Human Rights Commission, the Quincy Public Schools and the Quincy Area Office of the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission who is celebrating their 50th anniversary.

For more information or to reserve a table space at the fair contact Quincy 2000 Collaborative at (617) 847-1454 or visit their website at www.quincy2000.org.

Presidents Place has parking and is located across from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Phelan Spokesperson Criticizes Koch For 'Negative Attack'

A campaign spokesperson for Mayor William Phelan strongly criticized mayor challenger Tom Koch Tuesday for what she called his "negative campaign attack."

Kathy Bowes said Koch "sharply criticizes Phelan for his successful fight to stop construction of a new Quincy High School on a toxic waste dump proposed by former Mayor (James) Sheets for whom Koch served as chief of staff and campaign manager."

She also said: "It also criticizes the Mayor's recent contract settlement with the Police Superior Officer's Union as too generous, although Koch consistently given the appearance of supporting the city unions in this election year, and even participated in their march on City Hall."

"Tom Koch's new campaign attack brochure should be required reading for all Quincy residents. It shows why he should never be Mayor."

"Koch's latest attack show's he still believes he and Mayor Sheets were right when they fought for years to build the new high school on a toxic waste site where the Fore River Shipyard dumped deadly carcinogens for decades.

"The site, purchased from a Sheets contributor for four times what it had been bought for less than a month before, was full of chemicals ranging from PCBs, lead, etc. Koch and the former Mayor wasted years and millions of dollars on a plan that would have subjected generations of students and teachers to daily exposure to deadly risk."

"The years they stubbornly fought for this dangerous plan-and the years Mayor Phelan had to spend correcting their mistake-are the reason for the cost increase for the school."

"Today, thanks to Bill Phelan and the hundreds of citizens who joined him in standing up for our kids, we are about to build a beautiful state-of-the-art high school, instead of an ugly health hazard. And Tom Koch still doesn't get it."

Bowes also said that while Koch's new attack brochure criticizes Phelan for being too generous with the union, "he has consistently given the appearance of supporting union demands for even more generous contracts."

"Koch refuses to take a clear stand, and tell voters or city employees where he stands," Bowes said. "Either he supports the city employees' demands for no change in their 10% share of their health insurance costs-which will mean a $500 to $1000 increase in property taxes for the average homeowner over the next four years-or he stands with Mayor Phelan in asking for a modest increase in the employees share."

"No one knows where Tom Koch stands," Bowes said.

"We need a Mayor with the guts to tell people where he stands. Since his election, Mayor Phelan has stood with teachers and has made them the best paid teachers with the best benefits of any system on the South Shore. But he also stands for fairness, and in fairness to taxpayers, he is asking for concessions."

Healy Family Fundraiser To Be Held June 15

The life of Tim Healy, a North Quincy native, will be honored at a fundraiser to benefit his four young children on June 15 at the 181-W Hall in Dorchester.

Healy, born in North Quincy and a Houghs Neck resident for many years, succumbed to brain cancer in April after a courageous 15-month battle with the disease.

Shortly after his death, friends and family members created the Healy Family Fund to help his four children, Meghan, 13, Erin, 11, and twins Brendan and Ryan, 4.

"Tim was a great husband, a great father, and a great friend," said his cousin Kathie Dalton-Keane. "He spent a lifetime helping others and was a true symbol of all the great things about our community. We couldn't think of a better tribute than to come together and help his children when they need it most."

The fundraiser, which begins a 7 p.m., will feature a DJ, a live and silent auction and a raffle that includes weekend getaways and sports memorabilia.

To donate an item, become a sponsor or to buy tickets to the event, contact Kathy Healy at (617) 872-9841.

The son of Irish immigrants, Healy was an active member of both Sacred Heart and Holy Trinity parishes in Quincy. He was a graduate of Boston College High School and Suffolk University. Healy was the director of Information Technology for the Office of Consumer Affairs.

'Reckless' Iraq War Comments Draw Criticism

the world.

Robert Noble, past commander of the American Ex-Prisoners of War of Massachusetts, read the poem 'In Flanders Field' composed by World War I Army Sgt. John McCrae. The poem, which describes the horrors of war, is a tribute to the soldiers who died in the war. Noble's comments drew criticism for his remarks about the Iraq War while commenting on the tragic deaths he witnessed in Belgium town of Ypres during an intense battle between the British and the Germans.

Stephen Dunlea, senior vice commander of the QVC, read Abraham Lincoln's stirring Gettysburg Address, and an adjutant called the roll of comrades who have died in the past year. As each name was called, a veterans intoned "Absent."

The deceased were members of Bryan Post 613 VFW, Wollaston Legion Post 295, Houghs Neck Legion Post 380, Nickerson Legion Post 382, Cavanaugh DAV Chapter 79, Jewish War Veterans Post 193, Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League and the 2nd Division Marine Association.

A wreath of yellow flowers in the shape of a star was placed at the monument by the Gold Star Mothers, women who lost sons or daughters in the service of their country.

The 2nd Marine Division fired a volley. Veterans and troops saluted as Taps was played by Donald Murphy and the flag was raised to full staff as the National Anthem rang out and the audience rose to its feet.

Guests at the podium included State Rep. Stephen

Tobin, former Mayors Joseph LaRana, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets, At-Large Councillors John Keenan, Joseph Finn and Michael McFarland, Ward Councillors Daniel Raymond, Kevin Coughlin, Jay Davis and Brian McNamee, School Committee Members Anne Mahoney, David McCarthy and Linda Stice.

Many of the event participants stayed around after the ceremony to say a prayer, plant a flower and otherwise tend to the grave of a loved one.

Commander Ahern said she was overwhelmed by the support of the citizenry for the Memorial Day parade and services.

"It was wonderful today coming down the street to see all the children with their parents; how happy they were to see the veterans coming down the street," she said.

"The city of Quincy has always had a proud tradition of honoring the veterans and the mayor has been very good to the veterans and I think that sets the tone for the citizens."

Ahern noted that sometimes towns and cities are forced to cancel their ceremonies for lack of interest and support, but that last year's Veterans' Day Parade was one of the largest she had seen in Quincy in quite a while.

"If some of the bands can't get sponsors to help with the buses, etc., then the kids can't participate in the parades. So we are grateful for the support we received today."

"This is always a moving ceremony," said Ward 2 Councillor Raymond.

"It's important that Quincy continue to remember the sacrifices of our fallen heroes, not only on Memorial Day but each and every day of the year."

"It's important for people to turn out, and this year, in spite of the weather, there was a tremendous outpouring from the community."

"It makes it all worthwhile."

MORRISSETTE LEGION POST color guard passes through Quincy Square en route to the Memorial Day observance.

COLOR GUARD from the Bryan VFW Post leads the parade down Hancock Street.

SEA CADETS, boys and girls ages 13 to 17 from the Naval Reserve Center, march in Quincy's annual Memorial Day Parade.

Spotting Predatory Mortgage Lenders

If you're trying to buy your first home, are elderly, have low income or bad credit, or if you need cash and want to refinance an existing mortgage, you're a prime candidate for predatory lending.

Here are some of the signs that you could become a victim of a predatory lending scam:

- You're approached by a telemarketer or salesman who says that "bad credit is no problem" and guarantees a low-interest loan, but only if you apply immediately.

- You're pressured to lie about your income or anything else to get the loan.

- There are high pre-payment penalties if you pay off the loan early. Predatory loans limit how quickly you can refinance and can charge you as much as six months' interest as a penalty.

- You are being charged high fees with the loan. A fee of 1 percent of the loan is typical. Predatory is when the fees reach or exceed 5 percent of the loan.

- The price of the property is much more than for similar homes in your area.

- The interest rate seems much too high. You might be told that it's because you have bad credit and only qualify for a "sub-prime" loan, and you're pressured to accept that because "No one else will give you a loan." Chances are that the extra interest is really a kickback to the loan broker.

- You go to closing and the terms on the documents are not what you expected. Somehow, the loan (usually the interest rate) has changed overnight.

- The biggie: The loan calls for mandatory arbitration — which essentially strips you of your legal rights in a dispute. By agreeing to this, you're essentially waiving your rights to make a claim in a court of law. Binding mandatory arbitration means you agree to go to an arbitrator outside the court system and that you agree to whatever is decided. You'll be at a disadvantage because these meetings are generally secret, and you'll pay high fees to cover the arbitration costs.

If you're a victim of predatory loan fraud, or if you need assistance in determining if a "deal" is a safe one, call the Department of Housing and Urban Development at 800-569-4287 and ask for a housing counselor in your area. Turn in scammers to your state's Attorney General office and the Federal Trade Commission.

Hints For Homeowners

Control Moisture, Avoid Mold

(NAPS) — A common misperception among homeowners and builders is that water intrusion is inevitable and therefore mold-resistant products are the answer. While mold-resistant products can play an important role, dry buildings and homes are the result of careful design, construction and maintenance.

Homeowners and builders looking for simple, understandable advice on mold control can turn to the Responsible Solutions to Mold Coalition's (RSMC) top 10 sources of information. The Coalition is a consortium of building industry associations, academic and governmental bodies and companies, including USG Corporation and National Gypsum Company.

In evaluating the best sources of information on moisture/mold control, RSMC identified some of the most common errors that lead to water intrusion and mold growth:

- Water or waste pipes installed in exterior walls: As temperatures vary, condensation can form on pipes that are normally surrounded by insulation, making drainage impossible.

- Failure to place water-handling appliances such as dishwashers and washing machines in large pans that drain away from the house. These pans are commonly available at home improvement centers.

- Failure to replace washing machine hoses. This is the leading insurance claim for water drainage.

- Failure to replace water heaters every 10 to 12 years. Most homeowners wait until their water heater fails (and usually leaks). Deferred replacement is more costly in the long run.

- Lack of flashing around doors, windows, roofs and chimneys that safely channel water away from the house and allow walls to dry out.

- Wet building materials: Building materials are often improperly stored at the job site. They should not be delivered until it's time to install them, and while they're being stored; they should be off the ground and covered tightly with a tarp.

- Rushed building schedules that do not allow enough time for joint compound, tile grout, paint and sprayed foam insulation to dry adequately.

- Roofs that are designed in a manner that does not provide a clear pathway for water to move off of the roof and into gutters and downspouts.

- Blocked gutters and downspouts that are improperly installed in a manner that directs water toward the house.

- Improper grading around the house that directs water into the basement.

More information on mold prevention and a newly updated brochure are available at www.responsiblesolutions.org.

How to Clean Sticky Furniture

Q. I was reading your reply to Anna V., whose household furniture was developing a sticky feel. The sticky furniture could be due to oil softening the finish. Possible sources are from airborne cooking oil, body oil from hands and oil in furniture polish.

Airborne cooking oil can coat many different surfaces, such as the sticky light chain that Anna described. Nonporous surfaces can be cleaned with household cleaners.

Leaving excess furniture polish on wood surfaces can cause softening or stickiness; always wipe furniture completely dry after using polish to avoid this situation. Oil-softened furniture can be cleaned using 0000 steel wool and mineral spirits thinner. (Note: do this in a very well-ventilated area; ideally, take the furniture outside.) Body oil from hands can also cause this problem; furniture should be cleaned in the same way as above. Once the furniture is cleaned, it will need a new topcoat of varnish as most of it will be removed in the cleaning process.

I have a boat that contains a lot of teak wood trim. The trim is finished with varnish. This boat is always in a humid environment, and when we spend nights out on the water, it gets a heavy coat of dew. I clean it with soap and water, and after eight years, the trim has never gotten sticky or gotten water spots. I don't coat it with oil-based furniture polish. Modern factory-built furniture has a lacquer finish, and if properly maintained will not get water spots or sticky. — Frank C., via e-mail

A. Wow! That's a wealth of information for readers, and I hope they'll consider your maintenance advice. Again, keep in mind that mineral spirits should be used in a well-ventilated area. Wipe away excess with a clean cloth and let the surface dry completely. Additionally, if an affected piece of furniture is an antique, consider hiring a furniture restoration specialist to prevent unintentional damage.

Tips On Choosing A Lawn Mower

(NAPS) — The right lawn mower can save you work, trouble and some serious green in gas and repair costs. Plus, choosing a mower doesn't have to be a daunting task. Try these tips from the experts:

- Know your yard — The key to buying a new lawn mower is knowing the type of machine your yard needs. How big is your yard? Is it flat and smooth, or sloping? Do you need to mow around trees, sweep off your patio or plow your driveway?

If you're working with less than half an acre, a walk-behind mower will probably do the trick. If you have inclines, you might want to check out some self-propelled mowers.

A ride-on mower may be a better choice for those with larger acreage but be sure to consider the mower's maneuverability if you have to turn tightly around obstacles. Today's riding mowers offer different options for traction and turn radius with the added versatility of attachments.

- All grass isn't alike — Grass comes in many different shapes and sizes. Lawns with thicker, tougher grass will require a mower with higher horsepower and bigger, taller wheels. If you want your mower to last, you'll need to make sure you have enough power to handle the grass in your yard.

- How handy are you? — If you know you'll frequently be putting your mower to good use, make sure you purchase a machine that you can maintain and properly tune. Choose a brand with a reputable maintenance record. A well-kept, clean lawn mower can last for many years.

- Know your budget — Thanks to advancements in technology, even basic models offer nice amenities like cruise control and hydrostatic steering.

- How long will you be living in your home? — Lawn mowers can be difficult to move from home to home, so look at what you can realistically afford for the time needed. Talk with local dealers or retailers. They know their equipment and can help you make the right decisions for the right amount.

Poolside This Summer:

Six Simple Steps To Maintain Your Pool

(NAPS) – Pool owners often think pool care can be a complicated job. Luckily, experts offer these six simple steps for opening your pool this season.

1. Drain the water off the cover and away from the swimming pool. Clean cover and store in a clean, dry place away from sunlight.

2. Ensure the pump, filter and skimmer basket are in good working order. Clean the filter with a chemical cleaner specifically designed for swimming pool filters.

• For DE filters, make sure the filter grids are in good shape.

• For cartridge filters, make sure there are no holes in the filter media, especially in or on the pleats and at the top and bottom.

• For sand filters, replace your filter sand every three to five years. Make sure only to use the proper grade of material for swimming pool sand filters.

3. Fill the pool to the proper level. Circulate water for 24 to 48 hours.

4. Take a pint of water to your local BioGuard pool store for a computerized analysis and a personalized prescription for pool care.

5. Follow the maintenance program prescribed by your BioGuard authorized pool professional for the most brilliant, algae-free water possible.

6. Test and treat your water regularly.

And don't forget to open your pools now. Pool openings should begin when overnight temperatures remain above freezing and daytime temperatures remain above 60 degrees.

BioGuard dealers also offer pool care products and programs that make opening the pool in the spring and maintaining the pool throughout the season a snap. Consult your pool professional for expert advice all year round. For more information on the effective use of the pool and spa products and to locate the BioGuard dealer nearest you, visit www.bioguard.com or check your local yellow pages.

Stylish Ways To Boost A Home's Value

(NAPS) – In today's real estate market, sellers are doing everything possible to enhance their homes' value and appeal. As a result, "staging" – setting the scene to help make their property an ideal showcase – is now a cottage industry.

Consider the following tips from Hunter Douglas:

• Less Really Is More – Streamlining the décor is sure to give your home an expansive appearance. Something as basic as adding window treatments can have an immediate impact and a lasting effect on value, especially since window dressings usually remain in the home as part of the sale. The key is to find practical window fashions with a long shelf life that will add form as well as function. For instance, you can transform the light in a room and block harmful UV rays with products such as Silhouette window shadings from Hunter Douglas.

• Kitchens and Baths – "Today, people like an open and airy kitchen with a lot of work space," says Robert Irwin, author of "Home Buyer's Checklist." Additionally, a master bedroom, especially with a spa or whirlpool tub, and a separate shower with steam and/or multiple jets, is considered a big asset.

• Master Suites – A sumptuous bedroom is on many homeowners' wish lists. Make sure it offers ample storage space and a comfortable place to lounge.

• Natural Materials – Americans increasingly want a connection between the home and outdoors and the serenity that nature brings. Decorate with materials that offer natural textures to create a spa-like tranquility in your home.

• Dens and Libraries – For a handsomely coordinated look, consider custom-crafted wood shutters, such as Heritage hardwood shutters, as doors and closets and cabinets, as well as on the window for architectural appeal.

• Improve Curb Appeal – According to the National Association of Real Estate Appraisers, a good first impression of a home can add as much as 10 percent to its value. Window fashions like Vignette Modern Roman Shades with no rear lift cords and a neutral white backing ensure an attractive and uniform appearance from the outside.

• Enlarge Your Windows – Upgrading to bigger windows is always a winning proposition.

Silhouette shadings in the four-inch vane size are popular for large windows.

• Add Insulation – Window coverings such as the Duette Architella Collection feature a unique, patented construction (honeycomb nestled within a honeycomb) that traps significantly more air than other window fashions and keeps homes comfortable.

Safety/Health Fair June 2 At Star Market

The Quincy Police Department and Star Market are teaming up to present a Safety and Health Fair on Saturday, June 2, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair will be held in the Star Market parking lot on Granite Street. Rain date is Sunday, June 3.

Several community agencies will join forces to keep the public informed of many issues regarding public health and safety on the local, state and national level.

Representatives from the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, the Quincy Health Department, Quincy Medical Center, state and MBTA Police Departments, US Customs Agency, Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, Fallon Ambulance, Homeland Defense Team, AAA Auto Club and U.S. Marines will participate.

The Quincy Police K-9 Unit will provide a demonstration and the Marine Unit will be exhibiting some of their equipment.

The fair will also feature a visit by Sparkles the Clown and magic by Chris Bolter.

Star Market will also announce on that day the soon-to-open community room at this location. The meeting room will be available for civic and philanthropic meetings as available and when requested in writing at the store.

There will also be a child seat installation and inspection program but this is by appointment only. For this program or for additional information, call Lt. Dan Minton at 617 745 5719.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, May 21, at approximately 4 p.m., Jeff Bertman of Rogers Jewelry called the Quincy Police Department to report that a man just left the store with one of their expensive diamonds. He said that his father, Mark Bertman and a customer, Jim Edwards, were chasing after the suspect, heading south on Hancock St. As the Dispatcher provided a description to all units.

Edwards, who had chased the suspect all the way to Cottage Avenue returned to the store. He told Jeff Bertman to notify the police that the suspect jumped into a car and drove southbound on Hancock St. Edwards was able to give the direction of flight, the license plate number, a description of the getaway car and the suspect to the police, which was again given to all units.

Communications informed all units that the suspect vehicle was registered in Dorchester and had both revoked registration and insurance. As Officer Tim Simmons was enroute to Roger's Jewelry to gather more information and file a report, he heard over the police radio that Officers Dan Francis and E.J. Hartnett, who were working a road detail at the intersection of Quarry and Robertson Sts., had a suspect stopped.

Officer Simmons interviewed the Bertmans and then telephoned officers at the scene of the stop, who confirmed matching descriptions. Officer Mike Duran placed the suspect in his cruiser while Officer Simmons transported Mark Bertman to identify the suspect. Once at the scene, Officer Simmons opened the door to the cruiser to show Mark Bertman the suspect.

The suspect immediately blurted out, "I'm sorry." Mark Bertman identified the suspect as the man who asked to look at a 1 1/2 carat loose diamond under the microscope and then asked to examine the diamond's certificate. Mark Bertman said that he reached over to get the certificate and looked over his shoulder to see the suspect walking quickly out the store. The diamond was no longer on the microscope's glass.

Officer Francis then brought Mr. Bertman over to the suspect's car and pointed to the inside door handle, displaying one loose diamond! Mr. Bertman said that it was the same diamond. Officer Simmons transported Mr. Bertman back to the store to establish that the diamond was the same one from the store. Mr. Bertman put the loose diamond under the gem-scope, which showed numerical engravings and the Canadian flag on it. He showed this to Officer Simmons and then provided corresponding paperwork to show that it was clearly the same diamond recovered in the suspect's car. Photos were taken of the diamond and associated paperwork for court purposes. The suspect, a 47-year-old Weymouth resident, was transported to the station for booking, where he gave a false name and date of birth.

After determining his real identity, the suspect was charged with "Larceny over $250.00, Operating an Unregistered Motor Vehicle, Operating After License Revocation and False Information to a Police Officer. He also had 15 outstanding warrants for similar offenses! In this case, if it weren't for the diligence of Mr. Bertman and his customer,

Mr. Edwards, who was able to note the vehicle and license plate, it would have been very difficult to find the suspect. To these gentlemen and all Officers involved, Nice Work!

Child Car Seat Installation Inspection Program June 2

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit will be conducting a child car seat program on Saturday, June 2nd to install or inspect prior installations.

The officers will also check to ensure that the seat is not out of date or on a recall list. This program is by appointment only. Call Lieutenant Dan Minton for further information at 617 745 5719.

SPORTS

Quincy Streaks Into Playoffs

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents' baseball team will live to play another (post-season) game.

Quincy, which needed to win its final three regular season games in order to qualify for the Division II South Sectional tournament, did just that last week.

After a tough 8-6 loss to North Quincy High School in nine innings last Monday (May 21), Quincy defeated Falmouth (10-0), Somerville (5-1) and King Philip (6-3) to finish up their regular season with a 10-10 record.

"The loss to North was tough to take, but it is always difficult to beat the same team three times in one season," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "After that loss, the guys knew that they had to bear down and take care of business in the final three games to get back to the post-season for the fourth time in the last five years. They did just that."

In the Falmouth game, senior Steve Connolly was the winning pitcher. He ended the year with a perfect 3-0 record on the mound.

"Steve was outstanding for us against Falmouth," said Draicchio. "We had to travel down the Cape for this game and we came up big as a team. Connolly really shined all year for the team and this game was no different."

Connolly's pitching magic rubbed off on junior Mike LeBel in the Presidents next game against Somerville. LeBel went the distance and struck out fourteen batters in route to the victory.

"Coming back against Somerville the team really played great," said Draicchio. "LeBel was dynamite on the mound and the rest of the team played outstanding defense behind him. All year long our defense has been solid. This year's squad may be my best defensive team in years at Quincy. This win was a complete team effort."

In their final and deciding regular season game against King Philip, the Presidents rode the arm of junior Ricky Salvucci to a 6-3 win.

Salvucci gave up three hits and three runs over six innings, striking out five, to help put Quincy in the post-season. LeBel came on in relief in the seventh inning, and after allowing an infield single and a walk, struck out the next three batters to earn the save.

Connolly went 2-for-4 with two RBI, and senior Anthony Gilbody went 2-for-2 with two walks, a run scored and an RBI. Fellow seniors Mike Leone (1-for-4, RBI) and Dan Meyers (solid defense at third base) also played huge parts in the victory.

"Once again the team bore down and got the job done," Draicchio said. "We've had an up and down season. We lost four one-run games and a little luck here and there and we would not have had to win out to qualify, but we did and the kids really stuck together and got it done."

The Presidents, who will have been notified as to where and whom they will be playing in the post-season by the time the Sun goes to press, will most likely be playing in a preliminary round game at the end of the week.

"Seedings come out late Tuesday or early Wednesday," Draicchio added. "We will probably be playing in the preliminaries, but with our hitting, pitching and team defense, we should be ready for anyone."

The Presidents also had four players participating in the Atlantic Coast League All-Star game which was played at Adams Field on Tuesday night. Seniors Steve Connolly (ACL batting title winner with his .507 avg.), Mike Leone (.353 avg., 11 RBI), John Alexander (.313 avg., 3 HR, 18 RBI) and junior Mike LeBel (.420 avg., league leading 27 RBI) all represented Quincy in the game.

Senior Matt Boyle (.300 avg., 17 RBI) and junior Ricky Salvucci (.387 avg., 11 RBI) were both deserving of an all-star nod for their play this spring.

"These six guys really paced the team all year long," Draicchio said. "They were my top six hitters and if they can continue their stellar play, we could do damage in the South Sectionals."

Other members of the post-season roster include seniors Wendall Cosgrove, Steve Kussman, Dan Meyers, Anthony Gilbody, Dan O'Connell, juniors Joe Regginni, Matt Pye and Teddy Walsh, Dave Griffin, Jeff Mitchell, Eric Englehart, John Parry, Sean Gray, Robert Ranalli and Kevin Keith were all added to the post-season roster.

"I would just like to thank coaches Kevin Carey (jayeve), Pat Lane, Josh Ethier (freshman), Dave McMillian (varsity pitching coach) and Tom Malvesti (ass. Varsity coach) for all their hard work for the program," said Draicchio.

North Quincy Seeks First Round Home Game

The North Quincy girls softball team had an up and down ending to their 2007 regular season.

On a bright note, the Red Raiders finished their regular season with an impressive 15-5 overall record, and a 10-3 record in the Atlantic Coast League. With their stellar record, the team is guaranteed a post-season birth for the first time this century, but they did lose out on a chance to capture at least a share of the Atlantic Coast League championship for the first time in the program's history with a tough 6-3 loss to Dennis-Yarmouth High School on May 18.

After losing to D-Y, the Red Raiders responded with a season-ending 8-6 victory over ACL foe Nauset High School last Friday night.

Sophomore second baseman Brittany Folkins went 2-for-3 with two runs scored and two RBI, and sophomore Catherine O'Connell added three hits and an RBI for the Red Raiders.

North Quincy will find out when and where they will be playing come tournament time when the seedings are released today (Wed.). With their record and second-place finish in the ACL, North Quincy should be awarded an opening round home game.

Paine (25 kills), juniors Brendan Paine, Andy Boucicaut and Mike Mottola and sophomore Ken Tan.

Quincy may have fallen short of their goal to go far in the post-season, but the team will return the majority of this year's league championship team next year. The Presidents will lose seniors Ted Agolli and Shin Nagpal.

"We've played up and down all season long," Smith added. "Andrew Paine had 25 kills, and I'd match him up with any player in the state, but this is our first tourney game since 2003, and Norwood has more tourney experience. We'll have to schedule more of these types of games next year."

Ceremony At Beechwood On The Bay Highlights 25th Annual Games

Over 300 Medals Awarded At Quincy Senior Olympics

The 25th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics concluded on May 15 with an awards ceremony at Beechwood On The Bay. More than 300 medals were handed out at the conclusion of the Senior Olympic Games.

"All Olympians are winners, and those who won in the competitions look forward to the recognition," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood's Executive Director and member of the Senior Olympics Planning Committee. "Some competitors are lifelong athletes, others just participate just to stay fit, and some are first-time athletes."

"We have come of age," Beals added. "Twenty-five years ago the 1st Senior Games were held on a Saturday with three events. This year the 10-day event offered 21 competitions at eight sites throughout the city."

Mayor William Phelan, who each year is personally involved in the planning and promotion of the Games, added, "Our Senior Olympic Games are a wonderful example of citywide partnerships. We have a wide range of community support for the Olympic Games each year."

Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center sponsored the 25th Annual Olympic Games. The Quincy Rotary and the River Bay Club also provided financial and service support.

The Games were hosted by O'Lindy's Lanes, Torre Dei Passeri Club, the Quincy Park Department, the Lincoln Hancock Pool and Beechwood On The Bay. Service providers included Fallon Ambulance, the Quincy Police Department, Quincy/North Quincy High Schools and the ROTC Honor Guard.

"We were happy to see an increase in Olympic competitors and spectators this year," said Maryann Mahoney. "At the Beechwood event over 150 preschoolers were cheerleaders for the 'Grampas & Grammas' competitions and many seniors had family members cheer them on."

All seniors are invited to come to Beechwood each Friday (through the summer) for "Friday Fun, Fitness & Fellowship" activities.

To Stretch or Not to Stretch

Q. I have stretched before and after my workouts for years. Recently a friend said that she read an article stating that stretching was not beneficial and could even cause injuries. I have never been injured by stretching, but should I consider stopping or limiting my stretching for risk of injury?

A. To stretch or not to stretch, that is the question! This debate has been floating through the fitness industry for several years. The possibility of stretching causing injuries and not enhancing performance has placed a very important aspect of training in question.

Flexibility training, as with any type of training, should have a reason for why it is included in your routine. Many exercisers have completed a quick five second touch-your-toes stretch before exercise because they believe it is what they are supposed to do. Knowing WHY you are stretching is just as important as the type of stretching you are completing.

The reasons for completing a flexibility program should include increasing range of motion of joints, improving muscle imbalances and lengthening shortened muscles, all of which can affect overall body function. Posture, daily activities, fitness level and lifestyle all contribute to the muscle tightness and shortness, joint range of motion and muscle imbalances. A proper flexibility program can often encourage improvements in these areas.

Current injuries and hypermobile joints should be handled with care, and completing a flexibility routine during those instances is not recommended. Allow for current injuries to be rehabilitated fully before stretching that area. With joints that are extremely mobile, extending them past a normal range of motion to achieve a stretch can place the joint in a position for injury.

If you are exercising for general fitness, use the checklist below to perform a flexibility routine.

- Your body is better able to respond to flexibility training when warm. Ten minutes of cardiovascular exercise before stretching can help prepare your body.

- Focus on the areas that appear tight. Complete several stretches for each muscle group. If you do not feel tightness within that muscle, proceed to the next muscle group.

- Remember that your flexibility routine will be a long-term project. Although you may feel better after stretching one time, it will take a continuance of completing your routine for your body to respond.

- Be cautious not to overstretch joints or muscles. Although certain stretches may seem uncomfortable, try not to be too aggressive, the objective is to improve tightness, not induce pain.

- Flexibility training should be partnered with cardiovascular and strength training to provide a complete workout routine.

- Seek assistance if you are not confident with stretching techniques. Improper techniques CAN lead to injury to your joints and muscles.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Men's Health

Battling The Bulge Not Just A Female Issue

(NAPS) — Current research shows that about 70 percent of American men are overweight, and about 30 percent of men are obese. Yet, a dramatically low number of men-only about 28 percent—are engaged in weight loss.

While the fundamental principles of weight loss are the same for both men and women—eat less, move more—men gain weight, lose weight, and approach weight loss differently than women. Fortunately, one of the leading weight-loss programs has developed a plan that's geared toward men, how they eat and how they live.

Weight Watchers has more than 40 years of experience helping both men and women lose weight and has now applied that knowledge in updating its Internet offerings for men. Weight Watchers Online, which provides the interactive resources to follow the plan step-by-step online, and Weight Watchers eTools, the Internet weight-loss companion to meetings, are now customized for men. Both products are designed to help men overcome the daily challenges of losing weight that are unique to them.

In addition to food lists, weight trackers and more, some of the online features include:

- Meal ideas for foods that men actually want to eat—Beer, pizza and red meat cheat sheets so guys can see how to eat the foods they love while staying on plan;

- Fitness Section — Made-for-men workouts that target key muscle groups, exercise advice for all fitness levels and more than 60 exercise demo videos;

- Content Features for Men — Cooking and food ideas, gear and gadget reviews, tips from real guys who have been successful and more.

Don't Let Pests Bug You Out Of Your Backyard

(NAPS) — Spring and summer bring a renewal of spirit and new-found freedom from the indoors. But as you venture outside to barbecue with friends, lounge lazily poolside or work in your garden, watch out for insects that can spoil your outdoor fun.

Fire ants, the reddish-brown species named for their fiery sting, can ruin almost any outdoor activity. Fiercely protective of their colonies, these tiny pests emit alarm pheromones that signal nest mates to attack and defend their colonies by delivering repeated painful stings to an intruder, causing blisters and pustules.

In the air, bees and wasps may be the most commonly feared foes encountered by outdoor enthusiasts. Their painful stings can cause symptoms ranging from headache, fever and fatigue to vomiting, convulsions and a rapid pulse. These airborne insects can even be deadly to those who are allergic to their venom.

The ruling predatory pests of backyards across America, though, are mosquitoes. There are over 200 species of mosquitoes identified in North America, some of which have the ability to transmit diseases such as malaria, encephalitis and West Nile virus. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), nearly 24,000 cases of West Nile have been reported in the United States, including more than 950 deaths, since the virus was first identified in New York in 1999. Serious symptoms of West Nile virus can include high fever, headache, neck stiffness, convulsions, vision loss, paralysis and even death.

"Not only are mosquitoes dangerous, but they're also annoying, ranking among the most frequently encountered pests in and around American homes," says Frank Meek, entomologist and Technical Director for Orkin, Inc.

Here are some tips for protecting yourself and your family from mosquitoes:

- When outdoors, apply an EPAA-approved insect repellent on clothing and exposed skin.

- Eliminate mosquito-breeding sites by regularly emptying standing water from around the home in places such as flowerpots, buckets and birdbaths.

- Avoid making puddles of water around your garden when watering plants.

- Clean out rain gutters routinely. Gutters are ideal breeding sites for mosquitoes.

- Wear long-sleeved shirts and pants while working in your garden to avoid mosquito bites.

When enjoying the weather outside, remember to be aware of your environment and protect yourself against these pervasive pests.

For more information on mosquitoes and Orkin's mosquito service, visit www.orkin.com or call (800) 800-ORKIN. To learn more about mosquito-related diseases, visit www.cdc.gov.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

POSSIBLE HELP FOR MIGRAINES

Typical migraine sufferers waken in the morning with varying degrees of headache pain. Those who experience such headaches contract their temporary muscles during sleep an average of 14 times more intensely than those who do not experience headaches. This problem may be helped by wearing a small, removable, clear resin matrix oral insert that is fitted to the patient's front teeth and worn while sleeping. With the device in place, the intense activity of the temporal muscle (which closes and clenches the jaw) is suppressed to less than one-third by preventing any contacting of the back teeth. By reducing this neuromuscular activity, migraine headache pain as well as the associated tension-type headaches may be reduced.

D you wake up with headaches? Could a matrix oral insert help you? We try to be as attentive and caring as possible to not only your dental needs, but anything that will make your visit more comfortable. We treat each patient, both adults and children, with personal attention in a relaxed atmosphere. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress preventive health care for the entire family, utilizing state of the art dental procedures. The best way to reduce your chances of getting dental disease is to develop good oral hygiene habits. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617-479-6620 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In this country, an estimated 23 million persons over age 12 suffer severe migraine headaches.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might have to turn your Arian charm up a few degrees if you hope to persuade that persistent pessimist to see the possibilities in your project. Whatever you do, don't give up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A "tip" about a co-worker's "betrayal" might well raise the Bovine's rage levels. But before charging into a confrontation, let an unbiased colleague do some fact checking.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although a relationship still seems to be moving too slowly to suit your expectations, it's best not to push it. Let it develop at its own pace. You'll soon get news about a workplace change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A continually changing personal situation makes you feel as if you're riding an emotional roller coaster. But hold on tight; stability starts to set in early next week.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Believe it or not, someone might dare to say "No!" to the Regal One's suggestion. But instead of being miffed, use this rebuff to recheck the proposition and, perhaps, make some changes.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might find it difficult to make a decision about a family matter. But delay can only lead to more problems. Seek out trusted counsel and then make that important decision.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Concentrate your focus on what needs to be done, and avoid frittering away your energies on less-important pursuits. There'll be time later for fun and games.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although the conflicts seem to be letting up, you still need to be wary of being drawn into workplace intrigues. Plan a special weekend event for family and/or friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your quick wit helps you work through an already difficult situation without creating more problems. Creative aspects begin to dominate by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be patient. You'll soon receive news about a project that means so much to you. Meanwhile, you might want to reconsider a suggestion you previously turned down.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There are still some aspects about that new job offer you need to resolve. In the meantime, another possibility seems promising. Be sure to check that out as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Opening up your emotional floodgates could leave you vulnerable to being hurt later on. Watch what you say, in order to avoid having your words come back to haunt you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're usually the life of the party, which gets you on everyone's invitation list. You also have a flair for politics.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Some funeral homes regard the people they serve as clients. A few funeral homes regard the people they serve as customers. We believe such identification is a misnomer. Speaking for ourselves, we serve no clients, no customers. The people we serve are classed as friends—and without exception—in ALL our services, we treat them as friends.

Our friends are the most important people we know. They depend on us for service and we depend on them for friendship. Our friends are an important part of our organization. They are never outsiders. Our friends are never a statistic; they are flesh-and-blood human beings with feelings and emotions like our own. Our friends are never a number; they are individuals with individual names. They depend on us to supply their needs in critical hours and do our best to satisfy them. Our friends deserve and receive the most courteous and attentive treatment we can give them—day or night—regardless of time. We appreciate the privilege of friendship and we at the Deware Funeral Home dedicate ourselves and services to deserve that privilege... These are not mere words. Our many, many friends know this is an established fact...

Recreation Summer Clinics, Workshops Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department announces that its Summer Sports Clinics and Instructional Workshop Programs will have 27 offerings for the school summer vacation period.

The activities are part of Quincy and Mayor William Phelan's OnTheGo! Initiative to help identify and promote active living and healthy lifestyles for all Quincy residents.

Due to the growing popularity of the clinics and workshops, the Quincy Recreation Department is excited to announce that this year there will be three ways to register: The brochure will have a registration form, which will need to be mailed back to the Recreation Department by June 11. Beginning on June 11 registration will be processed lottery style, and will continue on a daily basis as long as openings exist. Online registration begins on June 12 at www.QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist.

Instructions on how to register online can be found at www.QuincyRec.com, and walk-in registration for the remaining space begins on June 18 at 9 a.m. and will continue throughout the summer.

For additional information, visit the Web site (www.QuincyRec.com) or call the Recreation office at (617) 376-1394.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch, in announcing these changes, said that the growth of these low cost programs is a tribute to the directors and staff who provide the finest quality of skill development in an atmosphere of fun.

The schedule, age requirements and program offerings are as follows:

Stoughton Man Shot Down Outside Marina Bay Clubs

Gunfire punctuated the early morning air at the Marina Bay night club area at closing time Monday as a 28-year-old Stoughton man was gunned down in an apparently deliberate assassination attempt.

The victim, who was not identified, was shot twice in a parking lot away from the bar area and taken to Boston Medical Center where he was still in serious condition Tuesday.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said he does not think the shooting was a random act of violence since the shooter and the victim were seen together at the Water Works night club earlier.

There may have been two shooters, the chief said.

Police said about 2,000 people were leaving the night club area at the time of the shooting but no one else was injured.

Five police officers were on paid detail at the Water Works since the Memorial Day weekend is considered to be the unofficial first weekend of the summer season.

Three other officers and two state troopers were in the night club area.

Quincy Police Memorial Observance Sunday

The Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association will hold its annual Police Memorial exercises Sunday, June 3.

Commencing at 8:30 a.m., members of the association, active and retired Quincy police officers, invited guests and dignitaries, will assemble at the Quincy District Court, One Dennis Ryan Parkway.

At 8:45 a.m., they will be led by the Police Department's Honor Guard and escort vehicles to Mount Wollaston Cemetery for the 9 a.m. ceremony.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

During the ceremony, the association will remember its departed members and Quincy Police Crossing Guards. A wreath will be placed at the Police Memorial across from Police Headquarters.

Mayor William Phelan and Police Chief Robert Crowley will speak. This year's guest speaker will be announced at a later date.

A light collation will follow the ceremony at the Quincy High School Cafeteria. In the event of rain, the memorial will be held in the High School Gymnasium.

Logue Launches Campaign Web Site

Councilor-at-large candidate Jennifer McCauley Logue announces the launch of her campaign website.

The website, www.logueforcouncil.com, will provide information on Logue's professional background and community service activities. The website will also provide campaign news, links to helpful Quincy Websites and information on the Fall 2007 elections, including where to vote.

The site also offers feedback forms for those who wish to volunteer for Logue's campaign or who wish to share their views on important issues facing the city.

"One of the most important aspects of being an elected official is keeping in touch with the citizens you serve and knowing how they feel about taxes, public safety, economic development and other important issues," Logue said.

"While the Internet will never replace meeting people face-to-face, it does provide a valuable tool for residents and voters, who can access important information and offer their feedback 24/7 from the convenience of their home or workplace.

"As I make my way around the city knocking on doors and meeting residents at community events, I'm also looking forward to connecting with voters and residents who choose to share their thoughts and opinions through the Website," Logue continued.

Residents wishing to share their views may contact Logue using the feedback form on the Web site, via e-mail at jennifer@logueforcouncil.com or by phone 617-328-1384.

Special Protection For Fore River Basin

Police SCUBA Unit New Weapon Against Waterfront Terrorism

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Quincy Police Department's Homeland Security Unit has commissioned its first SCUBA Unit to protect Quincy's waterfront from terrorist activities.

Since being placed into service in December, the unit has been inspecting the sub-surface of piers, docks, ships and oil terminals (known as energy transfer facilities) in the Fore River Basin.

Potential terrorist targets located in the Fore river Basin are three transfer facilities-Citgo Brantree, Sprague Oil, and Twin Rivers Technologies; two chemical plants-Twin River and the MWRA Fertilizer Plant; and two electrical power stations-Exelon and the Brantree Power plant.

And in addition to the popular commuter ferry terminal, there is also a natural gas pipeline which begins in Nova Scotia and ends in the Fore River Basin, where it is used to fire up the power plants in Weymouth.

Because of these facilities and the surrounding dense population, the federal Department of Homeland Security has recognized the threat to the Quincy Point section of Quincy and provides funds to help QPD patrol that area.

Another division of the city's Homeland Security Unit is QPD's Marine Unit, originally established in the early 1940's, which no patrols and monitors Quincy's maritime infrastructure.

City Council Passes $100,000 Appropriation

Neighborhood Projects Get Green Light

Mayor William Phelan says the $100,000 appropriation passed by the City Council Monday night will pave the way for many neighborhood projects developed by "Neighborhoods First" community groups.

The projects will begin this month, he said.

"I am pleased that working with the community and the City Council, we will be making improvements to all of Quincy's neighborhoods," said Phelan. "This program highlights the importance of citizen involvement in their local governments. We have created an open, active line of communication between our neighborhoods and their government. I am certain that we have improved the delivery of services through the 'Neighborhoods First' initiative."

The "Neighborhoods First" initiative began last year with a survey enclosed in the City Census mailing forms. More than 9,000 surveys were returned with the public establishing priorities for local government resources.

Mayor Phelan developed a response plan to the survey input and created a team of personnel to work with neighborhood committees. The neighborhood committees met to establish priorities in each particular neighborhood.

The following is a list of the neighborhood projects planned by the neighborhood committees.

New Quincy High School Groundbreaking June 11

A groundbreaking ceremony for the long-awaited new Quincy High School will be held Monday, June 11.

Announcement was made jointly Tuesday by Mayor William Phelan, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro and QHS Principal Frank Santoro.

The 1 p.m. ceremony will take place on Woodward Avenue between the existing Quincy High School and the Center for Technical Education. The public is invited to attend.

The event will include children from schools throughout the city, elected state and local officials, entertainment and a cookout.

"This day is a result of our community's effort to build the best school for our children and our school staff," said Phelan. "We worked tirelessly with the understanding that generations of Quincy children will be impacted by our efforts. We fought to build it on the proper site and then we worked with the state to build the best school possible. It is gratifying to finally be putting a shovel to dirt with the knowledge that we are building a school Teachers Face Thursday Vote: Settlement Or Strike?

By TOM HENSHAW

Talk of a strike by public school teachers tomorrow (Friday), a week before the close of schools for the summer, has thrown the spotlight on stalled contract negotiations between the teachers' union and the School Committee.

"We're talking about it as little as possible," said Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association, but he conceded that a strike is an option if all-day bargaining talks Wednesday fail to produce a settlement.

"The membership will meet at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday," he said. "They will be presented with a tentative agreement or the last best offer. They will vote on it. One possibility is a work stoppage next Friday."

Members of the QEA, some 900 of them, have been working without a contract since last August. After negotiations that have gone on for more than a year, how close are the two sides to reaching an agreement?

"That is the $64 million question," said Phillips. "All the pieces are in place for a settlement. All the pieces are in place for a strike. We are going into negotiations Wednesday open to suggestions."

Strikes by public school teachers are illegal under Massachusetts law and, if Quincy's teachers walk out, it is likely the city will take them to court.

The major sticking point in the negotiations appears to be how much each individual teacher will contribute to his or her health insurance premiums.

Right now, the city pays 90 per cent, the individual 10 per cent. Mayor William Phelan has been campaigning to have the city pay 80 per cent, the employee 20 per cent.

"Health insurance is not all the problem," said Phillips. "It's the total contract — salary, working conditions and the rest. We are looking for a creative solution."

In preparation for Wednesday's all-day bargaining session, Phillips issued the following statement:

"On the eve of our last bargaining session before the June 7 general membership meeting, it is important to publicly state that the QEA does not have a personal nor political agenda in this dispute.

"This is about issues and the economic well-being of our membership. The QEA is committed to reaching an agreement that is fair, competitive and respectful to teachers.

"Our membership is united and strong and stands behind the bargaining team in our efforts to hammer out an agreement with the Quincy School Committee.

"Our team is completely focused and fully prepared for tomorrow's session and we hope that the members of the Quincy School Committee will be equally prepared and focused."

Kelly Raises Issue

Quincy Residents Rebuffed At Boston's Long Island Gate

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Long Island is the largest island in Boston Harbor but there's no room for Quincy visitors, according to Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Kelly said the welcome mat is out at Long Island's entrance gate for Boston's homeless and Boston's recovering drug and alcohol addicts but the gate clangs shut for Quincy's tourists and history buffs.

"Boston uses it for its delinquents, its street people. That island should be open to the public," Kelly said, asking, "Why can't the people from the City of Quincy go there?"

Owned by the City of Boston, Long Island can only be accessed by water or by driving through the Squantum section of Quincy, over the Moon Island Road and, then, the Long Island Bridge.

There is a gatehouse at the entrance to Moon Island Road where security can and does screen visitors and prevent unauthorized access.

Kelly says that he has not been able to get regular access for Quincy residents who want to visit the famed lighthouse site which Kelly said is the second oldest lighthouse site in the country and located at the tip of the island which provides "magnificent" views.

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino's press secretary Dot Joyce, said Tuesday that Menino is working toward more access to the islands.

"We are looking to enhance public access to all of the harbor islands. We want to make the harbor islands a wonderful place to visit for everyone," Joyce said.

"It's absolutely wrong," Kelly said that local residents are barred from "...those beautiful islands. It's wrong that we just can't get out there."

Kelly outlined the problem to his City Council colleagues Monday, explaining that he has "long waiting lists of people" seeking access to Long Island.

In fact, Kelly said he had a tour of 25 Quincy residents ready to visit the island last Saturday when they were put off by Boston officials claiming road problems.

And that's not the first time that Boston officials have put the kibosh on Kelly's planned tours, he said, calling the problem "frustrating."

Long Island is the largest of the Boston Harbor islands, according to a researcher at Quincy Public Library. The island has 216 acres and its historic lighthouse was built in 1819 and moved in 1890.

Kelly believes Quincy Mayor William Phelan should arrange a meeting with Boston Mayor Thomas Menino to resolve the issue.

"Our mayor should meet with the mayor of Boston, suggested Kelly.

Phelan would "love to see it opened up," his Director of Council Meets Tonight On Highpoint Extension

The City Council will consider extending by four years a Special Permit allowing construction of the Highpoint development on Quarry Street at a meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m.

The council will meet in its capacity as the Special Permit Granting Authority to review the extension request from Dean Stratouly, the owner and president of The Congress Group, the developer of the apartment/condominium complex.

Under the terms of the original Special Permit, developers were required to complete construction of the 1000 unit project within six years of the start date. However, the original Special Permit did allow an extension if market conditions adversely affected the construction schedule.

In his formal request to the City Council, Stratouly asks for a written confirmation of the four year extension.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 8, 632 A.D., in Medina, located in present-day Saudi Arabia, Muhammad, one of the most influential religious and political leaders in history, dies. In 610 A.D. he had a vision that commanded him to become the Arab prophet of the "true religion." Thus began a lifetime of religious revelations, which he and others collected as the Quran.

• On June 10, 1714, when a young man makes a crude pass at 14-year-old Anne Brennan on the streets of Charleston, S.C., Brennan beats him so badly that his jaw is broken and he must be hospitalized for months. The quick-tempered girl would later become a notorious pirate who terrorized the Caribbean until being captured in 1720.

• On June 4, 1919, the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing women the right to vote, is passed by Congress and sent to the states for ratification.

• On June 6, 1933, Richard Hollingshead opens the first drive-in movie theater, on Crescent Boulevard in Camden, N.J., after experimenting in his driveway at home with a 1928 Kodak film projector on the hood of his car. In 1932 he received exclusive rights for his idea with U.S. Patent No. 1,909,537.

• On June 9, 1943, the Current Tax Payment Act is enacted. While most wartime initiatives were halted shortly after the declaration of peace in 1945, the Tax Payment Act has had enduring impact as it allowed Americans taxpayers to withhold federal income taxes before getting paid their wages or salaries.

• On June 7, 1955, "The $64,000 Question" debuts on television. The show started with contestants answering a question worth $64, with each subsequent question worth double the amount of the previous one.

• On June 5, 1993, singer Conway Twitty dies of an aneurysm at age 59 as he is returning to Nashville after a performance in Branson, Mo. During more than 30 years of performing, Twitty scored 35 No. 1 singles on the country charts, more than any other solo artist.

Still A Man's World

It's still pretty much a man's world.

Politically speaking, that is.

It isn't easy being a woman running for elective office in Quincy. Their best bet has been the School Committee.

But, the City Council and the mayor's office are quite a different story.

Twenty women have won School Committee seats since Quincy became a city in 1889.

The first was Mabel Adams in 1896. And only 19 others in the 111 years since.

But only four women have made it to the City Council. And not one to the mayor's office.

So, a grand total of 24 women have been elected to office in 118 years compared to nearly 500 men.

Four women have tried to reach the mayor's office: Rita Anderson (1971), Grace Saphir 1973 and 1975 and Joanne Condon and Sabina Kavanaugh Stenberg both in 1985.

Saphir was the top vote-getter among the four women.

SAPHIR

She had an impressive 10,416 against incumbent Walter Hannon's 15,492 in 1973.

But two years later, she dipped to 2,710 votes and finished third in a four-candidate preliminary election topped by Walter Hannon (10,403) and Joseph LaRaia, 8,492.

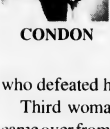

That was the year of the famed recount. Hannon appeared to have turned back LaRaia's challenge by a 134-vot margin in the final election. But a recount gave it to LaRaia by 483 votes.

Quincy's first woman councillor was Edna Austin, an attorney, elected in 1942-54 years after the city's first election. She served as councillor at-large and returned in 1959.

AUSTIN

It was another 18 years before the second woman—Joanne Condon—was elected to the council, winning the Ward 6 seat in 1977.

CONDON

She served until 1985 when she gave up that seat to unsuccessfully challenge Mayor Frank McCauley who defeated her for a third term.

Third woman councillor was Patricia Toland who came over from the School Committee in 1981. For four years, she and Condon were an historic footnote: first time (and only) two women seated in the council at the same time.

Toland, who served 11 years, before becoming assistant city clerk, is the only woman ever elected city council president.

TOLAND

Fourth woman councillor was Alicia Gardner elected in 2003 but stepped down after serving just one term.

The council has been all-male since.

Jennifer McCauley Logue, daughter of the former mayor, hopes to change that this year as a candidate for one of the three at-large seats.

GARDNER

Women have made progress down through the years. You might say inch by inch.

While Quincy was still a town in 1880 selectmen issued a "Qualified Female Voters" list. It contained only nine names.

In those days women could vote for School Committee candidates only.

In 1919 when the 19th amendment to the Constitution was adopted giving nationwide suffrage to women, Quincy—now a city—had 7,707 male registered voters to 429 female.

In 1920, when the 19th amendment actually became effective, women rushed to register. That year, male voters numbered 9,200. But women were gaining fast: 6,236.

Women voters not only caught up to the men a few years ago but passed them. They presently outnumber men by approximately 3,000 according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

If women voters united behind a woman mayoral candidate that might put her in the third floor office.

But women vote for the candidate—male or female—which is the way it should be.

Quincy's mayors have usually come out of the city council but there have been exceptions.

The latest was William Phelan who ran for mayor as a second-year school committee member in 2001 and stunned the political scene with a 17-vote upset win over incumbent Jim Sheets, one of Quincy's all-time political powers.

But if present school committee members Elaine Dwyer or Anne Mahoney have any mayoral thoughts, they would probably have to stop at the city council first.

Linda Stice took herself out of the ballgame by deciding not to run for re-election this year, focusing on a doctorate instead.

Someday, there will be a woman mayor. But we might have to wait awhile.

She could still be snugly in her crib with her bottle somewhere in Quincy.

Don't know about you, but as I've said in the past, I would like to someday see a Her Honor in that third floor office at City Hall.

The women's touch would certainly be interesting.

Older Adult Fitness Program At Crane Library June 9-30

A free series of health and fitness seminars especially for older adults will be held on four consecutive Saturdays, June 9-30, at 9:30 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Living Healthy 50-Plus for men and women ages 50 and older will be instructed by Eileen and Aimee of The Get Fit Solution. Each hour-long session will combine a brief lecture and discussion with a group exercise.

The first session will be devoted to explaining health issues affecting older adults, participating in a beginner yoga exercise and determining a fitness program to meet the individual needs.

In the second session, participants will take part in a holistic mind/body/spirit workout and discover how exercise can reduce stress and prevent the onset of disease.

Session three will demonstrate how to keep the heart strong and offer participation in a cardiovascular conditioning workout. The final session will emphasize strength training with a basic weight training workout.

Eileen Bates, founder of The Get Fit Solution of Quincy, is certified through the American College of Sports Medicine as a health fitness instructor and the American Council of Exercise as a personal trainer.

Aimee Bates has taught group fitness classes for a year and a half, including yoga, cardio kickboxing and body sculpting.

To register for Living Healthy 50-Plus, stop by the reference desk on the second floor of the main library or call 617-376-1316 or email to quref@ocln.org.

The program is funded by a grant from the Americans for Libraries Council.

Scenes From Yesterday

ADAMS SCHOOL, QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of the old Adams School that was on Phipps Street just off School Street in Quincy Center. This school served the youngsters of Quincy for 70 years. It was one of Quincy's first school buildings, built in 1855 on a half-acre lot just behind the Christ Church Cemetery on the corner. Through the trees on the left can be seen St. John's Church that was built only two years before the school. Originally only six rooms the building was expanded to 10 rooms as shown here in 1879. When a new Adams School on Abigail Avenue replaced this one in 1913, this became home to the Boy's Industrial School. Then after the new senior high school opened on Coddington Street with space specifically for the Trade School, this building was demolished in 1925. Today, the site is a parking lot for St. John's Church. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

READERS FORUM

You Might Break My Heart But Not My Spirit

As a Quincy teacher for the past 13 years, it is with deep dismay and disbelief that I read yet another editorial by Mr. Phelan insinuating that the Quincy teachers make outrageous salaries compared to the average citizen. "How many taxpayers have seen their income rise by more than 51%?" I would like to meet these teachers who went into education to be wealthy.

A recent trip to the grocery store made me think about the "truths" that the mayor likes to write about. It was about 8:30 one evening after I put my little one to bed when I had to run out for some classroom necessities. I placed my goods on the conveyor belt: tissues, paper towels and popsicles.

Classroom necessities, you ask? Absolutely! Allergy season has hit hard and it's difficult to teach children the "don't use your sleeve rule" without tissues.

There is no money in the budget for classroom paper towels and I can't tell an eight-year-old that he's not allowed to spill anything this year. Popsicles, well, if you were forced to spend your day in a room that reaches ninety degrees than you would understand that these little bodies need to cool down. As I reached into my wallet to pay the cashier, I realized the $2 sitting there would not cover the bill. I just shook my head, took out my credit card and wondered where all that money that we teachers rake in could be hiding.

I drove home in my nine-year-old car, to my warm, happy, simple home in Weymouth (My husband, also a Quincy teacher, and I looked for houses in Quincy when we married. We could not afford one.) When I arrived home I put away the school supplies I had purchased and sat down to correct papers and create lessons. I can't imagine many citizens would consider this a luxurious lifestyle.

Everyone knows the facts; figures and statistics can be skewed in a multitude of ways. Manipulating numbers to try to prove a point is not what I find disturbing. What breaks my heart is that someone who talks of his respect for teachers chooses to present a picture of me as a greedy, selfish person. I can only hope that the families I have worked with, those who entrusted me with their children, the parents who have written such kind, heartfelt, supportive letters over the years will know the real "truth." I hope they will see me for the person I am and not the ugly caricature the mayor is trying to paint.

I am ever hopeful for a fair settled contract. Until then, I am sure that I will read more editorials that will break my heart. I am also certain that with every crayon drawing I am handed, every loose toothed little smile flashed my way, with every happy hug I receive from a student, my spirit will be strengthened.

'Downtown Destruction Plan'

The City Council approval of the downtown revitalization plan, which I choose to call the downtown destruction plan, will do nothing good for the people of Quincy, but will certainly fatten the wallets of the developers and realtors most of whom do not even live in our city.

I resided in Boston in the 150-1960 period and lived through the destruction of the South End and West End in the name of "Urban Renewal." It was the beginning of the end. Boston as we had known it ceased to exist.

Now the same types of profiteers have their clutches on the City of Quincy. Not content to eliminate a small number of businesses by building a highway to nowhere across Hancock Street, they now will work to destroy the very heart of our city. Over 20 years ago the Quincy Citizens Association fought successfully to limit building height in Quincy. When I spoke before the City Council at that time I warned that we "must not allow Quincy to become a 'Mini-Boston'." We won then, but the developers have won now.

We are becoming a Mini-Boston, with all that I thought I had left behind 30 years ago. Everyone should remember that not all change is progress. This renewal (destruction) plan will prove disastrous.

Thanks To Quincy Police, Jim Edwards

"It may have been the briefest jewelry heist of all time," as reported last week in The Quincy Sun, but it certainly would not have been as reported if it were not for the fast and determined action of the Quincy Police.

We were most fortunate that Mr. Edwards observed the car and wrote down the plate number. The moment we reported the number to the police it went out on the air and within ten minutes the car was spotted and stopped by them.

As unbelievable as it seems, the police also recovered the stolen diamond. The entire incident was handled in a most professional manner and I can not compliment the officers enough for the way they reacted.

Too often we take these folks for granted, but having watched them up close, I realize how well trained and professional they really are. Thank you for being there.

As far as Mr. Edwards goes, I imagine I will be obligated to him for my remaining years.

Adams Historic Park Visitors Up 25.6%

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The Adams National Historic Park welcomed 25.6% more visitors during the start of this tourist season compared to the same period last year.

Through the end of April, 4,005 individuals had visited the Adams site that includes the Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., the Adams Mansion on Adams St. and the United First Parish Church of the Presidents.

Caroline Keinath of the National Park Service expects that the projected goal of 60,000 visitors could be reached. This would be an increase of 20,000 over last year.

Mayor James A. Sheets noted that the National Park Service Visitors Center will be vital in making "tourism a larger slice of Quincy's economic pie."

Violence Prevention

CANDLELIGHT VIGIL SATURDAY

A violence prevention candlelight vigil will be held Saturday, June 5 between City Hall and the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

The event, titled "Peace Begins With Me" is being sponsored by Dist. Atty. William Delahunt's Anti-Violence Committee and more than 75 South Shore community groups and leaders.

The vigil is being held to raise awareness of the negative consequences of violence.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

NQ Community Theatre Celebrating Its 20th Year

Twenty years ago, a group of student performers at North Quincy High School, reluctant to let graduation ring down the curtain on their stage ambitions, decided to form North Quincy Alumni Theatre.

In the summer of 1987, they presented their first production, Lovers and Other Strangers, by Renee Taylor and Joseph Bologna. It was so well received that they did another and another and another.

Now, its name changed to the North Quincy Community Theatre and its membership open to the general public, the group will celebrate the 20th anniversary of that first production.

It will offer the comedy, Lie, Cheat, and Genuslect, directed by Kami Cray, on the weekends of June 8-9 and 14-15-16, at 8 p.m. in the Black Box Theatre within North Quincy High School.

Tickets per show are $15 for adults and $12 for students and senior citizens.

One of the missions of the theatre is to provide North Quincy High School students with the annual Gregory P. Toland Memorial Scholarship in memory of one of the theatre's founders.

In the past 20 years, more than $10,000 has been presented to NQHS seniors.

For more information, contact the box office at 617-769-0232 or visit www.nqct.org.

Air Force 'Big Band Night' At Amphitheatre June 14

Once again, patriotic airs and tunes of the Big Band Era will fill Ruth Gordon Amphitheater as a prelude to Quincy's Flag Day Parade.

The U.S. Air Force Band will offer a free concert for all Quincy citizens Thursday, June 14, at 6:30 p.m. at the amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

The parade will step off Saturday.

The program will include the sounds of the Glenn Miller Orchestra and other old time swing and jazz bands.

"Quincy will celebrate Flag Day in style with a great patriotic concert," said Mayor William Phelan. "I encourage people of all ages to join us for a great evening of patriotism and fun."

"This concert will kick off a host of summer concerts and events to include our popular SummerFest and Arts in the Parks concert series.

"These events are what helps make Quincy such a great place to live."

Transportation to the Air Force Band concert will be available for seniors.

For a reservation, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

Library Offering Internet Instruction In Languages

The Thomas Crane Public Library has added Rosetta Stone Online to its online data base collection, giving Quincy library cardholders an opportunity to learn a language at their convenience from anywhere with an Internet connection.

The language menu includes French, German, Greek, Italian and Russian, as well as English as it is spoken in the United Kingdom and in the United States and Spanish as it is spoken in Spain and in Latin America.

Each language offers some 90 hours of instruction in a carefully constructed sequence of 33 lessons, using the Dynamic Immersion Method that helps develop reading, listening, speaking and writing skills.

Topics include times, dates, weather, numbers, currency, shopping, transportation, social interactions, practical questions and answers.

All that is needed to access the library's Rosetta Stone subscription is a Quincy library card number and a computer with Internet access.

Go to thomascranelibrary.org, click on the Rosetta Stone logo and then create a user account with your library card number.

For more information, call 617-376-1316 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open To Public Saturday

The historic Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road will be open to the public Saturday, June 9, between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m.

Guided tours of the childhood home of John Hancock's wife will be offered at the hour and the half hour beginning at 1 p.m. and ending at 3:30 p.m. The tours are free but a contribution is suggested.

The 321-year-old house, which was recently designated a National Historic Landmark, was a meeting place for patriots like Hancock, John Adams and John Quincy during the Revolution.

For more information, visit the Homestead's website at www.nscda.org/quincy_homestead.htm.

Catholic Women's Club In Final Meeting June 14

The Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy will close its 2006-07 season with a catered chicken dinner Thursday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Sacred Heart School hall, 270 Hancock St. Mrs. Kate Shannon, president, will conduct a business meeting after which a new slate of officers will be installed.

The Monsignor Richard Hawks Scholarship will be awarded to Kelsey McCarthy and Meaghan

Healey, students at the Sacred Heart School.

Chairlady for the evening is Miss Priscilla Langel and committee. The next meeting will start the 2007-08 season on Sept. 13.

Carla O'Connor Receives Girl Scouts' Highest Honor

The Girl Scouts, Patriots' Trail Council recently honored Quincy resident Carla O'Connor for completing her Girl Scout Gold Award at their annual meeting.

The Girl Scout Gold Award is the highest achievement in Girl Scouting. In order to receive the Gold Award, Girl Scouts between the ages of 14 and 17 must design and implement their own service projects that build on their experience in leadership, community service, career planning and personal development.

O'Connor worked with school professionals to create an after school club for high school students which gave them a forum for discussing issues that are important to them. After surveying her peers, she arranged for the group to have workshops on eating well, time management, stress management, yoga, and a workshop on their personality profiles. Students were empowered to take charge of their lives in a positive manner. The school was so pleased with the club that they will continue it next year.

Girl Scouts, Patriots' Trail Council is one of the largest organizations in greater Boston dedicated to girls. The Council serves 23,000 girls and 10,500 adult volunteers from 65 cities and towns including Boston. Patriots' Trail Council develops girls' courage, confidence and character, and blends tradition with innovation by continually adapting to meet the needs of today's girls.

Jeffrey Clifford Awarded Navy, Marine Achievement Medal

Quincy native Jeffrey Clifford was recently awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal during a ceremony at Fort Devens in Ayer.

Clifford's medal with a combat distinguishing device is marked with a "V" for valor for heroic achievement in the superior performance of his duties in Iraq.

As a Marine Corporal stationed in Iraq, Clifford participated in over 300 separate combat patrols in and around Fallujah. On one such patrol last August, his bravery headed off an attack on a key bridge over the Euphrates River.

On that patrol, Clifford stopped an Iraqi vehicle and captured three insurgents who were planning to destroy the bridge. The insurgents were armed with three loaded AK47's, a hand grenade and a loaded rocket propelled grenade launcher, as well as facemasks.

After their arrest, the insurgents opted for a trial. Clifford testified against them in a Baghdad courtroom via video teleconference. As a result, all three defendants were found guilty and sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

Clifford also served in Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm with the Marine combat infantry.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Clifford earned his law degree and Juris Doctorate at Catholic University School of Law, Washington, D.C. He has worked as an Assistant District Attorney in both Norfolk and Suffolk County.

Currently, Clifford is Assistant General Council and Manager of the Compliance and Enforcement Unit of the Massachusetts Department of Industrial Accidents.

Both Clifford and his wife Jeannine were raised in Quincy. They now live in Hanson with their three children.

Koch Calls For Public Discussion Of Long Island Camp Plans

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch has called for City Hall to inform Squantum residents about the City of Boston's plans to open a new summer camp for hundreds of children on Long Island.

In an e-mail to Mayor William Phelan, Koch said that the new summer camp has not been discussed publicly in Quincy even though construction has been ongoing for some time. He called on the administration to work with Boston officials to provide Quincy residents with a full explanation of what is planned for the island.

"Communicating with the public should always be the top priority of the mayor's office, and Squantum residents have been wondering for months about potential new uses on Long Island," Koch said. "We've seen want ads for camp counselors, a brief mention about the camp in Sunday's Boston Globe, and construction vehicles heading to the island regularly."

Koch added:

"But there has not been any public meeting, written notification, or any other kind of notice to Squantum residents about what is going on. We need to communicate with the public."

Koch said he raised the issue after hearing from many Squantum residents who had questions about the new activities at Long Island, which is owned by the City of Boston but can only be accessed by road through Quincy.

The summer camp, Koch said, amounts to a major intensification of the uses of Long Island, adding that plans should be thoroughly aired publicly. He said the camp could generate serious traffic, another example why the city desperately needs to fill the traffic engineer's job that has been vacant for nearly two years.

"People need to be kept in the loop," Koch said. "This use of Long Island may end up being a great one, but our residents should be informed when such a major undertaking is happening literally in their backyards."

Koch pointed to a story in Sunday's Boston Globe Magazine which stated: "Scheduled to open in July, the camp this summer will offer 600 inner-city kids, ages 11 to 14, everything from ball fields to a beach to lessons in the performing arts."

"It sounds like a wonderful opportunity for Boston's youth, but Squantum residents should have the opportunity to have their legitimate questions and concerns answered," Koch said. "Personally, I'd also like to know if there will be any opportunities for Quincy's young people to utilize those facilities."

Koch noted that communicating frequently and effectively with residents will be among his administration's top priorities. He said residents can visit his Web site, www.kochforquincy.com, for more information.

Six Central Students Cited By Center For Talented Youth

Six eighth grade students from Central Middle School were honored at a statewide awards ceremony organized by the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth (CTY) at Suffolk University.

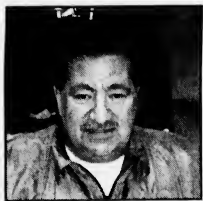

They are Colin Hales, Ping Fung, Francesca Huynh, Alexander Lato, Kevin Liao and Tenley McKee.

The six took the SAT or ACT tests used for college admissions and were among the highest scoring participants in the Commonwealth, significantly higher than the average college-bound 12th grader.

"In hosting these awards ceremonies, we want these bright children to have their day in the limelight for their academic talent and to celebrate their abilities, just as we celebrate excellence in athletics or the performing arts," said Dr. Lea Ybarra, CTY executive director.

Trooper Thomas Duane Receives State Police Honors

State Police Trooper Thomas Duane of Quincy recently received the Superintendent's Commendation honoring his initiative, dedication and courage, while on patrol, and his investigative skills.

During the ceremony held at State Police Headquarters in Framingham, State Police Superintendent Mark F. Delaney commended Duane who is a 20-year veteran of the State Police and a celebrated member of the Troop H Community Action Team.

Delaney noted Duane "continues to make an impact with regard to the seizure of illegal firearms, narcotics and crime-related issues that plague the Commonwealth."

Particularly cited were Duane's actions from October 2006 through November 2006. At that time, Duane discovered a 38-caliber revolver in a suspect's pocket during a traffic stop and found another passenger in the car possessed marijuana.

During another traffic stop, Duane found cocaine and booked two passengers for trafficking in cocaine.

One of those persons already had narcotics violations in Texas and Massachusetts.

After stopping one vehicle for speeding, Duane identified the occupants as convicted felons with extensive criminal records and a search of the car turned up stolen credit cards and over $8,000 worth of merchandise.

Why Do We Need New Here Are The Facts

New Quincy High School Will Cost Taxpayers $46 Million More

2003:
Quincy Pays: $8 Million
State Pays: $72 Million
Total Cost: $80 Million
Expected Start: 2004

Today:
Quincy Pays: $54 Million
State Pays: $72 Million
Total Cost: $126 Million
Expected Start : 2007

“We’ll repair broken relationships with the state, move forward by working together, and do everything possible to make sure taxpayers will not have to pay one penny more than is necessary.”

- TOM KOCH

For $46 Million, We Could Have . . .

1. Given much-needed property tax relief to our homeowners still feeling the effects of the 2004 tax increase, the largest on record.
2. Fixed every crumbling fire house and replace every aging fire engine.
3. Paved every road in Quincy.
4. Doubled the number of patrol officers in the police department to improve public safety.
5. Paid for a new Central Middle School, a renovated Sterling Middle School, and repairs to many of our other school buildings.

What Happened To Central?

In 2003, the city lost a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to have the state government pay 90 percent of the bill for a new Central Middle School because the city didn’t file an application in time.

This information was kept from residents for nearly two years without explanation. Today, Central Middle School remains in desperate condition with no guarantee of any state funding.

Leadership at City Hall? ... You Decide

This Contract Saves Money?

The mayor argues his contract fight with city workers is about reducing health care costs and saving taxpayer money. Yet, here are some highlights of the contract recently awarded to the Police Superior Officers Union.

Cost to Taxpayer:

- $20,000 raises for Police Captains making $150,000 today.
- 5 percent raise just before retirement to boost lifetime pension.
- 66 percent increase in cash payout for unused sick time.
- More paid details.

Benefit to Taxpayer:

- Only 10 percent increase in health care contribution by employees.

"We can't wait for a crisis before dealing with issues like these. Rising health care costs need to be addressed in a way that treats every person with respect. True leadership keeps doors open and develops long-term solutions that leave no one - whether employee or taxpayer - treated unfairly."

No Traffic Engineer For Nearly 2 Years

And it's no coincidence that traffic around our city is getting worse every day. The signals are poorly timed, the intersections getting more and more dangerous, and bottlenecks are common at just about any time of day in just about every part of the city. With so much new development, the problems will only get worse.

"We need a traffic engineer in Quincy watching patterns every day, studying the details every day, and with a passion to improve safety and traffic flow. We need to hire somebody now."

Easy Eggplant Parmesan

Cooking eggplant parmesan can be a chore, but I recently had an eggplant and a zucchini in the fridge and prepared it so easy, I may never go back to the old way of slicing the eggplant and then breading it and so forth.

This recipe is so easy and I think equally tasty as cooking it the other way. You don't have to use the zucchini, I did because it was there and the two go well together.

- 1 large eggplant
- 1 large zucchini
- 1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon basil (fresh or jarred)
- 2 cups tomato sauce
- olive oil for sauteing
- 2 cloves garlic (chopped)
- 1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese
- shredded cheese (any favorite)
- extra sauce
- salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

First cut the eggplant and zucchini in bite size pieces. In a large frying pan, saute the olive oil, garlic and then add the egg plant and zucchini. Cook and stir adding the salt and pepper, the basil. After a few minutes, add the tomato sauce, the bread crumbs and continue cooking until almost done.

In a slightly greased baking dish, start by adding a bit of tomato sauce on the bottom. Then add the eggplant mixture, some shredded cheese, grated cheese and sauce. Continue this until completed and then sprinkle the extra sauce and cheeses on the top.

Cook covered for about 25 minutes, and then uncovered for ten minutes.

P.S. Some of my recipes do not have the exact measurements of certain ingredients, such as how much grated or shredded cheeses you would like. It's all a matter of taste.

BayState Services Offers Free Counseling For Alcohol, Drug Problems

There is free counseling available for individuals with alcohol or drug abuse problems, along with counseling for their families at The Family Project at BayState Community Services in Quincy and Weymouth.

The free treatment includes 24 counseling sessions over a 12 week period for all participants in the study.

The Family Project is part of a research study conducted by clinicians through Harvard Medical School and Bay State Community Services Counseling.

Participants in the project receive free counseling from licensed masters-level therapists.

The study is aimed at determining whether adding family counseling to one-on-one recovery counseling leads to more sobriety for individuals with alcohol or drug abuse problems.

Half of the participants receive both one-on-one counseling with free family counseling while half of the participants receive one-on-one counseling only.

Bay State Community Service Director Daurice Cox, PsyD, said the program offers an exciting opportunity for patients and their family members.

Contact The Family project at 617-694-2602 at Bay State Community Services, 13 Temple Street, Quincy, for additional information.

Thomas Crane Library Wins Awards For News, Brochures

The Thomas Crane Public Library came away from the Massachusetts Library Association's annual conference in Sturbridge with two of its top public relations awards.

The Library placed first in the News Coverage with a televised story highlighting its historic Richardson Building and second in the Brochure category for booklets promoting services that are "free to all."

The three-minute TV clip, called "It's Great to Be Here," was aired on the Ten O'Clock News over Channel 56 in July and praised by the judges for its collaboration between Mike Wankum and cameraman Rich Carew.

"(This) fantastic news piece," said the judges, "took (Quincy's) building to new heights... and moved away from the concept of a 'stuffy' old building—turning it into a treasure—both old and new."

The Brochures were designed by Susan Edwards of Extra Mile Design in collaboration with the library staff in 2005, incorporating photos, colors and design elements from the historic and new buildings of the Main Library.

The judges, who were from the fields of public relations, the press and the library, commented on the "strong unity of design" and "excellent content" of the brochures.

William Feeney Wins Art Start-Up Award

Quincy native William Feeney has been named winner of the 2007 Start-Up Award by the Museum of Contemporary Art in San Diego.

Feeney who is now based in Encinitas is a sculptor and conceptual artist. His work, including several new collage and sculptural works, will be exhibited through July 7 in the museum's 1001 Kettner Galleries in downtown San Diego.

The award includes a $10,000 purchase prize that will bring one or more of Feeney's works into the museum's permanent collection.

Feeney is the son of Joseph and Eileen Feeney of North Quincy. A 1981 graduate of North Quincy High School, he received his bachelor's degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and an MFA from the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Feeney works in construction and carpentry adapting his art skills to his work. He has also taught at several California Colleges.

SGT. ADRIAN GUNN of Squantum, on the eve of his deployment to Iraq, tells the candlelight vigil for marriage equality he does not want to come home to a Commonwealth 'less free than the one I left behind.'

Free Movie For Seniors

Candlelight Vigil Held For Same-Sex Unions

Sgt. Adrian Gunn of Squantum is due to deploy to the war zone in Iraq soon but he showed up at the candlelight vigil for marriage equality just the same.

He didn't want to come home to a commonwealth "less free than the one I left behind," he told the more than 100 people who attended the vigil in Gilbert Memorial Park.

He explained he wanted the Massachusetts Constitution to remain one that he could "feel proud defending."

The demonstration in support of same-sex marriage was organized by Quincy For Marriage Equality, a group of Quincy residents opposed to a constitutional amendment barring same-sex unions.

The state legislature is scheduled to vote in a matter of weeks on whether or not to place the amendment on the ballot for a public vote.

"We want every legislator representing Quincy to know that there is strong support in this community for equal marriage rights," said Jerry Ringuette, co-founder of Quincy For Marriage Equality.

"We urge them to do the right thing by opposing this amendment when it comes before the Legislature."

Noting that the next Constitutional Convention is only two weeks away, MassEquality Campaign Director Marc Solomon urged everyone in the crowd to contact his or her legislator and ask their friends to do the same.

"It is fundamentally wrong to put anyone's rights up for a public vote, which is why it is so important that we stop this measure now," he said.

Other speakers at the candlelight vigil included the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, pastor of United First Parish Church; the Rev. Kathy McAdams, Dr. James Hahn and QFME co-founders Kathleen and Michele Frost.

The group has created a website, www.quincyformarriageequality.com to raise awareness and identify and mobilize more Quincy residents in support of same-sex marriage.

Persons interested in joining the group and signing a statement in opposition to the proposed amendment can contact Quincy For Marriage Equality at info@quincyformarriageequality.com or by calling 617-878-2332,

"Who are we to judge if one family is better than another?"

Sophie, Kristen, and Leo

Vera and Nigel Godley's daughter, Sophie, is married to Kristen. Sophie and Kristen have a 3-year-old son, Leo.

"Sophie, Kristen, and our grandson Leo are a beloved part of our family. There's no reason for Leo to feel that his family is less than any other family.

The thought of a statewide vote on our daughter's marriage makes us heartsick.

People should not vote on whether one family is better than another family."

State legislators are deciding whether or not to put a Constitutional amendment on the 2008 election ballot that would take the right to marry away from same-sex couples - and with it, all the important protections for them and their children.

Parishioners Raise Over $200,000

St. Joseph's Church Gets A Pretty Facelift

St. Joseph Church in Quincy Point is looking much better these days thanks to a new roof, new paint job, new chimney and new waterproofing, among other improvements.

The improvements were financed entirely through a capital improvement drive funded by parishioner contributions that netted over $200,000.

Fr. Vincent Doolan, pastor, expressed his gratitude for the much-needed improvements and for the generosity of the parishioners.

"This community never ceases to amaze me," he said while viewing the improvements. "We are well aware that many of the contributions we received represented a sacrifice to the people giving, yet they esteem their parish church so deeply that they make that sacrifice."

The contributions followed recent setbacks at the church. In the spring of 2006, a smoldering fire caused extensive damage to the sacristy of the Church, necessitating a temporary closing and some emergency repairs. Then, following a drop in enrollment over several years, the parish school was closed in the spring of 2006. Finally, persistent roof leaks caused the relocation of the choir for a portion of the year.

"(The year) 2006 was a difficult year for our parish," noted Father Doolan. "We saw firsthand the frailties of the physical plant with the fire and then the leaks, and then the frailties of the financial picture which forced the heart-wrenching school closing decision."

However, Father Doolan believes the tide has turned, and he is optimistic for the future. "Rather than falling apart as a parish, we came together as a parish, and the manifestation of that is seeing the building itself coming together. It is as heartening a sight as I will ever see."

Parishioners are pleased with the improvements as well. Michael McGroaty, a parishioner for all of his 47 years, expressed his delight that sorely needed issues have been addressed. Leaving Sunday Mass with his children, he said, "My father is 91 years old and has been in this parish for his entire life. His heart and soul are in this parish and he wanted to pass the best parish down to his children that he could.

"It is now our responsibility to preserve this heritage and most of the parishioners that I know take that pretty seriously." Looking up at the new roof, McGroaty said, "We're pleased we could help this important work get done."

Brig. Gen. Joseph Dunford Grand Marshal 56th Flag Day Parade Set For June 16

Merrymount native Brigadier General Joseph F. Dunford, Jr. will be honored as Grand Marshal at Quincy's 56th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration Saturday, June 16.

General Dunford recently served 22 months in Iraq before receiving his current assignment as Director, Operations Division, Plans, Policies and Operations, Headquarters, U.S. Marine Corps, The Pentagon.

A graduate of Boston College High School, St. Michael's College, U.S. Army Ranger School, Marine Corps Amphibious Warfare School and the U.S. Army War College, Dunford holds a M.A. in Government from Georgetown University and a M.A. in International Relations from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. He lives in Alexandria, VA with his wife and children. His parents, Joseph and Kay live in Merrymount.

JOSEPH F. DUNFORD, JR.

The Flag Day Parade and Celebration will include a flag raising ceremony and fireworks display and is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and the Koch Club.

The parade steps off on Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. and will proceed down Hancock Street and disband at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Featured participants include marching bands, drum corps, color guards, military vehicles and, the perennial highlight, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

The parade originated in 1951 and was started by the late Richard J. Koch and the Koch Club and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park which will include a flag raising of a massive 30 foot by 60 foot version of Old Glory, patriotic music and sing-a-long, fly-over, and howitzer salute capped off with a dazzling fireworks display at approximately 9:15 p.m.

Waterworks To Be Enlarged For Major Beach Volleyball Event

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday granted the request of Waterworks, Marina Bay for an extension of premises from Aug 16 through Aug 19 for a major sports event involving beach volleyball as a portion of a nation-wide volleyball tour.

Police Chief Robert Crowley, in making the motion to grant the request also issued restrictions.

That construction would not begin before 8 a.m. and not after 5 p.m., and that they abide by the noise ordinance. Also that weekly meetings be held with representatives from the license board, and residents of the Marina Bay community so that there would be "no surprises."

Also that no underage drinking be allowed.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that if Waterworks owner Ed Kane wishes to serve alcohol early on Sunday, the final day of the event, then he would have to send a letter to the License Board requesting a mimosa license.

Kane said he would follow the rules he usually does when he has corporate parties by having everyone check ID's and with increased security.

He said there would be satellite bars set up outside and also food concessions and vendors.

He said Quincy is a "great community" to host this "first class event" and added this is the place where "I grew up."

Joseph Crowley a member of the Marina Bay Association had concerns over the parking, security safety issues and another egress. He said the traffic would be greatly increased and that the association was not in favor.

Atty. Ed Fleming, counsel for Waterworks said the event is sponsored by the Fenway Park Group and will be broadcast by NBC Sports.

Fleming said that participants will be world class volleyball athletes.

Fleming said that Mayor William Phelan was supportive of the event.

He said there would erect courts and a stadium to accommodate 3,000 seats. He said it would take about eight days to construct and four days to take everything down. He added that the parking lots would be re-stored to their usual state.

Shea read a letter from Ward 6 Councillor Brain McNamee who said he opposed the location of the event and asked the board to deny the request.

Engineer Jack Gillan explained the parking situation and that most traffic would be coming in from Cdr. Shea Blvd.

Dave Williams from California, a member of the group said the bleachers will be constructed "horseshoe" style with a stage for the MC and a place for VIP's.

The event will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday, and from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday and Sunday.

City Parking Facilities Ring In Over $800,000

The City Council Monday approved the transfer of $800,000 from the city's parking receipts account to cover traffic and parking personnel services.

Prior to the vote, Auditor Richard Fitzpatrick informed councillors that income from the city's Hancock Street Parking Lot and Ross Garage totals over $80,000 a month and over $800,000 a year. This income is placed in a separate account designed to cover traffic and parking facility expenses.

Both parking facilities are slated for demolition and the properties could be sold to private developers under Mayor William Phelan's Quincy Center Revitalization

Exercise Classes For Seniors

The Quincy Council on Aging will hold a safe senior exercise program every Plan.

After the meeting, Fitzpatrick said that the $800,000 does not include the $400,000 raised through parking tickets or another $220,000 through traffic offenses. The penalty income is credited to other accounts.

Monday and Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

ARE ALCOHOL OR DRUGS CAUSING PROBLEMS IN YOUR FAMILY?

The FAMILY PROJECT may help.

The Family Project is a study being done by Harvard Medical School researchers at Bay State Community Services in Quincy & Weymouth. The study offers free counseling to individuals with alcohol or drug problems. To qualify, you must:

- * Have a current alcohol or drug problem
- * Currently live with a family member (parent, sibling, adult child)
- * Have a family member without a current alcohol or drug problem

Also that there would be no music outside. Hours would be only until 9 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, and until 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Abutters, including those who live in the Executive House adjacent to the restaurant said their "quality of life" would be changed as they like to sit out on their balconies without the sounds of persons talking loudly. They also said they had concerns with the noises, parking and traffic.

Speaking in favor of the project was Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000. He said the restaurant business is a very "competitive one" and that the Fowler House deserves a chance. If it doesn't work out, he said the board can "take away their privileges."

Scheele said that the Fowler House was not to blame for all of the parking in the area and also said that "they deserve a chance."

Crowley cited noise problems and said the noise is going to carry over to the residents of both 77 Adams Place and the Executive House nearby. He told the board to "consider the people that live there."

license for the outdoor patio.

Voting against it was Police Chief Robert Crowley and Chairman Joseph Shea. Voting in favor was Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, Jim Anderson, sitting in for Jay Duca, director of inspection services, and Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that the whole concept of outdoor dining is mainly "for smokers."

Atty. Ed Fleming, counsel for the Fowler House said the city has changed its position on outdoor dining in the past year, and that since the Fowler House requested outdoor dining a year ago, he had made many concessions.

One was that the dumpster be on the west side of the parking lot and that there would be a fence and a trellis to act as a buffer.

He said there would be eight tables outside the back in the parking lot, that would

Benefit Aids Five Kosovo Children Burned In Explosion

A recent benefit held at Alba Bar & Grille for five badly burned children from Kosovo raised $25,000, according to owner Leo Keka who hosted the event.

Keka has joined efforts with the Massachusetts Albanian American Society/BESA and Kosovar Albanian Society of Boston to raise funds to care for these children while they are being treated in Boston.

American military personnel in Kosovo sent the badly injured youngsters to Shriners' Hospital, Boston. Shriners specializes in the treatment of children burn victims.

According to Keka, the children, members of the Gashi family, were burned during a family birthday party at their home in Verboc, Kosovo. The five children, all cousins, were caught in the explosion of a propane tank that took the life of one mother and one aunt and nearly the lives of these children.

Now, the funds will be used by Massachusetts Albanian Assistance Fund to house and provide daily care for the children and the surviving mother during their treatment for the next several months.

Keka called the fundraiser very successful but added that additional donations are still welcome. Donations may be made online by visiting www.maasbesa.org.

Healthy Eating Program Continues At Library

For those who seek to avoid dairy products for reasons of health, the second phase of the Food for Life program, "Discovering Dairy Alternatives & Planning Healthy Meals," will be held Sunday, June 10, at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Discussions will include the health reasons to avoid dairy products, the dairy alternative that are available and how to get calcium from plant foods. Those in attendance will have a chance to taste some creamy, low-fat, non-dairy dishes.

This is a follow-up to the March Food for Life program, which focused on low-fat foods and dietary fiber. The nutrition and cooking program is designed by physicians, nutrition experts and registered dietitians at The Cancer Project.

Registration is required and may be made by calling 617-376-1316 or e-mailing quraf@ocln.org or stopping by the reference desk at the Main Library, 40 Washington St.

The program is sponsored by The Cancer Project and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM DELAHUNT helped raise funds for Kosovo burn victims, along with (left to right) Ron Zooleck, Leo Keka, owner of Alba Bar and Grille, and television newsman Chet Curtis. Keka organized the benefit for the children who were sent to the Shriners' Hospital in Boston by American military stationed in Kosovo. Online donations are welcome at www.maasbesa.org.

Winners Announced In Mayor's Suggestion Box

More than 200 residents offered their suggestions through the "Suggestion Box" in the Mayor's newsletter on how the City of Quincy could best improve services or save taxpayer dollars.

The winners from the inaugural edition of the newsletter were Leonardo Arcotta and Colleen McCarthy.

Both entries suggested that the city offer the payment of excise tax on the City website.

"I want to thank everyone who responded to our call for suggestions," said Phelan. "I have found that some of the best ideas come from direct interaction with our citizens. Our neighborhood meetings, office hours, and suggestion box have helped us develop some very helpful ideas on how best to deliver services to our residents."

"I have instructed our Information Technology Department to price out and provide this service this year." It is a valuable service to our residents in the computer age and one that will lead to an overall review of the payment options offered in our City website.

The winners will have their names and ideas included in the next edition of the Mayor's newsletter and they will have lunch with him to further discuss their thoughts.

The "Suggestion Box" concept will be included in the next newsletter as well.

MANAGING THOSE PESKY CALLUSES

Practically everyone knows the pain and discomfort of a callus. Whether you have a teeny-tiny one on your pinky toe or big rough ones on the balls of your feet, these hard formations of dead skin can detract from your quality of life. When you have a callus, focus on relieving the pressure on it. Wear shoes that don't press up against it, and look for cushioned corn pads to relieve the pressure. Your podiatrist will be able to pare the callus down with a medical device called a scalpel, and may arrange for you to have an orthotic (insert in your shoe) made that will take pressure away from the hot spots on your foot.

There is no reason to suffer and continue to experience discomfort from calluses, deformed toes, heel pain, toenail problems, and the other myriad conditions that can affect your feet. At our office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, you'll receive the highest quality medical foot care, coupled with the personal attention you expect and deserve. Call 781-986-3668 for an appointment for family footcare. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S: It is especially important for diabetics to see their podiatrists for any calluses.

Grills On Balconies

We're making another attempt to rid the City's balconies of propane and charcoal grills.

Over the past years our attempts have been successful, while there's more progress to pursue. Grills on balconies are a concern and an invitation for disaster. Consequently, it's easy to become motivated, and further our attempts to rid balconies of their presence.

This spring we'll be driving throughout Quincy, focusing on multifamily dwellings, noting those buildings where grills are present. An order of notice for removal will then be issued to the building's owner. They will be notified of the law, and our practical concerns for occupant and firefighter safety. That notice will remain on record.

Should a grill catch fire on a balcony, it can be fed by the natural availability or air surrounding it and the vertical access to the outside of a building where heat and flames will naturally extend.

The largest fire loss within Quincy these past five years occurred just this same way. Although a grill was not the initial cause, the results were the same. The fire extended vertically upward along the combustible exterior of the building, entering the building at a higher elevation causing considerable damage throughout.

The loss was well over a million dollars while the building was then posted uninhabitable, leaving tenants seeking alternative living arrangements for well over a year. Is the convenience of a grill on a balcony worth that price? Property loss, possessions lost, a building left uninhabitable and risk to occupants and firefighters.

A fire in a propane grill can have disastrous effects at grade level alone, while this potential for damage to life and property increases substantially with the inaccessibility of a building balcony. Danger to occupants and firefighters, a like, increases considerably when fire infringes upon a propane cylinder above grade level where extinguishment efforts are naturally hampered by access limitations and height.

The Quincy Fire Department recommends a grill be used at ground level, at least 10 feet away from both sources of ignition and potential combustibles such as wood siding, deck railings, etc. We prefer they not be left unattended while in use as well. Considering the close proximity of some homes within this community, be mindful of wind conditions and smoke migration.

It is not our intent to discourage grill use or our residents' best efforts with them. However, we're looking to have them stored and used appropriately. They have no place being used or stored on balconies.

Please help us in our continued effort to remove them; if you have one on your balcony, please remove it.

Thank you.

Firefighters' Memorial Services In Mount Wollaston Sunday

The annual Firemen's Memorial Services honoring fallen firefighters will be held Sunday, June 10, at 9 a.m. at the Firemen's Memorial Monument in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The detail will form at the cemetery gate on Sea Street at 8:30 a.m. and wend its way to the Memorial Monument for the 9 a.m. ceremony.

Following the service there will be refreshments at the Quincy Fire Department Headquarters, 40 Quincy Ave.

Firemen's Memorial Sunday has been set aside as the second Sunday in June by fire departments throughout the state in order to pay respects to colleagues who have passed on.

In the event of inclement weather, the program will be held at Quincy Fire Headquarters.

Donations may be sent to the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association, c/o Treasurer Kevin O'Connor, 61 Blanchard Rd., Weymouth, MA 02190.

Quincy Residents Rebuffed At Boston's Long Island Gate

Operations David Murphy said after Monday's meeting. As for any meeting on the issue, that has not been discussed lately.

However, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin told Kelly and the council that might not work either. Coughlin said that he talked with Menino recently about the Long Island issue and came away empty-handed.

"I challenged him (Menino) to open up Moon Island—the island," said Coughlin, adding that Menino did not have a satisfactory response.

Boston's ownership of Long Island and Moon Island have long created some irritation between the two cities. In recent years, Squantum residents complained about noise of the Boston police fire range and the city's stripping of trees on the bay side of Moon Island.

In the past, Long Island housed Boston's "poor house," then Long Island Hospital which served patients with incurable illnesses, a Nike Base. At this time, the island provides shelters and services for Boston residents.

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Adams Shore: Boyson Park-Shade Shelter, O'Hara Circle landscape improvements, improved safety signage along Sea Street.

Beechwood Knoll: Sailors Pond improvements—fencing, aerator, mutt mitt stations.

Fore River: Lighting upgrades at Mound Street beach-Hanlon Soccer Field area.

Hospital Hill: Improved traffic and pedestrian safety signage.

Hough's Neck: Repairs to the Public Landing, traffic and pedestrian safety signage along Sea Street.

Marina Bay: Dickinson property improvements—remove asphalt, add planters.

Merrymount: Improved pedestrian safety signage, Butler Pond aerator.

Montclair: New planters for West Squantum Street entrance to city.

North Quincy: Improved pedestrian safety signage near East Squantum Street/Hancock Street.

Quincy Center: Aesthetic improvements around Hancock parking lot.

Germantown: Additional planters along Palmer Street seawall, additional barrels along Palmer Street seawall.

South-West Quincy: Improvements to Taber Street War Memorial—plantings, improvements to Brewers Corner—trees, planters, banner.

Squantum: Creation of passive park at Wendall Moses Playground.

Wollaston: Additional aesthetic improvements at Beale Street and Newport Avenue.

"Our dialogue with neighborhood residents will continue this summer," Phelan said. "We will spend June and July tackling many of these projects and updating our plans with our neighborhood groups. I will host another round of neighborhood meetings in the late-summer to gauge our progress and set plans for the future."

In addition to the specific neighborhood projects, Phelan has proposed the creation of design guidelines for neighborhood multi-family residential projects, created a new position of Code Enforcement Officer, and instituted a Rooming House Task Force to investigate complaints of illegal lodging homes.

"I believe we are making improvements to the root issues that impact our neighborhoods," added Phelan. "This is work that need to be sustained to be successful and we will continue to work with our neighborhoods in an effort to enhance the quality of life in Quincy."

that's in the best interest of the children."

Phelan also thanked the various officials who helped make this day happen.

"Our State delegation worked to pass the Joyce Amendment, ensuring that our reimbursement rate was higher than other communities," Phelan said. "State Treasurer Tim Cahill and the School Building Authority cooperated with us along the way. Our City Council helped pass the bond authorization and our School Committee strongly advocated for the proper construction design."

"Our community stood up with me when it counted most and opposed the original siting on a toxic waste dump. The final product will be a result of an entire community working together. I hope the groundbreaking event is a time where we can all come together to celebrate our respective efforts."

Raymondi Wants Check On Gasoline Price Teasers

Residents flock to the cheapest gasoline prices in town but Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said some of the local signs may be confusing, and possibly illegal.

One constituent complained to Raymondi that she's been paying four cents a gallon more than the posted price for gasoline at a local gas station.

According to Raymondi, the resident told him by e-mail that she had not noticed the "CASH" sign above the low-priced pump and has been paying by credit or debit cards.

As a result, the writer told Raymondi that she has been paying a much higher price for the gasoline at this station and did not know it. She asked Raymondi if the station's policy of two prices was legal.

Raymondi asked the city solicitor to review the complaint and the legal ramifications and to notify the council of his findings.

Police SCUBA Unit New Terrorism Weapon

The Marine Unit is headed by Lts. Robert Gillan and Donald Greenwood.

Gillan spent his early career on the water as a captain of the US Merchant Marine and as a commander with the US Coast Guard Reserve. Greenwood is currently serving his third tour of duty in Iraq as an Army Colonel.

Lt. Gillan said, "Right now, we schedule different patrols to be at oil terminals at different times of the day, and watch the arrivals. We get a notification from the Coast Guard what ships are in port, which are coming into port, and where they are going and we confer with them as to whether this is a high interest vessel, or is this what we would call a 'frequent flier,' a relatively low-threat vessel."

"If it were a high-interest vessel, we would have a major presence there; if it's a normal, frequent flier and we know the last port of call and other information, then we may or may not go down there to escort the vessel in."

"What we do is dependent on what the condition of the country is right now we're in 'yellow' (alert). If we move up to orange, then we will be actively escorting every single tanker in and out of port and having a presence there."

As a member agency of the Metropolitan Boston Homeland Security Region (MBHSR), the QPD has access to federal homeland security funds to conduct training, purchase equipment and carry out exercises to protect against acts of terrorism.

The MBHSR was established soon after September 11, 2001 so that communities of the greater Boston Area could share resources and develop counter-terrorism strategies.

Gillan agrees with the assessment.

"Our major homeland security concerns are really focused on the Quincy Point section... because of the massive amount of gasoline and oil going in and out of there, and then you squeeze these tankers through that bridge....if you damaged that bridge or sank a ship in that channel, our gas prices would probably be $29 a gallon overnight."

QPD works closely with the State Police and Boston Police, and as the Marine Unit is part of the Homeland Security Unit, each day a detective is sent to the Boston regional Intelligence Center (BRIC) where information is exchanged, including crimes which have occurred in any of its nine member communities.

Those cities are Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Quincy, Revere, Somerville and Winthrop which is the site of a sewage facility, a major terrorist target. Customs department and Coast Guard representatives also attend these meetings.

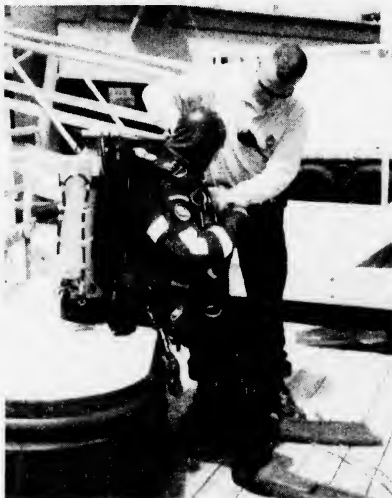

Since terrorists frequently use conventional crimes to finance their activities, members of BRIC discuss each type of crime and look for trend analysis.

Initially, the center was focused on counter-terrorism elements, but daily information sharing, and the infusion of money under the counter-terrorism nexus, has helped the department significantly in fighting everyday crime.

Lts. Greenwood and Gillan had noted, prior to this, when ships of interest entered Boston, especially LNG's, the Boston, Everett and State police were doing extensive ship and hull searches, and searches of transfer facilities.

"That created a huge gap, as the same ships there were searched in Boston weren't getting searched in Quincy, and the bad guys do their homework, they do surveillance," said Gillan.

"We justified the federal grant funding for the SCUBA unit by pointing out that these ships coming into Quincy has the same amount of explosive potential, and we're not doing anything about it."

All members of the Quincy Police SCUBA Unit volunteered for service with the unit and had to pass physical agility and water endurance tests. They have completed several courses in order to be certified as police divers and regularly participate in underwater training and practice exercises.

The Federal Customs Bureau has even approached QPD about searching ships for drug smuggling although the potential to smuggle something else is really what put this on the radar scope for Homeland Security.

Their agents will brief Quincy's marine unit members regarding marine drug smuggling methods, including a trade in what they call parasitic devices, which is an attachment of contraband to the side of a ship below water level.

Lt. Gillan explained, "A ship will go down to South American to load oil or a boxer cargo, and a diver will attach a tube full of drugs or contraband to the ship."

Gillan said, "Even the crew doesn't know it's there. The smugglers contact their folks up here and tell them what ship the contraband is attached to. It's a fact. It has been happening in New England, Quincy, New Bedford."

Headed by Captain of Detectives Anthony DiBona, Quincy's Homeland Security encompasses the SCUBA Unit which consists of 28 regular police officers, including detectives; a Counter-Terrorism Intelligence Unit; and the Marine Unit, with its core members, Patrol officers Michael Foley, James Curran and Robert Bell.

For more than 60 years, the QPD's marine unit has been patrolling and protecting Quincy's 27 miles of shoreline. During WWII, the Marine Unit was tasked with the similar critical mission of providing port security for the marine facilities located along the Fore River Basin.

Among several other programs, today's Marine Unit members conduct boater safety education courses as a public service, and they police Quincy marinas in a "cop-on-the-beat" style.

Lt. Gillan learned much while working with NYPD and New York's massive ferry system.

"Terrorists go to what we call soft targets. A hard target is getting on a plane with a bomb; a very soft target is getting on a harbor Express with a bomb. So we have been sharing information with the MBTA and their intelligence section and it is a concern."

The MBTA commuter ferries transport approximately 600 commuters daily from Quincy to Boston and Homeland Security has identified ferries as primary targets of opportunity for acts of terrorism.

"The last time we had a spike in the terror level, we would routinely put our community police officers on the ferries to ride back and forth...but the best weapon any federal, state, or local agency has is an informed public."

"For example, a commuter who rides the ferry daily could better recognize what's normal and what isn't on that boat than an officer who just walks on it to see if everything is okay."

The QPD offers counter-terrorism courses for the public free of charge and its staff emphasize that citizen awareness is the way to win the war on terrorism; that it is the number one weapon everywhere.

Lt. Gillan grew up in North Quincy and graduated from Mass Maritime Academy. When he joined the police department, he was following in the footsteps of his father Joseph, a 30-year veteran of the department. A man who is dedicated to public safety, Lt. Gillan is intent on getting his message out to the community.

"We tell everybody, not just boaters. If you see something abnormal in your community, just call the police. Let them decide whether it's a big deal or not. We need people to call us. We need them to be our eyes and ears; everybody's safety is a stake here. It's not just a police function."

An informed public is our best defense in counter-terrorism."

When to Call the Doctor

Q. Yesterday I used a spray gun with a compressor to spray latex paint for about four hours in a hall and two small bedrooms. I didn't wear a mask, but it didn't seem to bother me at all. However, when I was cleaning up, my nose started bleeding profusely. I got the bleeding to stop and then coughed up a couple of clots of blood, which I assume was from the nosebleed.

This morning, I woke up with a tremendous headache, nausea, chills, low-grade fever and maybe even a little shortness of breath. I stayed home from work, but I'm not sure if I've got some type of virus or if this is from exposure to the paint fumes. What do you think? — Mary J., via e-mail

A. Honestly, I think your doctor can give you the best information as to whether your symptoms were caused by paint fumes or something else — like a cold or the flu. Anytime you feel lousy or have unusual symptoms during or after a home-improvement project involving chemicals, you should contact your family doctor and describe the symptoms. He or she may want to examine you in order to rule out any serious problems and to treat the symptoms.

If you have severe symptoms, such as extreme dizziness, nausea or vomiting, trouble breathing or chest pain, or if you notice someone having these symptoms or having difficulty responding or speaking, call 911 immediately.

With latex paints or any other chemicals — including seemingly mild cleaning solvents — caution should always be taken to minimize exposure. The space in which they are used should be well-ventilated, and wear gloves to protect your skin. When using materials that produce heavy fumes, cover your mouth and nose with either a paper mask or, ideally, a respirator, and wear goggles to prevent eye irritation.

Jack Conway & Co. associates Mark Abatuno, manager of Conway — Norwell, and Diane Furness, manager of Conway-Quincy were part of a group of 20 Massachusetts Realtors who recently teamed up with Habitat for Humanity in rebuilding homes along the Gulf of Mexico, destroyed by hurricanes Katrina and Rita in 2005.

The effort is part of the National Association of Realtors Habitat Partnership for Gulf Coast Recovery Program. The Realtor family has committed to raise more than $4 million to build as many as 54 homes in the region.

"This was a very humbling and eye-opening experience," said

Abatuno. "Some of these people have lost everything, but they haven't lost hope so it was uplifting to be able to help in some small way."

"My own son was fortunate enough to move into a Habitat house in Hingham last year so I am especially proud to be able to give a little something back," said Furness.

The Realtors worked side-by-side with the future homeowners and local Habitat crews for five days, framing exterior and interior house walls, installing doors and windows, putting up drywall, and painting. "Hammering for Habitat is not something new for about half of the volunteers," said trip leader Richard Dils. Cutting Cooling Costs With Silicone Caulk (NAPS) — Warm seasons can be the perfect time to start home-sealing projects that keep the air conditioning in, the heat out and energy costs down.

Gaps and cracks around windows and doors let air conditioning escape, accounting for 25 to 40 percent of the energy used to cool a home, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Choosing the right caulk to seal a home is important, and following the lead of professionals can help. According to a recent survey, four out of five professional contractors use silicone caulk when sealing their homes. Silicone caulks, such as GE Silicone II, provide an exceptional watertight and airtight seal, maximizing comfort and energy savings.

"Contractors know that a silicone seal is the best long-term seal against water and air," said Carey Evans, designer from the HGTV show "My First Place." "Silicone won't shrink, crack or peel. Nobody wants to do the same job twice, and with silicone caulk you won't have to."

Because silicone is not water based, there is minimal shrinking or cracking when it cures. Shrinkage of GE Silicone II, for example, is less than 5 percent. Acrylic caulk is water based and some acrylics shrink up to 25 percent. That shrinkage leaves cracks and gaps for air and water to move through.

Sealing a home is an easy way to reduce your energy bills by up to 20 percent. Follow these easy steps:

1. Make sure the surface is clean, dry and free of soap, grease, dirt and dust.
2. For a straight edge, use masking tape on each side of the joint; remove immediately after applying the caulk.
3. Remove the cap. Cut the nozzle to the desired bead size.
4. Pierce the inner seal with a stiff wire.
5. Insert the cartridge into a caulk gun.
6. Push the caulk out of the tube.
7. Smooth or tool the bead as necessary.
8. To store, reseal the cap.
9. If painting, use GE Silicone II XST Paintable Caulk or GE Infinity.
10. Use mineral spirits to clean up silicone caulk.

Understanding The Home-Buying Process From Start To Finish

(NAPS) – Eager to buy a home but uncertain about how you can make it happen? With the growing number of home loan options available for a wide variety of financial situations, it is now perhaps more important than ever for potential homeowners to better understand the home-buying process. Buying a home is most likely the largest financial transaction you will make in your lifetime. A smart way to prepare for homeownership is to learn about the home-buying process in advance from start to finish.

Now you can do that-at your own pace, at your own convenience, with no strings attached and at no cost-with the Home Ownership Mortgage Education (H.O.M.E.) program at www.HomeByCountrywide.com.

Countrywide's program gives consumers easy-to-understand educational materials and tools that can help them achieve and maintain the dream of homeownership. The Web site provides articles, worksheets, video clips, quizzes and printable checklists to assist consumers when they leave the site and begin to go through the actual process of home buying.

Start the process with basic finance – With planning strategies to help you manage and save for the future; you'll be better prepared for homeownership.

Learn how credit affects you – Understanding the importance of credit and how it impacts your ability to borrow is critical. Learn how to read a credit report, how to report false information, and what steps you can take to help improve your own credit score.

Prepare for homeownership – Assess your readiness for homeownership and how to weigh different home loan choices. Use the charts and worksheets provided to help you figure out what your estimated costs might be and what you can afford.

Steps for buying a home – Find out how to get help in preparing your loan documents and how to avoid surprises when closing your loan.

Enjoy life as a homeowner – Find practical advice to help keep the investment in your home solid...like staying organized, getting adequate insurance, payment do's and don'ts and keeping your home in good repair.

Buying a home is a big step, and becoming educated about the process can help you achieve your dream of homeownership. The no-cost, no-obligation H.O.M.E. program, www.HomeByCountrywide.com is offered by Countrywide Financial Corporation as part of its mission and the company's founding principle: to help individuals achieve and maintain homeownership.

Hints for Homeowners

Replacing Your AC Unit? Better Isn't Always Better

(NAPS) – Many Americans may not know when it's time to replace their air conditioners. Industry averages suggest an air conditioner should last 12 to 15 years, as long as a qualified technician performs regular preventive maintenance and service. If your system is around 10 to 15 years old and you are thinking of buying a new one, there are several things to consider.

Today's air-conditioning systems offer a variety of features, including two-stage cooling, humidifiers and ultraviolet lights designed to increase comfort and improve indoor air quality. In addition, today's systems are as much as 60 percent more efficient than those manufactured 10 years ago, offering dramatically improved energy savings.

The Department of Energy measures efficiency in numbers called SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio) ratings. The higher the SEER level, the more energy efficient the unit is. For several years, the minimum efficiency standard for newly manufactured heating, ventilation and air-conditioning (HVAC) equipment was 10 SEER. But, as of January 2006, manufacturers have been required to stop producing anything less than 13 SEER.

As a result, another thing to consider is the size of your new unit. With the increase in SEER, many manufacturers have had to increase the size of their HVAC products to accommodate the increase in the surface of the coil found in the system's outdoor unit. However, the York 13 SEER [mc]2 Microchannel Mini-Cube Air Conditioner from Johnson Controls remain small. With a footprint of 21

1/2 inches square, the [mc]2 is the smallest 13 SEER air-conditioning system in the HVAC industry.

The York is small because it uses an aluminum coil with microchannel technology to provide higher efficiency. This technology significantly reduces size when compared to traditional 13 SEER products and uses far less refrigerant. It is a great fit for multifamily applications or anywhere cooling is essential and space is limited.

When deciding what new HVAC unit you want, it can help to get advice from a qualified, licensed and insured contractor, who can explain the importance of efficiency and sound ratings, load calculations, comfort features and warranties.

To learn more about the York Air Conditioners from Johnson Controls, visit www.yorkhvac.com or call (800) 910-YORK.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Backup Plan Keeps Fitness on Track

Setting a realistic fitness schedule is one of the most important elements in developing a successful fitness and nutrition plan. It is equally important to remember that each day may not work out exactly as planned.

Emergencies, family priorities and last-minute appointments can all put a wrench in our fitness routine. Establishing a back-up plan can eliminate the stress or guilt that can result from the inability to follow your fitness routine completely. The key is to remain active and use every opportunity to squeeze alternative activities into your day.

The following tips can help develop a fitness back-up plan during unpredictable and hectic times.

- Be flexible ... stretch. Whether it's in the morning, midday or evening, take several minutes out of your day to stretch your whole body. Stretching your shoulders, neck, back, arms and legs can help you relax and promote blood flow to areas of the body that may otherwise remain sedentary and tense all day.

- Take the stairs! Walk the stairs instead of taking an elevator or escalator. Climbing a few flights of stairs several times a day will increase your heart rate slightly, which can help you burn extra calories. Take a few extra seconds to find the stairwell at work or the mall, every little bit helps.

- Park the car and walk. Don't wait 5 minutes for the closest parking space to become available. The extra few yards you might have to walk is a great way to stimulate your muscles.

- Eat breakfast. Starting your day with a well-balanced meal is extremely important to kick-start your metabolism and prepare your body for the activities of the day.

- Take a walk. You may have missed your favorite aerobics class at the gym, but you can still complete your aerobic workout. Taking a walk at lunch or after dinner or even cycling are great alternatives that can be done almost anywhere.

- Drink plenty of water. Staying hydrated is always important. Water helps the functions of your muscles and tissues and also helps prevent dehydration, which can be overlooked when we are busy or out of our normal routines.

- Initiate family fun. Running around with (or after) the kids is a fun way to exercise. The constant moving, bending and reaching incorporates all of the components of most fitness programs. This is not only great for you but for the whole family.

These fitness back-up tips can be used at any time, not just when your schedule is hectic. Use them to supplement your current fitness program or to fill in the gaps until you are able to get back on track.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfw@heartsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

'Strutters' Raise $35,000 For Breast Cancer In Four Years South Coastal Bank Employees Raise $8,500 For Avon Walk

For the fourth consecutive year, South Coastal Bank employees participated in the recent Avon Walk for Breast Cancer in Boston.

The walkers, known as "The South Coastal Strutters," include James Gordon, assistant vice president and operations officer; Susan Lincoln, executive vice president and director of retail banking and marketing; Ann O'Keefe, vice president and retail operations manager; and Daniel Taylor, vice president and business development manager.

The Avon Walk requires each walker to raise a minimum of $1,800. To meet their $7,200 group goal, the South Coastal Strutters started raising funds in December by raffling off holiday wreaths, decorated with lottery scratch tickets, at all of South Coastal Bank's branches.

The Strutters also raffled off a Red Sox prize package, which included four tickets and a parking pass, just prior to this year's walk.

In addition, South Coastal

Bank employees helped the Strutters by participating in "Jeans and Sneakers Fridays." Employees who made Avon Walk donations on behalf of the South Coastal Strutters wore their jeans and/or sneakers on Fridays to show their support.

The combination of the South Coastal Strutters' fund-raising efforts, the generosity of those who contributed and the help of South Coastal Bank employees enabled the Strutters to raise over $8,600, bringing their four-year total to $35,000.

Altogether, this year's Boston Avon Walk raised

$6.7 million, all of which goes toward supporting breast cancer awareness and education; screening and diagnosis; treatment; support services; and scientific research.

'Fit Kids' Classes At Healing Tree Yoga, Wellness Center

Healing Tree Yoga & Wellness Center, 605 Hancock St., Wollaston, announces its "Fit Kids" summer series of classes will begin Monday, June 18 at 10:30 a.m.

The fun, flexible and affordable yoga and creative movement classes for boys and girls ages 5-12 years of age will be held three days a week - Monday, Wednesday and Friday - from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. through the end of August.

Parents and guardians can purchase a 10-class "Fit Kids" card for $100, or a 20-class card for $175 that can be used at any point during the summer season.

For more information or to purchase a card, call 617-770-4800 or visit the website www.healingtreeyoga.com.

Kid-Friendly Tips For Busy Parents

(NAPS) - The relaxed days of summer can be a great time to teach kids healthy habits. Help your kids stay active and eat healthfully with these tips from the American Heart Association:

- "Do as I do!" Be your child's role model. If you enjoy being physically active, your kids will want to be active too. If you park yourself in front of the TV and eat unhealthy snacks, your kids may do the same.

- Move it! Encourage physical activities that kids enjoy. Plan times for the whole family to take a walk, go to a farmers' market, ride bikes, swim, garden or just play outdoors.

- Set goals that kids understand, like completing one hour of physical activity per day and cutting back on desserts.

- Create a grocery-shopping list together. The American Heart Association's free, online "My Grocery List" builder located at www.heartcheckmark.org makes it easy to browse through more than 800 heart-healthy products certified to be low in saturated fat and cholesterol and/or high in whole grains and fiber. Have the kids make their own special list:

- Click on favorite foods to add them to the list. Products are organized by food manufacturer and by categories such as bread, dairy case, frozen foods, snacks and more.

- Type in other items, like detergent and pet food.

- Print the list and take it to the store.

- Let the kids look for the heart-check mark on food packages. Smart grocery shopping just got faster and more fun for the whole family.

Bombarded with health information? - The heart-check mark from the American Heart Association makes it easy to cut through the clutter and quickly find tasty, heart-healthy foods. It's the only heart on food packaging that meets Association standards.

To learn more about reducing the risk of heart disease and stroke, visit www.americanheart.org or call (800) AHA-USA1.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THAT BURNING SENSATION

It is estimated that more than one million adults in this country suffer from a malady known as "burning mouth syndrome" (BMS), which is characterized by a burning sensation in the lining of the mouth. This painful disorder affects mostly women over the age of 60 and can also cause dry mouth and a loss of taste. While it is difficult to pinpoint the exact source(s) of BMS, experts speculate that 30% of cases are caused by pre-existing conditions such as diabetes, the onset of menopause, nutrient deficiency, or complications from radiation/chemotherapy. The other 70% of cases may be due to poorly fitting dentures, dry mouth, tongue thrusting, or teeth grinding. The dentist can help diagnose and treat BMS effectively.

This condition can be improved in most cases. When applicable, patients are taught to manage BMS through practicing good oral hygiene, dietary changes and other preventive practices. We will be happy to discuss any oral concerns you may have. Any time you have a questions, please don't hesitate to ask. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust, too, is a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If tooth grinding (bruxism) or tongue thrusting are the causes of BMS, an intraoral appliance fabricated by the dentist may help.

SPORTS

Somerset Ends North Quincy's Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy girls softball team's dream season ended with a 7-0 loss to Somerset High School in the first round of the Division I South Sectional tournament last week at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

But their early exit from the state tournament does not take away from just how great of a spring the Red Raiders had.

North Quincy finished the season with a 15-6 overall record, and a 10-3 record in the Atlantic Coast League. The Raiders ended the regular season in second place in the ACL, and made the post-season for the first time since 1995.

"At the start of the year our team goal was to make the tourney," said head coach Mike Connor. "Winning the league or winning a couple of post-season games would have been gravy. It was disappointing that we lost in the first round, but in softball, starting pitching is the key and Somerset's pitcher was outstanding."

North Quincy may not have gone deep in the tournament, but the 2007 team left its mark on the local softball scene. With a roster that included no seniors, the Red Raiders are poised to be even better in 2008.

"I have a great group of girls on the team and starting next spring our goals will be to win the Atlantic Coast League regular season title and go deeper in the post-season," Connor added. "But this year's team put North Quincy softball on the map. Red Raider varsity girls' sports teams (basketball, soccer etc.) have been successful for many years and we brought the softball program into this group."

"Varsity sports is about having fun, but it's also about wins and losses, and I am confident that with this team and the jayvee and freshman programs, we will have a successful team for many years to come."

This year's 15-6 team had three players named to the league all-star team, and three players named to the honorable mention team. The all-stars included Kerry Coughlin (2nd in the ACL in batting), Brittany Folkins (.404 avg.) and Kasey O'Connell. Rebecca Goreham, Kathleen Lynch and Paige Bonanni were named honorable mention.

"I very easily could have had five or six all-stars, but with only 15 spots, we had three," Connor said. "Having six girls either named all-stars or honorable mention all-stars only bodes well for us next year."

The Red Raiders are a team filled with dedicated student-athletes, and with players who relish taking on the roles of leaders, Connor knows that things will only get better.

"This is a group of girls who are always involved in sports," said Connor. "Be it playing summer softball, AAU softball, soccer, basketball and other sports, they are all prepared for what the softball season brings. Everyone is always doing something."

Sports are filled with clichés, but Connor has no druthers using one of them when describing his successful year and team.

"It was a positive year with a wonderful group of girls," said Connor. "But as I told the girls, 'Wait till next year.'"

Quincy Youth Soccer Presents 8 Joy Hanlon, Michael Therrien Awards

Quincy Youth Soccer, at its recent annual general meeting, honored eight recipients of the Joy Hanlon and Michael Therrien Memorial Awards. This year's honorees join 62 prior recipients who are from area high schools and are alumni of Quincy Youth Soccer.

Joy Hanlon, of Quincy Point, was an active participant in QYS until her accidental death in 1992. Beginning in 1995, QYS established a memorial fund in her name to honor her competitive spirit and love of soccer.

Michael Therrien, of the Montclair section of Quincy, was an active member of QYS, serving as coach, board member and treasurer. His death in 1999 was a tremendous loss to all that knew him. The Michael Therrien Award was established in 2001 by QYS to commemorate the spirit of a man relentlessly dedicated to children.

To date more than $25,000 has been awarded to recipients of these two awards to help QYS alumni in their pursuit of secondary education. To qualify, an applicant must have played eight seasons of soccer. Applicants are judged by members of the award committee on their community service, service to their schools and QYS.

Recipients of this year's Michael Therrien awards are:

Christopher Boyd, Megan Therrien and Tara Whoolley, all of North Quincy High School, as well as Katherine Shea of Quincy High School.

"It is especially meaningful to me this year to have Tara and Katherine receive awards," said Marie Therrien, committee chairperson. "They were members of Mike's first travel team, many years ago. They have grown up into impressive young ladies."

Recipients of this year's Joy Hanlon awards are: Francis Hartel and Alexander Miner of Boston College High School, as well as Jacquelyn Callahan and Allison Moriarty of Quincy High School.

"All of our recipients have done tremendous service not only to their schools but to QYS," said Richard O'Hara, QYS president. "They have refereed, coached in our Under-6 program, coached in-house teams and worked in our special needs program. They have had a tremendous impact in many aspects of the QYS community."

The Joy Hanlon and Michael Therrien Awards are given in the spring of each year. Applications for graduating seniors may be obtained from local high school guidance counselors or from the league Web site www.quincyouthsoccer.com.

Olympic Champion Billy Mills To Attend

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Road Race Saturday

The 10th annual Jimmy "The Squirrel" Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS, also known as the Squirrel Run, will be held on Sat., June 9 at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway in Quincy.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to attend the 5-mile run and 2.5-mile walk which will benefit The Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital. Jimmy Kennedy lost his battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

The week leading up to the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS has been declared "ALS Awareness Week" in Quincy. This year, Olympic champion Billy Mills will be at the Squirrel Run, as will co-chairs Bill Rodgers and Michael Dukakis. Mills, a gold medal winner in the 10,000-meters at the 1964 Olympics, was an unranked unknown entrant when he became the first, and only, American ever to win a gold medal in the event.

Mills was scheduled to arrive in Quincy yesterday (Wed.). On Friday, Mills will attend a breakfast at Granite Links Golf Course for breakfast with Mayor Phelan and guests, followed by a speaking engagement at Central Middle School at which he will speak to a few hundred cross-country and track runners ages 12-14. Mills will also be the guest of honor at a meeting with the Quincy Track Club at Pageant Field at 6 p.m. on Thursday.

Registration for the Squirrel Run begins at 8 a.m. on Saturday, with the 2.5-mile walk starting at 9 a.m. The 5-mile run begins at 10 a.m. along a course that is officially sanctioned by the USA Track and Field, New England Association.

The cost to register on the day of the event is $20. The first 500 to register will receive a race T-shirt.

This is the 10th year for the race, according to Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and president of The Angel Fund. In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children and awards for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates and other awards.

Associates sponsorship opportunities are available at a cost of $5,000. Sponsors will receive exhibit space and prominent signage, the company's name and logo on the event banner, and public announcements during the event.

For registration information, or for further information on sponsorship opportunities, call Rich Kennedy at (781) 383-6008, or email him at tytaylin@aol.com; or Marty Levenson at (800) 999-5950 x 1127, or at mlevenson@adt.com.

Testing For Swimming And Boating/Sailing Instruction

The Quincy Recreation Department and Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, announce that the QRD will conduct an advance-testing program in preparation for registration for the summer instructional swimming program at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool.

This testing program is for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter. Children are registered for lessons according to their swimming ability.

The schedule for testing is Friday, June 15 from 6 to 8 p.m. The boating and sailing prerequisite swim test will also be offered during the same period.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the QRD at (617) 376-1394. The normal recreation-swimming schedule will be canceled during the hours of testing.

At the end of the testing period the pool will close for annual cleaning and maintenance.

Family, Friends, Colleagues Attend Party At Raynham Park

Lionel 'Shine' Buckley Celebrates 85th Birthday Party

Lionel "Shine" Buckley, former Quincy Recreation Department supervisor, was honored by his family, friends and former colleagues at Raynham Park in celebration of his 85th birthday.

Buckley, who retired from the Quincy Recreation Department 21 years ago, is also a former guidance counselor, teacher and coach in the Boston Public Schools. Many of the guests in attendance worked with him at the Quincy Recreation Department.

Among those attending were Ted Stevenson, former North Quincy High School basketball coach; John Franceschini, former Quincy High School coach; Bo Ruggiero, current Foxboro High School basketball coach; Charles Bergeron, WBZ sports reporter, and Barry J. Welch, Quincy Recreation Department director.

Buckley's four sons, Bruce of Sandwich, Brian, Brad and Brett of Quincy, and grandson, Jessie, accompanied "Shine" at the event.

Track Team Represented At State Meet

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy/North Quincy track team sent several team members to the Division I State Meet which was held on May 26 at Lowell's Cawley Stadium.

Both the boys' team and the girls' team amassed a total of six team points each.

Senior Joe Page placed fifth in the shot put with a throw of 48'9" feet. Sophomore Jeff Pereira took fifth place honors in both the long jump and the 110-hurdles. Pereira jumped a personal best 20'07" feet in the long jump and ran the 110-hurdles in a time of 15.45 seconds. His running time in that event qualified him for the All-States. Pereira's time of 15.45 seconds in the 110-hurdles was the fourteenth best time in that event for the entire state.

Sophomore Chris

Bergeron also competed in the shot put event.

For the girls, Virginia Wong finished in sixth place in the javelin event. Wong's final distance was 101'6" feet.

Wong's teammate Julie Lynch just missed qualifying for the finals of the javelin event with a throw of 97'08" feet. Alyssa Beach also competed in the javelin event at the State Meet.

Lauren Brooks ran the 1-mile in a personal best time of 5:26, just missing the cutoff for the All-States by a scant three seconds.

Brooks' teammate, Mary Schwartz, ran the second best time of her high school career in the mile. Schwartz finished the 1-mile in 5:50.

The surprise of the day for the girls was the performance of Jessica Davis. Davis finished the 2-mile race in a time of 12:16. Two weeks prior to the State Meet, Davis had never broken the 13:00 minute mark.

"We had 130 boys and girls sign-up this season-double a year ago," said boys head coach Peter Chrisom. "Much of the credit goes to our assistant coaches Jimmy Burke, Matt Marani, Scott Pifer and Jim Connor. We could not have done as well this season with these numbers without their help."

The future of the Quincy/North Quincy track program is in good standing for the coming years, as Joe Page was the only senior participating at the State Meet, and because track as a sport is gaining popularity among youngsters in Quincy.

"With 450 kids in the middle school program and a new track on the way, we can't help but get better in the coming years," added girls head coach Geoff Hennessy.

Fourth Annual Quincy Football Clinic

The fourth annual Quincy Football Clinic will be held June 19-22 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Participants will receive instruction from NFL players and past Division I college football players.

For questions or any other inquiries, contact Jim Connor, varsity head football coach at North Quincy High School, at (617) 838-9720.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, May 21, at approximately 1:15 p.m., Officer Dennis Keenan was on routine patrol in Quincy Point when he observed a vehicle turn onto Washington Street from Washington Court without using a directional signal and failing to yield to oncoming traffic. Vehicles that were traveling on Washington Street had to brake suddenly when the suspect vehicle pulled out in front of them.

Officer Keenan followed the vehicle and observed the vehicle switch lanes without using a directional signal, causing another vehicle to suddenly brake. Officer Keenan put his blue lights on and stopped the vehicle near 582 Washington St. Officer Michael Duran swung by to back up Officer Keenan.

The officer received the driver's license and registration. When asked who owned the car, the driver said he owned it but it was registered to his cousin in Lawrence, adding he has been in possession of the car for the last month. When asked the name of his cousin, the driver said, "I don't know his name."

Officer Keenan asked the driver if he was lost and he responded initially that he was lost, then said he worked at the shipyard. Officer Keenan became very suspicious of the driver due to his responses, especially since the shipyard was only 500 yards away from the site of the initial violation.

When asked if there was anything else in the car that could help establish that he was the owner, the driver told the officers, "It's my car - you can search it if you like." Communications then informed Officer Keenan that the driver had an extensive criminal record involving narcotic violations. The driver was asked to step out of the vehicle, which he did. Strangely, the driver exited the car and put his hands up on the top of his head, as if he expected to be handcuffed - even though there were no instructions to do this!

A pat-frisk for weapons was conducted and the driver said he did not have any weapons and the cash on him was from working on a car that day. This remark seemed unusual, too, since no one asked about the money and he justifying the reason for having money. The driver then said, "You can search me, you can search my car, knock yourself out."

Communications informed the officers that the driver was recently arrested in Weymouth for possession of Class A (heroin) with intent to distribute. At this time, Narcotics Detective Brian Coen arrived on scene. As the officers initiated their search of the car, they immediately detected the overwhelming odor of air freshener, which is a tactic used by drug dealers to throw the scent off for trained police dogs. Numerous air fresheners were found as well as damp carpet, as if recently sprayed.

The officers also noted there was a significant difference in the comfort of the two front seats, the right front passenger seat being rigid. This seat also did not move forward or backward and was missing a bolt. The officers determined there was something suspicious about the seat and believed drugs could be hidden inside the cushioning.

Detective Coen called the Weymouth Police Drug Unit to gather more information about the driver/suspect and learned he ingested the heroin prior to arrest and a search warrant was obtained to recover the drugs from his body. Unbeknownst to the suspect, the officers has attending training that revealed locations that drugs can be concealed in a motor vehicle.

Detective Coen contacted State Trooper John Fallon, who then came to the scene with his K-9 partner, Richter, certified in narcotics odors. Richter sniffed the exterior of the suspect car and made a positive indication that drugs were in the car. Richter then entered the suspect vehicle and went directly to the front passenger seat, where the officers suspected the drugs were.

Upon closer inspection under the seat, officers found a motorized-belt driven secret compartment, which they opened up. Found inside was an Altoids mint container with many individually wrapped plastic corner bags containing substances appearing to be heroin and cocaine. There was a total of 18 bags of heroin and 14 bags of cocaine. The suspect was placed under arrest and searched. He had a total of $1,169 with him, as well as a cell phone.

Back at the station, Detective Coen took five envelopes and stuffed four with paper and one with the suspect's money. Richter then sniffed the envelopes and identified the envelope with the money as having the odor of drugs on it.

The vehicle, the U.S. currency and the cell phone were seized pending civil forfeiture.

The suspect, a 20-year-old Chelsea resident, was charged with possession of Class A (heroin) with the intent to distribute and possession of Class B (cocaine) with the intent to distribute.

Nice work!

Squantum Christian Fellowship Bible Activities

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children to its "Avalanche Ranch: A Wild Ride Through God's Word!" July 16-20 at the Squantum School from 9 a.m. to noon.

"This year, our church is a stampede of excitement," says Pastor Mike Fehan. "Our Avalanche Ranch program will provide fund and memorable Bible activities for kids ages 3-11.

"Each day, they will sing catchy songs, act out a Bible story, enjoy some horseplay, down Chuck Wagon chow, and make a variety of cow-poke crafts. Kids will also collect Memory Buddies daily, and make teddy bears for orphans in needy lands."

Pastor Fehan said the activities are exciting way for kids to learn more about God's love. "Each day at Showtime Roundup, parents can see a slide show of the kids' activities. We hope this adventure will get everyone wild about God!"

For more information, call Helen at 617-328-8771, or visit www.squantumcf.org for a video clip and registration form.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We learn the words to the "Pledge of Allegiance" early in our lives. Yet many Americans do not know the history of the heritage of our flag. They are unaware that the first Flag Day was in 1777. On June 14 of that year, the Continental Congress passed a resolution, legally establishing the "stars and stripes." As a young nation, our new flag proved to be a symbol of strength and victory. We all link the name of Francis Scott Key and the then poem "The Star Spangled Banner." Key was help prisoner aboard a British man-of-war in Baltimore harbor during the War of 1812. The British were confident they would capture the Fort before sunrise. All through the night with the "rockets red glare" and bursting bombs the stars and stripes held fast. The Americans had been victorious.

In some cases, one flag can have many histories. Did you know that the same flag that flew over the U.S. Capitol in Washington on Dec. 7, 1941, at the beginning of World War II, was also flown from the mast of the USS Missouri during the final Japanese surrender on Sept. 2, 1945?

Let us on June 14 take time to remember our flag and be proud of what it represents to all of us...

Council Formally Approves $30M Bond For Quincy Center

By a 7-0 vote, city councillors Monday formally approved the $30 million bond authorization, which will fund the Quincy Center revitalization project developed by Mayor William Phelan.

Under the plan, the city will use a public and private partnership to complete the Concourse, enhance Quincy Square, and encourage public and private development plans for such areas as the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage.

The council, sitting as the Finance Committee, had previously approved the bond under District Improvement Financing (DIF) which allows the city to segregate revitalization monies from other city accounts.

In addition DIF bonds can be negotiated on a 30-year basis, rather than the state's current limit.

The plan and the funding must now be cleared by state officials, according to Planning Director Dennis Harrington who said Tuesday, "It's under review by state officials."

Harrington said that state officials have already approved the plan and the city has been allocated a $5 million stimulus grant, which will be placed in the development account. Funds from the sale of publicly owned properties will also be deposited in the DIF account.

A third of the $30 million price tag, $10 million, has already been assigned to land-taking and relocations costs as Quincy's Concourse plan involves nine land-takings by eminent domain.

Harrington said the City does not expect to take out a $30 million bond at any time, but will borrow against the authorization.

"We will never borrow $30 million," Harrington said.

The state's economic development agency will hold a public hearing on the project will be held in Boston on June 28.

WARD 3 COUNCILLOR Kevin Coughlin presents a donation of $500 to Quincy Public Schools Musical Instrument Teacher Caroline Calabro Hughes in support of the music programs at the Montclair and Wollaston Schools. Coughlin, with the support of The Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association, inaugurated a Musical Instrument Scholarship program now in its 12th year for these two schools.

Council Wants Bottom Line Costs On Contracts

City councillors want the bottom line cost on all union contracts signed by Mayor William Phelan and won't clear the funding without detailed backup data on the dollars.

At Monday's meeting, councillors declined to sign off on either the superior police officers' contract or the patrolmen's union contract until Phelan's office provides an analysis of the cost of each contract.

The council did approve $15,165 for library personnel services but asked for a breakdown on the library union contract as well.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan said that councillors asked for the information "far in advance of this meeting." He noted that the superior officers' unit only covers 55-60 persons and the information should be easily assembled.

"We can't get an analysis of what these contracts are worth. We don't have the proper information," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond who said that he could not "vote on something of this magnitude" without the backup material.

David Murphy, the Mayor's Chief of Operations, told councillors that David Grunbaum, the city's special labor counsel, will provide a detailed report on each contract at the council's next meeting.

TEACHERS PICKETING IN front of City Hall and at some schools has been a familiar sight as their strike entered its third day Tuesday and negotiations with the city stalled. The teachers have been without a contract since last August.

Hope For Settlement But:

Teachers' Strike, Talks Continue

New Complaints Against Chief

Police Union To Seek Expedited Arbitration

By TOM HENSHAW

The sometimes bitter and long-standing dispute between the Quincy Police Patrolmen's Association and Chief Robert Crowley reached a new peak of contention this week.

Union President Bruce Tait said unless Crowley reverses his decision involving vacations, the association plans to file for "expedited arbitration" either Friday or Monday.

If the city does not agree to arbitration, he said, the union will take the latest chapter in their dispute to the Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham.

Last Friday, Tait said, the chief directed that patrol officers and detectives cannot take vacations a day at a time unless it falls within the vacation period.

Tait called it a violation of his union's contract.

BRUCE TAIT

Chief Crowley told The Sun he would have no comment on the union's arbitration plan.

The vacation period, Tait explained, runs from June through September in two week increments with seniority determining who gets first crack.

Under the chief's ruling, he said, no one would be allowed to take a day or a night off using vacation time outside the summer vacation period no matter how many officers are working at the time.

This, he said, would enable the chief to say he is staffing all the police cars without using overtime.

In addition, Tait said, a letter is being prepared to be sent to residents notifying them of the problems inherent in understaffing patrol cars.

Target of the first batch of letters will be residents of the North Quincy and Atlantic neighborhoods, the first areas to go on staff requiring overtime.

Expedited arbitration, if it comes to that, would be handled by an impartial arbitrator selected from the American Arbitration Association.

The Quincy's teachers strike continued into mid-week despite an injunction issued Monday by Judge Thomas Connors in Norfolk Superior Court ordering the teachers back to work.

City and union officials, students and parents had hopes, however slim, for a settlement before the end of the week.

"There's always hope," Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association (QEA), said late Tuesday, noting that the bargaining committee's expected to return to the table for a session Tuesday night.

"We want them back," Mayor William Phelan said of the teachers at his televised press conference on Tuesday. "We respect the teachers' jobs. We want to be fair. The negotiating teams have been working hard."

"We want them back, voluntarily, I hope," Phelan said. The city went back to Superior Court Tuesday afternoon but no decision was issued before press time.

The 900 teachers voted to strike on June 7 citing their 18 months working without a contract and charging that the City has refused to bargain in good faith. Nine teachers, reportedly, voted against the strike call at the Dorchester hall where the union has been meeting daily.

The city's 19 schools with nearly 9000 students were closed as of June 8 which appears to be the city's 174th day of school. State regulations require school districts to be in session for 180 days. It appears that teachers and students would have to make up as many as six days due to the strike.

However, the State does allow for waivers of the 180-day requirement under

New Quincy High Groundbreaking Postponed

The groundbreaking for the new Quincy High School scheduled for Monday has been postponed to a yet unannounced date.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the teachers' strike was the reason for the postponement.

"This day should be a celebration for our entire community," said Mayor William Phelan. "We do not want to exclude people who may want to attend, but can't because of the teacher situation. Our entire community fought hard to build the best school for our children and for our teachers and its more appropriate to conduct the groundbreaking when our community is ready to celebrate together."

The new Quincy High School will be built at the site of the existing Center for Technical Education and administrative building of the Quincy Public Schools. The new comprehensive state-of-the-art building will be a "green" building, achieving "CHIPS" certification from the State.

The City is receiving a $72 million grant from the State's School Building Authority to help build the new high school.

500 More Units To Be Built

Council Approves Four-Year Extension For Highpoint

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Councillors recently approved a four-year extension of its Special Permit allowing construction of the final 500 units of the 1000-unit Highpoint development on Quarry Street.

Councillors voted 7-0 after considering statistics indicating that, at this time, there is "an oversupply of (rental) units" available in Quincy.

"Quincy overbuilt its (rental) market by 36% between 2000 and 2007," according to a report by Webster Collins of CBRE, a real estate valuation and advisory firm hired by Highpoint's developers, The Congress Group.

According to Collins, Quincy's rental vacancy rate has risen from 1.6% in 2000 to between 7.5% and 9.86% as of May, 2007 and "Rental rates are either essentially flat or have declined."

The Congress Group, developers of Highpoint, have already built an estimated 500 apartments and condominiums in five buildings at the Quarry Street site under a Special Permit issued in 1999.

That Special Permit limited the exterior construction period to six years with a start date of 2000 unless market conditions "make the continuation of development impractical in the reasonable business judgment of the Developer."

Dean Stratouly, president of The Congress Group, cited that clause in the Special Permit when he first requested the four-year extension in September, 2006, through Mayor William Phelan's office.

After the request was turned over to City Council in May, councillors called a special meeting of the council acting as the city's Special P.U.D. Permit Granting Authority.

Highpoint was developed as a P.U.D., a Planned Unit Development and the density and height required a Special Permit.

Atty. Richard Rudman represented The Congress Group at the recent council meeting and stated that the developers more than qualified for the four-year extension.

Rudman also told councillors that his firm had already prepared the paperwork to file legal action against the city if the approval was not forthcoming.

In addition, Rudman said the city had lost as much as

$1 million in mitigation by its eight month delay on Stratouly's request for written affirmation of the four-year extension.

The Congress Group agreed to some mitigation funds with Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin but there was no official announcement at the meeting.

After two hours, councillors voted the extension not because of the threat of the lawsuit or the mitigation agreement.

Councillor John Keenan said the original Special Permit language was clear and the City had agreed to it and other businesses will want a signal that Quincy will keep its word.

In fact, Coughlin said he had contacted the same citizens' group that had opposed the project originally and filed a lawsuit to prevent the Highpoint development.

Coughlin said the residents told him that the agreement was clear and the developers qualified for the extension.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond absent himself from the meeting due to real estate interests in the area. Councillor Michael McFarland was absent due to a graduation.

Beach Bacteria Counting Gets Underway This Week

The Quincy Health Department will begin its summer beach water sampling program at 13 city beaches Wednesday, June 13, and continue each Wednesday at least through Sept. 5.

The sampling for Wednesday, July 4, will be collected Monday, July 2.

The samples collected will be analyzed for enterococcus bacteria count by a private laboratory and the results made available to the media.

The State Department of Conservation and Recreation, formerly the MDC, will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach.

The results of their samples will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday or Friday of each week.

The city and the state both employ a standard of 104 or more enterococci colonies as an indication of potential health risk.

Beaches with singles counts of 104 or more will be resampled and posted with warning signs that will remain in place until the count drops below 104.

Once five or more samples have been collected, the geometric mean standard of 35 will be used for posting in addition to the instantaneous sampling result.

If a period of rainfall occurs after Wednesday's water samples have been taken, such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality.

Contaminated storm water flows can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains after at least a quarter of an inch of rain falls in one day.

The Health Department recommends that people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a significant rainfall to allow for natural flushing.

For more information regarding the testing program, contact 617-376-1278.

A 24-hour recorded message will be available at 617-376-1288 for callers to obtain the weekly beach sampling results.

The results also will be posted on the city of Quincy's Web Page Link (Beach Results) at <http://ci.quincy.me.us/>

Flag Day Parade, Celebration Saturday

The 56th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will take place this Saturday evening.

The parade steps off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street, proceeding to Hancock Street, onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field.

Quincy's native Brigadier General Joseph F. Dunford, Jr. will be honored as Grand Marshal for the parade and celebration.

A number of bands will join in the procession, including the Boston Crusaders, Boston City Band, Waltham and Canton Legion Bands, St. Alfio's Marching Band, Boston Fireman's Band, and Local IBEW Fire & Drum Band.

In addition to the bands, two antique fire engines from the Bare Cove Fire Museum, the Weymouth Corvette Club, color guards from the Massachusetts State Police, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, Military Color Guards and, the parade highlight, nearly two thousand flag-waving youngsters from various youth organizations citywide will all participate in the 1.5-mile march.

JOSEPH F. DUNFORD, JR.

Mayor William Phelan is the honorary chairman of the event and will lead the contingent of elected and public officials.

"Quincy's Flag Day Parade truly is a slice of Americana that adds to our city's small town appeal," noted Phelan. "Families and friends have been gathering to celebrate our flag and our country in this city for more than a half century and we're fortunate to live in a community where traditions like Flag Day continue to endure."

The parade will culminate into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag raising of a 30 foot by 60 foot version of Old Glory, presentation of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award to Richard Lombardi, patriotic performance and a sing-a-long and, if weather permits, a fly-over salute.

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off around 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade itself, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

For more information, contact the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1251.

First Concourse Demolition June 19

Mayor William Phelan announced this week that the demolition of 148 Parkway will begin June 19.

The building formerly housed Tan-Line.

The demolition marks the first major step of the city's $30 million downtown overhaul developed by Phelan and approved recently by City Council.

Under the plan, the city will take five additional buildings in order to complete a Concourse or a roadway across the city aimed at diverting commuter and transient traffic from city streets.

The Ross Garage on Parkway, near the site of the demolition project, is also one of the targets of the city's renewal project which is entitled Quincy Center Urban Revitalization Plan or URDP.

Both the Ross Garage and the Hancock Parking Lot across from Quincy Court-houses could be sold to private companies for development.

City officials have set aside $10 million for land-takings in order to complete the Concourse.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 11, 1509, King Henry VIII of England marries Catherine of Aragon, the first of six wives he will have in his lifetime. When Catherine failed to produce a male heir, Henry divorced her and went on to have five more wives, two of whom — Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard — he executed for alleged adultery after he grew tired of them.

• On June 15, 1846, representatives of Great Britain and the United States sign the Oregon Treaty, which settles a long-standing dispute over who controlled the Oregon territory and establishes the 49th parallel as the boundary between the U.S. and Canada.

• On June 16, 1932, controversial stage actress Mae West leaves New York for California to make her first film, "Night After Night" (1932). West had become a hit stage actress, famous for her racy roles. In 1927, she spent 10 days in jail for obscenity.

• On June 13, 1946, entertainment impresario Edward Bowes dies. Bowes was a show-business promoter who made a fortune with his radio and TV program, "Major Bowes' Original Amateur Hour." TV show winners included Pat Boone and 7-year-old Gladys Knight.

• On June 14, 1951, the U.S. Census Bureau dedicates UNIVAC, the world's first commercially produced electronic digital computer. UNIVAC, which stood for Universal Automatic Computer, weighed 8 tons, used 5,000 vacuum tubes and could perform about 1,000 calculations per second.

• On June 12, 1965, the Supremes set music industry records when "Back in My Arms Again" becomes their fifth consecutive single to top the charts.

• On June 17, 1972, five burglars are arrested in the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate office and apartment complex in Washington, D.C. Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein broke the scoop of White House involvement in a pattern of unethical practices against political enemies and later wrote the bestselling book "All the President's Men."

Council At-Large Race Shaping Up

An interesting City Council at-large race is beginning to take shape.

FINN

McFARLAND

Incumbents Joseph Finn, John Keenan and Michael McFarland have three challengers in the field and if one more gets in, it will force a September preliminary election.

LIANG

NG

Jennifer McCauley Logue, former executive director of Discover Quincy and daughter of former Mayor Francis McCauley hopes to become only the fifth woman councillor in the city's 118-year history.

Jimmie Liang and Victor Ng hope to be the first Asian American ever elected not only to the City Council but to any elective office.

Liang, a restaurant owner, made his first bid for the council in 2001 and ran again in 2003, finishing fifth each time.

Ng, who lives on Holmes Street in North Quincy, will be making his first run for public office. He is a financial services specialist for the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education.

Liang wasn't the first Asian American name to appear on a Quincy election ballot when he ran in 2001.

Edward Lee, also a restaurant owner, broke that political ground in 1991 as an unsuccessful candidate for school committee.

Lee ran in an 11-candidate preliminary election field and placed ninth with 1,456 votes.

Not bad, though, for a political novice and considering he was up against some pretty heavy hitters:

Dan Raymondi, Linda Stice, Steve Durkin, Peggy King, Jo-Ann Bragg, Sean Barry, Mary Jane Powers and the veteran Frank Anselmo. Lee trailed him by only 174 votes.

Raymondi, Durkin and Stice went on to win the three seats in the final election.

There's no doubt that the dramatic growth in the Asian population will one day become a political force in the city.

City Clerk Joseph Shea notes that Quincy's current population is 91,606—with 22,500 Asian Americans.

But, of those 22,500 only 4,551 are registered voters. For them to become that political force someone will have to step out in front as a leader and organizer and get them more involved in the community.

But their day in the political limelight is definitely coming.

□

ONE OF THE "coldest cases" yet to be solved is the disappearance 70 years ago next month of Amelia Earhart, who had Quincy links.

She vanished somewhere in the South Pacific in July 1937 while on an around-the-world flight with her navigator, Fred Noonan.

Earhart learned to fly at the old Dennison Airport at Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum Street in North Quincy in the 1920's and was part owner.

John Laukkanen of Woodcliff Rd., West Quincy remembers her with special fondness.

Laukkanen, a World War II combat veteran of the Pacific, says as a youngster he used to help sweep out the hangars at the Dennison Airport.

One day, he says, after he cleaned a hangar Earhart came by and told him he had done a nice job.

"Would you like to take a ride?" she asked him.

And with that, Laukkanen jumped into what he recalled as a red and white bi-plane and they were airborne cruising the area. "Something I'll never forget," he says.

"She was really nice," he says.

Her disappearance over the South Pacific in a Lockheed Electra is still a mystery today. But the search for the answer still goes on.

One team reportedly has found aircraft parts and a woman's shoe on a remote South Pacific atoll. And is planning to return there looking for more clues.

□

AMONG THE PROUD parents this graduation year were Mayor William and Tracey Phelan and City Clerk Joseph and Josephine Shea.

Rachael Phelan graduated from North Quincy High School and her father, as chairman of the School Committee, had the extra pleasure of presenting her diploma, while her grandfather, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, stood proudly by. She will be entering Mount Holyoke College.

Katherine Shea graduated from Quincy where she was the class president and captain of the girls' soccer team. She will be going to Providence College.

□

MIKE MCFARLAND will kick off his campaign for re-election as city councillor at-large Thursday, June 21, 7 to 10 p.m. at The Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Suggested donations: $15 per person, $25 per family.

DOVE Celebrates Relocation With Open House

DOVE, Inc., the domestic violence agency whose service area includes all of Norfolk County, celebrated its recent move to a new, but confidential location in Quincy with a recent open house. Area agencies, local service providers, and funders were invited to tour the facility, which includes a new childcare room and expanded space for counseling.

Stephanie Flaherty, DOVE Executive Director, was pleased with the turnout stating, "We've entered a new phase in the agency's history, with this new space affording us the ability to give our clients better and improved services."

DOVE is celebrating its 29th year serving clients and families impacted by domestic violence, by providing free and confidential shelter, education, outreach, and counseling services to its clients. The agency has also developed partnerships with other area services providers like Womenspace of Brockton which sends staff to DOVE three days a week to offer sexual assault counseling to clients.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920s real photo postcard view of what is now Windsor Road in Atlantic before it became an accepted street. This view is looking west from East Squantum Street. At this time many multi-family houses were under construction. The influx of immigrants during the 1920s made Quincy the fastest growing city in Massachusetts, and the nearby Atlantic railroad station made this a popular neighborhood. In the center distance can be seen the building of the Bosson and Lane, Ltd., a chemical company that was on North Street. Henry Frink, a Quincy photographer, published this postcard. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

READERS FORUM

Doesn't See Any 'Negative Attack'

In a recent release, Phelan spokesperson Kathy Bowes criticizes a Koch for Mayor flier as being an "attack brochure." I read the flier when it arrived on my doorstep, and I read it again after reading the angry-sounding response. For the life of me, I still can't find a "negative attack" anywhere in it.

All I could read into it were issues that Koch apparently wants to talk about during the campaign. How is that a negative attack? I'm starting to think that the anger that was so obvious in the Bowes article says more about our current administration than its challenger.

Why is her article a critique, and the Koch flier an "attack brochure?" It seems every time Tom Koch opens his mouth certain people cry foul and dirty politics, in an effort to color the race the way they want to. The Bowes retort follows this pattern and actually sheds light on a culture of intimidation marbling through the Phelan administration.

The message received by many doing business with, or working for City Hall is clear: any disapproval is viewed as a personal attack and will not be tolerated.

Our Democracy Depends On Institution Of Marriage

In recent weeks there have been letters to The Quincy Sun opposing the people's right to a voice in the debate to redefine marriage.

One letter seemed to maintain that only "religious" people oppose the redefinition of marriage.

There are many people, not of particular religious conviction, who simply understand that marriage, as the union of a man and a woman is the only union designed by nature for the bearing and caring of children and the survival of the human race.

This very fact was well stated by Bertrand Russell, one of the 20th century's most prominent philosophers who maintained that religion was little more than superstition. He taught, "It is through children alone that sexual relations become of importance to society, and worthy to be taken cognizance of by a legal institution." Mr. Russell further concluded, "The main purpose of marriage is to replenish the human population of the globe." Only one union can accomplish this.

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child declares: "The child has the birthright to be cared for by his or her biological parents." The UN is hardly a religious organization.

However, with the legalization of same-sex marriage in Spain the legislature has changed birth certificates for all children to read, "Progenitor A" and "Progenitor B" instead of "mother" and "father." How will same-sex marriage affect others? Do you think the state striking the very words "mother" and "father" from birth certificates of every newborn child will have an impact? Here is a clear example of the emerging clash between the needs of children vs. perceived adult rights.

In Massachusetts, marriage certificates now read "Partner A" and "Partner B."

In another letter, the people's rights to participate in the marriage debate seemed to be compared to tyranny! On the contrary, it would be tyranny to deny the people the right to vote.

The institution of marriage is one upon which our democracy depends. Our government since its inception has relied upon marriage, to provide a mother and father responsible for the procreation and nurture of children, as an indispensable institution for the common good and crucial to the future of the nation. It is true that in recent years, with divorce and unwed births we have lost our way. We need to regain the ideal of marriage rather than moving further from it.

Our government is a system of checks and balances. The Citizens Initiative Petition, as part of our state constitution, was designed to assure the people of Massachusetts an important role to play. When legislators such as Rep. Mariano fail to abide by the laws of this process they snub their noses at the people as unworthy. With the recent unanimous decision of the SIC it is unquestionably clear that legislators who fail to vote directly on the Marriage Amendment Petition are in violation of their constitutional oath.

Thank you to Sen. Morrissey, Rep. Ayers and Rep. Tobin for recognizing the people as true partners in government. My hope is that Rep. Mariano will awaken to the reality that this is a question of the real needs of children, not perceived rights of adults.

General Dynamics Options To Be Aired By Task Force

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Options for the use of the Quincy Shipyard, should General Dynamics at some point be forced to abandon its shipbuilding there, will be aired by a blue ribbon task force meeting to be held in the Conference Room of the new City Hall.

Forming the special panel was suggested by Councillor Patricia Toland who believes that a discussion with General Dynamics Corporate leadership is crucial to the future of the Quincy Shipyard.

Her recommendation for the task force came last month when GD learned that it had lost its bid for a $222.5 million Navy contract.

MCCAULEY BALKS AT COUNCIL INPUT ON HEALTH BOARD

City Councillor Joanne Condon's suggestion that a home rule petition establishing a board of health be amended to include input from the City Council ran into opposition from Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

McCauley, who introduced the home rule petition, noted that the city operates under a Plan A charter form of government, which allows the mayor to make appointments without council approval. "And I think it should stay that way," he said.

Thank You, Squantum Community Youth Choir

I'm writing in regards to the recent performances of Beauty and the Beast that were done on June 2 and June 3rd by the Squantum Community Youth Choir (SCYC) at Eastern Nazarene College.

I just wanted to say it was one of the best performances I've seen done of this production. The crew consisting of Erin Glennon, Sean Glennon, Meghan Driscoll and Cailin Driscoll did an outstanding job in creating and overseeing this to completion.

The cast which consisted of local children did a fabulous job in performing the play. It is amazing that volunteers and school kids can put their hearts and souls into creating a production of this magnitude.

It was a pleasure to watch both performances. Thank you to SCYC for such enjoyable performances of Beauty and the Beast. What's next?

'Sunset Serenade' A Success For Arts Affair On Boardwalk

By NANCY SANTRY

The committee for the Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay faced a difficult obstacle as planning began in February.

A condition report on the structural integrity of the display partitions fell short of safety parameters. After 12 years of use for the annual Arts Affair event, most of the wooden partitions were weak and unstable. Others had been vandalized where they stood overnight at last year's event.

"This year they all must be replaced," said Bill Beyer, chairman of the Arts Affair. The estimated to replace them was $3,000 to $5,000.

With only a modest budget available and earmarked to kick-off 2007 promotion and advertising, the committee agreed to plan an afternoon gathering and ask artists who had recently participated, to show their support by purchasing a ticket for the "Sunset Serenade." Announcements were issued through the 13 local art associations that are represented at the Arts Affair event each August.

The "Sunset Serenade" took place recently at the WaterClub at Marina Bay. After a week of rain, the sky cleared just in time for the arriving guests. The WaterClub provided a variety of passed hors d'oeuvres like coconut shrimp, seafood-stuffed mushrooms, meatballs, spring rolls, and a cheese and fresh fruit table. Specialty cocktails dubbed the "Artini" and "Painter's Punch," were designed specifically for the occasion. Will O'Connell and his staff handled every detail with the utmost attention to detail.

Guests took a chance at the raffle, an Artist's Gift Basket valued at $250, with most of the items donated by Frantice Framer in Quincy. On display was an original watercolor of Marina Bay, by renowned Brockton artist William E. Beyer. Beyer created notecards from his painting as a preview of one of the souvenir items to be offered on the boardwalk in August.

Entertainment was provided by vocalist, Sigmund Moller, who said he was "pleased to have a part in helping keep the Arts Affair to continue on." The audience was treated to the great music of Englebert, Tom Jones, Elvis, Neil Diamond, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, just to name a few. They were swaying in their seats to "Sweet Caroline" and "Delilah."

Because of the generosity and enthusiastic Arts Affair supporters, the Sunset Serenade was a complete success.

The committee is pleased to say the show will go on. The 12th annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay is set for Aug. 4 and 5.

College Courses, Inc. Celebrates 50th Anniversary

The Directors of College Courses, Inc., the founding organization of Quincy College, recently held their 50th anniversary at The Common Market Restaurant, Quincy.

College Courses is a non-profit charitable organization whose purpose is to foster higher education in the South Shore area.

In 1957, the group began by sponsoring six college-level evening courses for 17 students at Quincy High School. That effort laid the foundation for Quincy College which now offers over 500 courses to 4,000 students.

Over the past 20 years alone, the group has contributed more than $1 million to Quincy College, according to College Courses Board Chairman and President Thomas J. McNamara.

McNamara said that the contributions have been used for scholarships for students as well as the library's database system, furniture and computers for students and instructor salaries.

In addition to McNamara, the officers of College Courses, Inc. are Paul N. Baharian, vice chairman; Robert Guarnieri, treasurer; and Marianne Peak, secretary. Paul A.M. Hunt is Chairman Emeritus.

Directors include Dr. Eugene W. Creedon, Thomas M. Galvin, Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, Wendy Simmons, Councillor Michael McFarland, Sheila R. McIntyre, Senator Michael Morrissey and School Committee member Linda Stice.

CELEBRATING 50 YEARS supporting higher education in Quincy are College Courses, Inc. Directors Tom Galvin, Linda Stice, Eugene Creedon and Quincy College President Sue Harris. The group marked the 50th anniversary of the beginnings of Quincy College by local volunteers.

Eight Receive Sterling Middle School PTO Scholarships

Scholarships given by the Sterling Middle School PTO include the following:

Those graduating from Quincy High School are Robyn Bernstein, Jacquelyn Callahan, Anthony Dunner, Allison McDonough and Dan O'Connell.

North Quincy High:

Maria Della Croce and Samy Rouabhia.

Archbishop Williams.
Doug Myers.

COLLEGE COURSES, INC. Directors Paul Baharian, vice chairman; Robert Guarnieri, treasurer; Marianne Peak, secretary and Thomas McNamara, chairman, attended the 50th annual meeting of the group which laid the foundation for Quincy College. The group continues to support Quincy college studies through scholarships and fund-raising.

Veterans Service Office Faces Increasing Demands

The City Council recently approved a $31,000 transfer to the city's Veterans' Services account after reviewing the increasing need for services with Veterans' Services Director Henry Bradley.

All costs for veterans are mandated by the state and the municipality receives 75% reimbursement from the state. The city pays 25%.

Bradley described one veteran whose prescription injections can run as high as $1300 while another veteran's medicine can cost $100 a month.

"We're working with the insurance companies,"

Bradley said, outlining his office's efforts to reduce the payments. However, he said even the costs of the veterans' Medicaid and Medicare benefits have increased.

In addition, the veterans' office which currently serves 97 veterans and their families regularly have unexpected costs, such as funerals. Bradley said he had a call on a death that day.

"Funerals come up unexpectedly."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin cited "holes in the safety net," and added that now, "There seems to be a greater reliance on local veterans' services."

After the meeting, Bradley said the majority of his clients were active in the Vietnam War. Fewer than a dozen served in either World War II or the Korean Conflict.

"You also have the surviving spouses," Bradley said, noting that some 20 widows qualify for services through the veteran's office.

To date, the Iraq Conflict has not affected local services; according to Bradley who said that newly released service personnel are referred to or access Veterans' Administration Hospitals for the first two years.

Brian Buckley Elected State RSVP President

BRIAN BUCKLEY

Lorraine Norton, RSVP of Chicopee, Holyoke and Ludlow, treasurer.

Buckley, who is a former Quincy Council Aging Director and former athletic director at North Quincy High School, heads the Norfolk County RSVP program which is sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners: Chairman Peter Collins of Milton, Francis

At a recent meeting of (MARSPV) the Massachusetts Association of RSVP Directors in Shrewsbury MA, Norfolk County RSVP Director Brian Buckley of Quincy was elected as president of the statewide association.

After the official vote of the slate of officers Buckley thanked his colleagues for their support and especially outgoing President Bill Leary, the Taunton/Fall River RSVP director, for his help in the transition of officers.

Buckley will hold the position of president for two terms through 2009.

Other officers for next year are:

Denise Herron, RSVP Director Worcester, vice president.

Joan Aseltine, RSVP of Greater Lowell, secretary.

O'Brien of Dedham and John Gillis of Quincy.

RSVP is a national volunteer recruitment and placement program offered through the Corporation of National and Community Service. In this program, hundreds of RSVP volunteers offer their time and experience at 50 various sites of non-profit and public agencies throughout Norfolk County.

Buckley is also on the Board of Directors of South Shore Elder Services, the HESSCO Elder Services Money Management Advisory Council, the Massachusetts Senior Games, and the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association and is a former Vice-President of MCOA (Massachusetts Council on Aging and Senior Center Directors Association).

four years but the City Council has yet to fund them.

The men are currently working under terms of a contract that expired on July 1, 2006. Vacation language is the same in both contracts, Tait said.

The full complement of officers and detectives for the Quincy Police Department ment is recommended to be 188 by city ordinance but 167 has been accepted as full staffing.

Last March, the City Council passed a resolution recommending that the Police Department give full cruiser coverage to all of the city's 13 districts, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Chief Crowley has ignored it, said Tait.

At the time, Tait and Councillor Dan Raymond criticized the chief for returning $1.8 million to the city treasury in the past two fiscal years instead of using it for staffing.

Last fall, the union took a "no confidence" vote in Crowley and has repeatedly and unsuccessfully called for his ouster.

Keenan To Seek Re-election To Council Seat

Councillor at-large John Keenan announces he will seek a fourth term.

"While we have accomplished quite a bit over the past few years, still much remains to be done," he said in making his announcement.

"I am seeking re-election because I want to keep working on behalf of the people of Quincy to ensure that the city remains a great place to live and work."

Preserving the neighborhoods has been one of his top priorities, he said.

He noted he drafted and introduced the Residence B Moratorium "that halted multi-family development that was out of character with the city's neighborhoods."

"Multi-unit developments were destroying the character of many of our neighborhoods," he said.

"Although the moratorium was somewhat controversial, it has stopped these developments and given us the opportunity to prepare reasonable zoning restrictions in order to preserve our neighborhoods."

Keenan noted that the City Council passed his introduced ordinance that halted the paving of entire front yards.

"The unchecked paving of front yards was unsightly and was causing drainage problems," he said. "The ordinance limits the amount of paving, prohibits the parking of vehicles on lawns and yet does provide for off-street parking."

Keenan also co-sponsored the resolve calling for a Code Enforcement Officer.

"The Code Enforcement Officer has been busy in the neighborhoods advising residents of the city's ordinances pertaining to such things as paving, parking, trash and illegal apartments," he said.

As chairman of the council's Finance Committee the past four years, Keenan said he has led the council's efforts as a check on the city's finances.

"Given the large expense of the new high school, we have made sure the city properly funds its Stabilization Account. With this we have helped improve the city's bond rating."

"We have also been able to provide the funds necessary to improve our schools, ensure public safety and invest in our neighborhoods. We must continue to be vigilant."

lant."

Keenan pointed to other accomplishments:

Introduced several major cost-saving initiatives, including special pension financing legislation, which could save the city nearly $80 million over the next 20 years.

Spearheaded the council's passage of financial programs and zoning changes to spur development in the downtown area.

Took the lead on the $10 million Natural Resources Investment Initiative strongly advocating for renovations to the city's athletic fields and the purchase of open space, including Lot 23 at Marina Bay, the Bayswater Road/Parkhurst Salt Marsh and land on Quarry Street.

Introduced a measure calling for the study of the Quincy Fire Department with many of the recommendations being implemented including lease/purchase of three new fire trucks and the repair of the city's five fire stations.

Keenan is executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement System, was Financial Coordinator for the Norfolk County Advisory Board and served as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets.

Keenan lives at 37 Hobomack Rd. with his wife, Dr. Jeanne Hopkins and their three children, Christopher, 13, Timothy, 12 and Kevin, 6.

Wollaston Fair Offers Saturday Of Fun For All

The Wollaston Business Center will be alive with fun-filled activities and events for all ages, but especially for children, Saturday, June 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

It's the day of the Wollaston Fair, a time to enjoy music, a silent auction, raffles, a fashion show, free giveaways, food, kids' activities, balloon artists and more.

Activities will be centered around the Wollaston Child Care Center at 47 Western Ave. and the United Methodist Church at 21 Beale St., as well as the corner of Hancock, Beale and Beach Streets and the individual stores.

The Child Care Center, a community service project of the Wollaston Lutheran Church, will host a Kids' Fair for youngsters ages 15 months to 6 years from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

Featured attractions will be Hugh Hanley Entertainer Extraordinaire, Bubble Music Man, Balloon Sculpting, Rainforest Reptile Show and fingerprinting with the Quincy Community Police.

Children must be accompanied by an adult at all times and adults must be accompanied by a child.

The United Methodist Church will feature the Beale Street Fair, including a variety of activities for both adults and children, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

A silent auction consisting of Red Sox autographs, event tickets and dining packages will be held on the church grounds along with a bake sale, a book boutique area and a balloon launch.

Participants will also have a opportunity to sign a banner that will be sent to the armed forces fighting in Iraq.

The Sovereign Bank parking lot will be converted into a kiddie land from 12:30 to 4 p.m. with a variety of children's activities, music, food and other vendors.

Wollaston businesses will have tables set up from 12 noon to 3 p.m. outside their stores and in a designated activity area at the corner of Hancock, Beale and Beach Streets.

Various businesses will offer specials, giveaways and raffles along with music and a fashion show sponsored by Grandasia Bridal & Fashion.

Participating businesses include:

Coffee Break Cafe, Grandasia Bridal & Fashion, Christian Science Reading Room, Classic Homes Real Estate, Deware Funeral Homes, Sovereign Bank, Granite Self Storage

Also Eastern Nazarene College, Bates & Riordan, LLP, Extra Space Storage, Healing Tree Yoga & Wellness Center, The Fitness Factor, Lydon Funeral Chapel and Creeds Crossing.

The committee in charge if the Kids Fair at the Child Care Center includes:

Timothy Wismar, chairman; Marcia J. Bailey, director; Laurie Sullivan, assistant director; Wayne Morse, facility manager; Josie Ng, business manager; Judge Bailey, security manager; and Shirley-Jean B. Black, volunteer event coordinator.

18th Annual Golf Classic

A special thanks to the 2007 Quincy Medical Center Golf Classic Committee and our team of hard-working volunteers!

Teachers' Strike, Talks Continue

"extraordinary conditions," according to a reading of the state Board of Education regulations.

Hundreds of teachers picketed school sites and City Hall throughout the week and met daily at a Dorchester union hall for an update on the bargaining sessions attended by Phillips and the city's committee.

No progress was reported as of late Tuesday afternoon. According to Mayor William Phelan, one of the sticking points is a change in the teachers' payment of health insurance benefits. Teachers currently contribute 10% to their health insurance costs and pay $5 on co-pays.

According to Phelan, the city wants a 20% contribution and a $10 co-pay. He said the city is willing to stretch the change over a period. However, Phelan said that the union wants the change implemented over five years which would be costly to the city.

There are other issues on the table for the bargaining units currently meeting in Battery March Park.

At Monday's press conference, Phelan implored the teachers to return to their classrooms, claiming that Quincy's teachers are the "highest compensated teachers" on the South Shore. "The law is clear; this is an illegal action."

"Quincy teachers enjoy the best health insurance compensation in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," Phelan said, adding, "They currently pay 10% of their health care and enjoy $5 co-payments."

On Monday, Phelan had to move the press conference to his third floor office when over 120 teachers arrived with picket signs. The teachers filled the second floor hallways and stairwells and the conference room where the press conference was originally scheduled.

When Phelan moved the conference to his third floor office, the teachers followed the mayor and media cameras. However, police officers were called in and barred all but the press from the conference.

While Phelan gave his statement and answered questions, teachers could be heard chanting the strike slogans, "Phelan Tells the Public Lies," "Tell the Truth," and "Phelan Failing."

In the hallway, teacher Ellen Power said, "We want to go back to school."

After the press conference, Phelan distributed 23 e-mails written by Phillips as updates on the bargaining. The e-mails were apparently sent to union members. The recipient's name is blacked out.

In one, Phillips writes, "It is insulting that teachers have to go through this kind of thing to get treated fairly. Remember there is still an offer on paper that will result in your making less money at the end unless inflation disappears (no chance of that)." The parentheses are Phillips.

In another e-mail, Phillips breaks down a proposed health insurance payouts and claims that the teachers would actually lose income if that offer had been accepted.

Periodically, Phillips refers to the mayor's selection campaign in his e-mails. For his part, Phelan discounted any effect on his political future.

"If your goal is to apply political pressure, it hasn't worked in the past and it won't work now," Phelan said Monday in his prepared statement. "I was elected to represent the taxpayers' interest; not the special interests."

Phelan described the effects of the strike on family vacations and students' planning to take their year-end exams.

"To our parents, we are making plans to ensure that our high school juniors and sophomores are allowed to take their final exams. We will not allow this teachers' strike to have a lasting effect on their transcripts."

QUINCY SUN NEWSCARRIERS WANTED

Here's a chance to earn extra money by building a Quincy Sun home delivery route. Telephone 617-471-3100

The strike also disrupted the mayor's plans for a ground-breaking for the new high school scheduled last Monday.

In a formal release announcing the postponement, Phelan said "This day should be a celebration for our entire community. We don't want to exclude people who may want to attend but can't because of the teacher situation."

Through-out the week, Phillips reported a continuous round of meetings daily and into the night with both bargaining committees.

The city's team consists of School Committee Vice Chairman Elaine Dwyer, members Kevin Mulvey and David McCarthy, the school department's Human Resource Director Roberta Ketty and the city's labor counsel David Gruenbaum.

Phelan is not participating in the negotiations, as his brother is a Quincy teacher.

Contacted late Tuesday, Phillips was asked for some details regarding the negotiations. He declined stating he was part of the bargaining team.

The negotiating team for the QEA includes Phillips, Allison Cox, Vice-President QEA, Ellen Murray, Quincy High School; Dan Causo, Music Department Head, Richard Green and Aliza Schneller, North Quincy High School; Michael Ellis and Ellen Murray, Quincy High School; Carolyn Parsley, Atlantic Middle School, Martha Slocum, Nurse at Merrymount School, and Patrick Barry, Physical Therapist.

Quincy District Court Lauded For Handling Of Mental Health Cases

Quincy District Court has been cited from the top for its handling of the most sensitive and emotionally demanding mental health and substance abuse cases.

"The task of assessing an individual's mental health is a difficult one," said District Court Chief Judge Lynda M. Connolly.

"Judges are committed to fulfill their responsibilities in a manner that recognizes both the civil liberties of the persons involved and public safety."

The leadership team at Quincy District Court is made up of First Justice Mark S. Coven, Clerk-Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin and Chief Probation Officer Michael Walsh.

"There is no doubt," said

MARK COVEN

Connolly, "that (their) leadership . . . has been instrumental in the success of the District Court and its ability to serve the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Milton, Quincy, Randolph and Weymouth."

Last year, 9,517 mental health cases were filed in the 62 district courts in Massachusetts, a 15 per cent increase over the previous year.

In each case, the judge has to determine the individual's competency to stand trial or take criminal responsibility for his or her actions.

Persons who are not in-involved in the criminal justice system have to be considered by the judge for medication or hospitalization as they may be a danger to themselves or others.

Persons who suffer from substance abuse addiction also come before judges who may commit them to a treatment facility for 30 days if there is a likelihood of serious harm.

In each of these situations, judges make their decisions only after a hearing at which the person is represented by counsel and expert testimony is heard and evaluated.

REAL ESTATE

Conway Financial Services Promotes Responsible Lending With Fannie Mae

Jack Conway & Co. Realtors and Conway Financial Services (CFS) joins Fannie Mae in a local initiative to promote "responsible lending" and educate real estate agents on how to help their potential buyers identify the most appropriate affordable mortgage products.

Throughout June's National Homeownership Month, Conway agents and mortgage originators will receive training on such loan products as Fannie Mae's MyCommunity Mortgage[®], Flexible 97[®] and Flexible 100[™], and Expanded Approval[®] products, which help more buyers qualify for a mortgage loan using flexible financing for a variety of challenges at conventional rates.

Jack Conway Co. and Fannie Mae recently kicked off the effort with two workshops discussing market trends, changing demographics, and a wide range of financing options to help customers overcome the barriers to home ownership. Fannie Mae's Regional Manager Lorenzo Wooten conducted training for more than 400 Conway real estate agents.

Rosemary O'Neil, president of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association and V.P. of Conway Financial said she is "thrilled" that CFS is the first and only Massachusetts company chosen to partner with Fannie Mae for this new outreach.

"Many of our clients during the spring home buying season are first-time home buyers," said O'Neil. "We're very excited about this collaboration and we're looking forward to being a part of the team that will provide invaluable insights to home buyers in Massachusetts as they make the most important financing decision of their lives."

With 45 offices from Boston to Cape Cod, Jack Conway & Co. Realtors is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts - Since 1956.

QCAP Sponsoring Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., will sponsor two free first-time homebuyer workshop sessions Saturday, July 14 and July 28 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The workshop will be held at 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center, in the fourth floor conference room.

Workshop speakers are professionals representing different real estate fields. Participants receive a workbook, which contains valuable references that pertain to homebuying.

Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a pre-requisite for down-payment cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information, call Ann Marie Casey at 617-479-8181 ext. 119.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with South Shore Savings Bank, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, June 25 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, June 30, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop, open to all Massachusetts residents, will be held at South Shore Savings Bank, 1530 Main St., Weymouth.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person.

Land Records Research Expanded At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces internet accessible land records research has been expanded at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

This land record research is available at the Registry's website www.norfolkdeeds.org.

This ongoing project has made available all recorded land indexes and images from 1973 back to and including 1966.

"Recorded land records are referenced by a book and page number based on the traditional Common Law System. This project has added online scanned images and indexes back to 1966 which have added to our current internet accessible library," O'Donnell said.

A second category of land in Massachusetts is registered land. Registered land is supervised by the Land Court and filings are referenced by Certificates of Title.

O'Donnell noted that the Land Court in Norfolk County began in 1901.

"At the Registry of Deeds we are very proud that over 1.1 million documents filed in Norfolk County's Land Court dating back to 1901 have been put on the registered land internet library," O'Donnell said.

"The expansion of the internet library will continue. Our goal is to bring the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds into the homes, municipalities and businesses of Norfolk County," O'Donnell said. He added, "We hope to continue to improve the usefulness of the system to both real estate professionals and the general public."

The Registry of Deeds located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal land records office for the communities of Norfolk County. The Registry receives and records hundreds of thousands of documents each year and is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

Century 21 Annex Realty Top Sales Agents

Art Foley, Broker/Owner of CENTURY 21 Annex Realty, Inc., with offices in Quincy and Hanover, announces the Annual Award Recipients for 2006.

These agents were recognized for their adjusted gross commissions and the number of units they each sold in 2006.

John Balzano and Theresa Repoff, both based in the Quincy office, were honored with the Masters Ruby Award. The Masters Ruby Award is given to agents who either reach $110,000 to $142,999 in adjusted gross commissions or who have sold 30 to 39 units in a 12-month period.

In 2004 and 2005, Balzano received the Masters Ruby Award as well as the Pacesetter Gold Award in 2004. Repoff received the Masters Ruby Award in 2004 and 2005. She has also received the CENTURY 21 Annex Realty Extra Mile Award and the South Shore Board of Realtors Community Service Award. Repoff was named one of the top agents for the second quarter of 2006.

"Century 21 Annex Realty would like to congratulate John and Theresa for their outstanding performances in 2006," said Foley. "This has been a great year for our company, and we could not

High Electric Bill? Get an Energy Audit

Q. I read with interest the article about the homeowner with high electric usage. He is using 300 kilowatt-hours more than his neighbor. But what about his total usage? A total energy audit of his home may provide some answers.

The audit should focus particularly on electrical loads — appliances, motor load, etc. As an energy auditor, state-certified in Maine, I always had a sit-down session with the customer and logged the number of occupants in the house, their age and gender. You would be surprised how much more energy-intensive girls are compared with boys.

If you are going to model the energy use, it must be related to the family's living habits and comfort levels (air temperature) maintained in the structure. Even in a well-insulated home, cranking the thermostat to 75 degrees in winter or 72 degrees in summer will be reflected in the energy use.

In short, there's nothing wrong with comparing your energy use with your neighbor's, but it is not the best approach. Neither is paying an electrician to detect a possible electrical leak (at least, not at this time). Do the energy audit first; then, if you have a problem measuring the audit figures against the amount actually consumed, consider other avenues.

I commend the customer for monitoring his energy use; however, a qualified utility representative should be willing to methodically address the issue. Such occurrences were always a challenge for me as a utility employee for 30 years. I hope the customer's local utility will respond with the same enthusiasm as my company did in resolving the questions of this concerned customer. — Roger P., Leesburg, Fla.

A. Thank you, Roger. This is great advice. These days, many utility companies offer do-it-yourself energy audit kits for free. However, most can schedule a representative to come and perform an audit. Even if homeowners don't notice a big discrepancy in their power bills from one year to the next, a home energy audit can result in big savings.

How to Select Flooring That's Right For You

(NAPS) — Since its introduction in the early '90s, laminate has evolved into a dynamic flooring option.

Homeowners who choose laminate are less concerned about denting, nicking and stains than other types of flooring. In addition, laminate won't collect dust like carpet, leaving allergy sufferers with one less symptom trigger. Remember to consider the following when shopping for flooring:

Appearance — Whether you want a hardwood, ceramic or stone look, the laminate you choose should resemble the real thing as much as possible.

For example, Mohawk Flooring's new Earthworks and Hemisphere Collections offer realistic surface textures and finishes in a variety of colors and styles. For a coordinating look, consider accent moldings to finish the room.

Location — Let your retailer know about the environment in which you plan to install your new laminate. Many laminates are not warranted for use in bathrooms and some are only warranted if it is a square-edge product.

Room location is also a key factor when it comes to noise levels, so you'll want to consider the proper underlayment that will best contain noise.

"We offer a SILENT GUARD underlayment to decrease sound from traveling to rooms below," said Roger Farabee of Mohawk Industries. "Both also serve as a moisture barrier between the subfloor and the laminate."

Maintenance — Think about the maintenance involved with any floor. An aluminum oxide top coat will not only protect the floor from everyday wear due to pets and foot traffic, but also against extremes such as cigarette burns and household chemical spills. Choose laminate with wear, impact, scratch and stain resistance built into the floor.

Warranty — Most reputable flooring manufacturers offer a 20- to 25-year wear warranty if the flooring is installed with its underlayment. Be sure to ask what the warranty does and does not include.

Consumers should make sure their floor is manufactured by a member of the North American Laminate Flooring Association (NALFA). These companies' products meet or exceed industry standards for manufacturing.

North Quincy High School Valedictorian Ivy Huang's Message To Fellow Graduates:

'Create Happiness By Taking Charge Of Your Lives'

Editor's Note: Ivy Huang, the valedictorian of the North Quincy High School Class of 2007, was scheduled to deliver the following address to her fellow graduates. However, because the commencement was postponed from Monday to Wednesday, and her travel plans out of the country, Ivy was unable to attend graduation. This is the text of the address she was supposed to give.

By IVY HUANG
Welcome Mayor Phelan, Superintendent Dr. DeCristoforo, Members of the School Committee, Parents, Families, Friends, Teachers, and the graduating Class of 2007, my name is Ivy Huang and I am honored to be this year's Class Speaker.

To the Parents and Teachers, thank you for putting up with us during the past four years. It was with your encouragement and guidance that we developed into well rounded individuals, who excelled in sports while achieving high honors in academics and making our mark in the arts.

To my fellow graduates, congratulations on your transformations from insecure freshmen to confident young adults, who are poised to meet all the challenges and

IVY B. HUANG
Valedictorian
North Quincy High School

to make contributions in the world. This incredible transformation has been the result of our entire high school experience, from the first classes in ninth grade to the last dance at senior prom. Our experiences during the past four years have cemented our bond and unity as a class.

To get to this moment, many of you faced adversity and triumphed. I also had to overcome several trying experiences to get to where I am today. For one, I was separated from my parents during most of my childhood due to the one child policy in China. This policy, which forbade city couples to have more than one child, forced my parents to leave me in a remote village under the guardianship of my Great Aunt and Grandfather. My Great Aunt was a woman who had survived the devastation of World War II and the communist takeover during the three decades that spanned her youth. Her early life had been marked with hunger and deprivation. Despite her difficulties in life, she never let her sadness affect her treatment of me.

After six years of separation, my father came one summer morning to announce that I would be reuniting with my family because he had received permission to immigrate with his family to America. I cried during the whole trip from the village to my new home in the city. I remembered that I could not bear the thought of leaving my Great Aunt behind.

It was during this period of change that I lost my sense of security. My apprehension of new surroundings and people taught me to be self-reliant. For example, since I was determined to be on the same academic level as my city classmates, I would spend my summer vacation completing math and writing exercises.

In the meantime, my family waited two more years before we were allowed to leave to Canton to come to America. The nine years that followed taught me the importance of optimism, but this notion did not come instantly. Caught between the whirlpools of two cultures, I did not quite know who I was or what I should be. Things became even more complicated when my family's rented apartment was destroyed by fire in the spring of 2000.

Although it was a stressful experience, my family gradually made a full recovery with the help of the community. The collective effort of the social workers and the local community lifted my family out of homelessness and into public housing, which reduced a great part of the financial burden on my parents, but placed me in a new and unfamiliar school district.

Soon I began middle school in the new district, where I knew no one. Instead of feeling sorry for myself, I decided to initiate friendships and focus my energy on academics. The blue and gold ribbon that I received when I was named student of the month after my first term in sixth grade represented a new world of possibilities to me. It encouraged me to test the limits of my abilities by participating in more academic and extracurricular activities. I credit Broad Meadows Middle School for this positive transformation.

My subsequent four years at North Quincy High School further honed my enthusiasm and commitment to academic excellence and community service. For example, my involvement in science fairs during the past four years has led me to develop a strong interest in the field of science. At the same time, my volunteer work provided me with opportunities to give back. There is no doubt that the academic, athletic, and fine arts programs offered at North nurtured and shaped the person I am today.

As a result of my experiences, I have learned one very important rule: ninety-nine percent of all troubles will eventually go away! Something good is bound to happen in the end when you

Quincy High School Valedictorian Paige Neumann Message To Fellow Graduates: 'When We Work Together We Can Accomplish So Much'

By PAIGE NEUMANN
Valedictorian
Quincy High School Class of 2007

Thank you Mr. Santoro.... Mr. Mayor, Honored Guests, Parents, fellow graduates....do you remember these words? "One of these things is not like the others. One of these things just doesn't belong. Can you tell which thing is not like the others by the time I finish my song?"

Many of us remember this song from our childhood years of watching Sesame Street. This song taught us how to group things that are alike and to single out those things that are different. And while this seems like a good lesson to teach a child, many of us may have learned that lesson a little too well. We are a very diverse class. We have different cultures, religions, languages, and interests, but we still tend to identify people who are like us and to stick to those people.

It is good to talk to people who believe as we do, who enjoy what we do, but it is also good to reach out to those who are different from us. In all our years at Quincy High, we haven't done many things as one class, together.

And yet here we all are, graduating together. We may not be the most cohesive or connected class, but when we work together we can accomplish so much.

PAIGE E. NEUMANN
Valedictorian
Quincy High School Class of 2007

It is not hard to see the disconnection in our class. Just by walking through the cafeteria at lunchtime, we can see how we separate ourselves by ethnicity, gender, cliques, etc. It is perfectly natural for us to want to stay within our comfort levels, and although these levels make us feel more at ease, they also limit what we can do. I know it sounds clichéd, but we really are so much stronger when we work together.

Just look at what happens when we put our differences aside and work together.

Look at what we've achieved over the past four years by working together. We've had robotics championships. Our football team has won the Turkey Day Game every one of our years at Quincy High. We had plays, concerts, fashion shows, and art shows. We've had volleyball, basketball, baseball, and tennis championships. By coming together within our teams and clubs, we earned so many great successes in so many areas. When we worked together towards a common goal, we were able to come together, despite our differences, and to successfully reach that goal. At other times, we succeed because of our differences. Our classroom discussions are richer because of our different perspectives. We learn from our differences. We even celebrate those differences every year at the cultural fair. Even if the only thing that you took away from that fair is which country has the best food, we still all got a chance to see how diverse our school really is and to see what we can accomplish when we celebrate our differences instead of letting them divide us.

Quincy High's theme this year was "Respecting Our Differences." We didn't always stay true to that theme, but when we did, the results were incredible. By letting our differences unite us, instead of divide us, we achieved so much more than we ever could have if we had stuck to that simple Sesame Street rule.

In five years or so, when we have our first class reunion, whom will we sit with? When we look back on our years at Quincy High, will we remember just those things that we did within our small groups, or will we remember the things we did together?

Look at us now. Remember this moment. We're all here as one group. We're all here - together.

Congratulations class of 2007!

do not give up, keep working, and just wait a little while!! For some reason, I believe life will turn out alright even if it will not be easy.

America gave my family freedom and independence. It also made us assume responsibility for ourselves. Listen Class of '07, nothing can ruin your life unless you let it be ruined. We can create our own happiness by taking charge of our lives in the next several years.

Reverend James Russell Lowell once said that Mis-haps are like knives that either serve us or cut us as we grasp them by the handle or blade. The opportunities and obstacles that await us in the next several years will be similar. If misfortune happens to befall you, view it as the impetus for brighter beginnings.

QUINCY POLICE LT. Dan Minton and Jim Flahive, one of the founders of the Quincy High School Student Police Academy.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Crime Prevention Officer

On Friday, June 15, Jim Flahive, a teacher at Quincy High School, retired after 36 years in academia. Like many teachers, often times their extra efforts go unrecognized. His retirement should not go unnoticed because he was instrumental in linking students with Quincy Police Officers as part of the "Quincy High School Student Police Academy."

In 1990, Jim Flahive and retired Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna broke new ground by creating this program. There were no guidelines since no one in the country was doing this and even today there are very few schools with a program of this magnitude.

The program started out with the creation of introducing the field of law enforcement to prospective students, to help them decide whether or not this was the career path that they wanted to take. The course took 11 months and for two seasons, Jim Flahive was a volunteer teacher, and students are secondarily supervised by a certified police officer.

Right now, the program is a very successful model. This year, Jim Flahive and I, Lt. Dan Minton, are the only two teachers. The program is open to all students who are interested in law enforcement. The program is open to all students who are interested in law enforcement. The program is open to all students who are interested in law enforcement.

Mr. Flahive's desire to make the course as interactive as possible. As the course grew in student numbers, so did Mr. Flahive's desire to reward the students' further commitment to the program. During his own time, Mr. Flahive introduced the program to many local merchants, who made donations each year. Mr. Flahive would purchase shirts for the students to present to them upon graduating from the course.

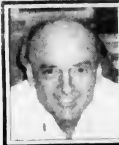

For the past five years, Mr. Flahive sponsored a cookout for his students and welcomed what appeared to be half the school's student body to be part of his student's accomplishments. Funding came from his yearly golf tournament and often out of his own pocket and all proceeds went to the associated programs.

Mr. Flahive also emphasized to his students that a career in public service means community involvement. Each year, his students brought in food to provide Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets to needy families in Quincy. The Quincy Police Department and Mr. Flahive's students delivered the baskets together.

The last function that Mr. Flahive sponsored was a cookout for Quincy High School seniors after their graduation practice at Adams Field, which he has done for years. He helps make so many events special memories. Mr. Flahive recently had a retirement party and many students from years past thanked him for the extra effort he made to bring this concept into the classroom.

With Mr. Flahive's retirement goes almost two decades of reaching out to the students and presenting new opportunities through the Student Police Academy. Mr. Flahive always said, "It's all about the kids." Even though the Academy at Quincy High School ends with his retirement, it is evident that he has forever positively affected those hundreds and hundreds of students who passed through his classroom and graduated from the Quincy High School Student Police Academy.

I've had the pleasure to work with Teacher and friend Jim Flahive for the past 17 years and wish him the best. To Jim Flahive, "Nice Work."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

A Dryer Fire

Here's a fire where there's a lesson in it for all of us.

I was recently called to investigate a cellar fire. It started in a gas clothes dryer. The clothes dryer was two years old. I spoke with the homeowner who conveyed the following to me:

He was drying towels. He informed me that he routinely cleaned the lint trap in the dryer.

He explained to me that he had done so prior to using the dryer for the towels on that day.

After the towels dried, he went to the basement and removed them. He then went about doing chores including working on his car in the driveway.

While in the driveway, he smelt something burning.

Walking around the exterior of the house, I believe that he then detected some smoke coming from the dryer vent as it passed through the basement foundation. He then immediately returned to the basement, lifted the lint trap and discovered a fire beneath it. He called the fire department immediately.

Why was there a fire; here's the only thing I can think of as a reason. The fire started below the lint trap, below the revolving drum. Apparently lint accumulated there while there is no easy access to this area. The State Fire Marshal recommends gaining access to this area of the machine and vacuuming it at least once a year. Not an easy task!

Typically a rear panel must be removed to gain access. He removes the panel of his dryer annually. On my dryer, I know I have a cage on the outside after the vent passes through the building.

I have to clean that vent at least four times a year where lint will accumulate on it, partially occluding the vent. So apparently lint is passing past the trap.

For that reason, I frequently check the vent hose for accumulation as well, particularly at the right angle before it goes vertically towards the window.

So there you go! Here's an example where removing the panel and cleaning less accessible areas would have made a difference.

A lesson for us all.

Tim Alsip's Walk-Off Hit Wins It For Braintree Moose

With the score tied 3-3 in the bottom of the seventh inning, Braintree Moose's Tim Alsip lined the first pitch he saw into left field to cap off a come-from-behind 4-3 victory over State Street.

The winning hit made a winner of Alsip's brother, Jeff. J. Alsip threw a masterful 15-strikeout, one-hit game and also knocked in the tying run with an RBI in the seventh.

Mike Casinelli (triple) and Eric Mason (single, stolen base, run scored) contributed on offense.

For State Street Global, Nick Dolan pitched a great game, striking out nine through the first six innings. Ryan Ketner reached base twice, including State Street's only base hit in the fifth. Andrew Pugsley was on base three times and scored a run for State Street.

Babe Ruth International

Braintree Moose 15 Marina Bay 12

Braintree Moose used a nine run sixth inning to post the 15-12 victory.

Jeff Alsip threw a complete game with 13-strikeouts to pick up the victory. Alsip reached base four times (two hits, three stolen bases) and had an RBI and two runs scored.

Max Greenwood got the scoring started with a two-run homerun in the second, and Steve Anastasi finished the game with two hits and two RBIs. Myles Carrigan delivered an RBI single.

For Marina Bay, the offense was powered by home runs off the bats of Paul Carson (grand slam in the 2nd), Elvin Nunez (solo home run) and Dylan Roche (three-run homer in the 6th).

Braintree Moose 6 Feenan Financial 5

Max Greenwood's walk off hit scored Shawn Clancy (double, stolen base) to give Braintree Moose the victory.

Clancy, who finished the game with two hits, was the winning pitcher (complete game, 11-strikeouts). Pat Linnane (two-run single), Myles Carrigan (two hits) and John Morton (defensive star) contributed in the win.

For Feenan Financial, Byron Keegan pitched a great game and also had two hits. Conor Flynn played a solid game behind the plate and added a hit and Joe Kowalski played solid defense at shortstop.

Bobby Page made a great catch in center field to save a run.

ERIN CAIN of Quincy, (front row, second from right), a sophomore on the Mount Holyoke College women's basketball team, helped the Lyons to their first-ever NEWMAC league title this past winter.

Sophomore Helps Lyons Win League Crown Quincy's Erin Cain Provides Spark for Mount Holyoke

Erin Cain, of Quincy, a rising sophomore on the Mount Holyoke College women's varsity basketball team, played an active role in the school's successful 2007 season.

Cain, a strong defensive guard, averaged 27 minutes a game during her team's 21-8 season in the New England

Women's and Men's Athletic Conference.

In the NEWMAC post-season tournament, the second-seeded Mount Holyoke claimed its first-ever league crown with a thrilling 51-46 victory over top-seeded WPI at Harrington Auditorium. With the win, the Lyons appeared in their first NCAA Division III Championships against the top-ranked Bowdoin College women's basketball team. Mount Holyoke lost in the opening round by a 74-57 score.

Cain, a 2006 graduate of Fontbonne Academy, is the daughter of John and Kathleen Cain of Quincy.

Give Body Time to Recover

Q. My workout partner designed a program that has us doing total body strength training every workout. We work out five days a week for about an hour each, splitting the time between cardiovascular exercise and strength training. Since we began this program, although I have seen some results, I have not stopped being sore. Is it normal for me to stay sore, or should we change our workouts?

A. Designing a workout that will show results while keeping you safe in the long run can be challenging. The first point to remember is that "more is not always better." The desire to see results can motivate us to try to do as much exercise as possible in hopes that we can speed up the time it takes for us to reach our goals. Remaining sore after each workout is a sign that your workout needs more recovery time and modification.

It is great that you and your workout partner have made the time to exercise five days a week, and that you are seeing results. I would encourage you to continue to make that time available; however, I would suggest using that time in a different manner.

Your body needs time to recover between workouts. Remaining sore day after day could limit your body's ability to work as effectively and efficiently during the next workout — actually keeping you from reaching your goals over time.

Try completing your total-body strength-training workout three days a week, along with cardiovascular exercise for 30 minutes within that hour. Be sure to design your strength-training workouts appropriately so the weight is not too heavy. Remember, the weight you choose to lift should be able to be completed with proper technique. Having to lose your technique would suggest the weight is too heavy.

I would recommend using the other two days of the week that you work out for cardiovascular and flexibility training. Try cross training, where you use more than one form of cardiovascular exercise such as walking/jogging, cycling, roller blading, etc. Also consider interval training, which involves alternating between easier to harder intensities throughout your cardiovascular workout. Again, being cautious not to raise your heart rate so high that you do not see a considerable amount of recovery one minute after the exercise is complete.

Alternating your strength and cardiovascular workout days should help your body recover from soreness so you can continue to see results.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail

Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Respiratory Therapists Say:

Beware The Indoor Air

Respiratory Therapist Offers Tips on Going 'Green'

Many common household products are going "green" to protect the indoor air from unhealthy toxins. According to Trudy Watson, from the American Association for Respiratory Care (AARC), people can take advantage of this trend by:

- Replacing household cleansers, detergents, and personal grooming products containing high levels of chemicals with products that are natural and eco-friendly. Many are fragrance-free.
- Using non-toxic paints, stains, and wood finishing products with no or low VOC (volatile organic compounds) ratings.
- Using natural products to eliminate household pests whenever possible, and minimizing the use of toxic pesticides.
- Using "green" building materials when remodeling or during new construction. Many control moisture, reduce the chance of mold/mildew growth, and produce low or no VOCs.

You can learn more about indoor air pollution and other lung health issues on the AARC's consumer web site, www.yourlunghealth.org.

comes in the form of products most people wouldn't associate with the air. "Indoor air quality can be compromised from products used to clean, decorate, and furnish our homes," says Watson. "Gases released from paints, carpets, cleaning products, paint strippers, and wood finishers can be very irritating to the respiratory system. Chemicals applied to clothing and shoes can also affect indoor air quality."

Watson says there are many things people can do to keep their indoor air clean and free of irritants. Most importantly, of course, is to keep your home smoke-free. From there, she recommends using HEPA filters on furnaces and vacuum cleaners, controlling moisture to prevent mold, using fragrance-free products, and using houseplants as natural air cleaners.

These days, people can also take advantage of new "green" products that are specially formulated to keep the air clean. "Green" products are those that are considered to be environmentally-friendly," says the registered respiratory therapist. "Many contain only natural substances proven non-toxic for the environment, while others release lower amounts of harmful gases into the air."

The key to better indoor air, says Watson, is to avoid products that can release toxic chemicals into your environment whenever you can, and be especially careful whenever you can't. "If you must use a hazardous product, always follow the manufacturer's guidelines for use of protective personal equipment or for limiting usage to adequately ventilated areas," emphasizes the respiratory therapist.

Respiratory Therapists (RTs) are specially trained and licensed respiratory health care professionals assisting physicians in diagnosis, treatment, and management of respiratory diseases. RTs provide care in hospitals, outpatient centers, physicians' offices, skilled nursing facilities, and patients' homes.

The American Association for Respiratory Care (AARC) is a not-for-profit, professional organization, consisting of 42,000 respiratory therapists, physicians, and other health care professionals. AARC is dedicated to assisting persons with respiratory diseases receive safe and effective respiratory care.

Health Hints

Smoke-Free For Life: Tips to Quit

(NAPS) — Your determination to give up tobacco doesn't have to go up in smoke, if you heed a few hints:

- Commit to quit. Set a quit date and stick to it.
- Clean house. Throw away all cigarettes and other smoking-related items such as ashtrays, lighters and matches. After you throw away your cigarettes, soak them with water so you can't get them out of the trash.
- Take it slow. Use over-the-counter nicotine-replacement therapy (gum, lozenges or the patch) that lets your body gradually reduce nicotine cravings to help in this process. Determine which one is best for you level of smoking and follow the directions for optimum results.

- Off to dreamland. When withdrawing from nicotine, a good night's sleep (a full eight hours) becomes even more important.
- Change your routine. Eliminate as many of the people, places and activities that triggered stress or made you crave a cigarette, such as coffee or alcohol.
- Sweat it out. A walk around the block or another form of exercise will ease your craving and help ease tension.

- Just your imagination. Create distractions or substitutes for your nicotine craving. Chew gum, suck on lollipops or hard candy or use toothpicks.
- Share the love. Tell your family and friends you're quitting and ask for their support. Focus on healthful habits and the freedom you are creating by kicking the habit.
- Patience is a virtue. If at first you don't succeed, try again. Don't beat yourself up if you are not successful the first time quitting. Research shows that only 9 percent of smokers stop for seven months or longer, and most ex-smokers require multiple quit attempts. Never give up...it's worth it to quit.

• Reach out for help. Call the National Cancer Institute Smoking Quitline at (877) 44U-QUIT and visit www.smokefree.gov. Or call (800) Quit-Now.

• Remember, smoking is one of the biggest risk factors for a heart attack as well as for stroke, lung cancer and emphysema.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

RATE YOUR SMILE

How would you rate your smile? Do you shy away from smiling when you are photographed? Are your teeth chipped, broken, or stained? Are your teeth overcrowded, or are there unsightly gaps between teeth? Would you feel more confidence if your smile were improved? These are all tough questions that only you can answer. If your honest responses to these questions reveal that your smile shows room for improvement, you owe it to yourself to schedule a consultation with the dentist, who can suggest ways to address problems with your teeth. You may be surprised at how easily and cost-effectively many dental and gum conditions may be corrected. If may even put a smile on your face.

We can give you a smile so beautiful, friends will comment on how young you look. A smile so alive, loved ones may smile more just because they're with you. A smile this brilliant opens hearts, closes deals and nurtures lifelong friendships. We provide a full range of dental treatments, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic dentistry. We promise every patient the most relaxing, stress-free dental visit possible. The dentist you choose makes all the difference in your smile. One dentist, and one phone call, really can make all the difference. Call 617-479-6220 today to schedule an appointment. ARIES (March 21 to April 19)

A recent spate of confusion regarding decision-making begins to clear up. But caution is still advised. Continue to check details. An old friend has important news.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're anxious to see your ideas move from concept to development. But trying to force the issue right now could backfire. Wait for movement to resume on the 11th.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your thoughts focused on the positive as you deal with an unexpected turn of events in a personal or professional relationship. This could be the start of a welcome change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Health matters take on added importance at this time. Deal with them before they interfere with your summer plans. A relationship that cooled off could soon warm up again.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While a few details involving upcoming decisions still need your attention, you fun-loving Felines can begin to spend more time enjoying your lively social life again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That long-sought-after career change could require you to move to another city. Weigh your decision carefully before either accepting or rejecting the offer out of hand.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace situation can be awkward for Librans who prefer to keep their problems private. But you might have to "tell-all" if you hope to see it resolved in your favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your financial situation starts to improve this week, you still need to be cautious about money matters. Avoid major obligations, for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your overall aspects continue to brighten, allowing you to tackle long-deferred challenges. A change in travel plans could work to your benefit.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things seem to be slowing down for the usually restless Sea Goat. But wouldn't a bit of respite be just what you need right now? Activity picks up by June 17.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Personal relationships take a positive turn for both married and single Aquarians. Professional commitments, however, could be complicated by newly emerging events.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A decision you thought was final might be reopened as new facts are discovered. This could lead to a short-term problem, but might ultimately prove beneficial.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your keen interest in pursuing global events could lead you into a career as a politician or reporter.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

In going through some notes, I found the following poem by an anonymous writer which I hope all fathers will read...

WALK A LITTLE PLAINER, DADDY

Said a little boy so frail,

I'm following in your footsteps

And I don't want to fail.

Sometimes your steps are very plain

So walk a little plainer, Daddy

For you are leading me.

I know that once you walked this way

many years ago!

And what you did along the way

I'd really like to know.

For sometimes when I am tempted

I don't know what to do

So walk a little plainer, Daddy

For I must follow you.

Someday when I'm grown up

You are like I want to be

Then I will have a little boy

Who will want to follow me

And I would want to lead him right

And help him to be true

So walk a little plainer, Daddy

For we must follow you.

RELIGION

Vacation Bible School At Fort Square Church

Fort Square Presbyterian Church, 16 Pleasant St., Quincy, announces it will hold Vacation Bible School for preschool to students who have completed fifth grade June 25-29 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Free supper will be offered at 5-15 p.m. Pre-registration will take place Saturday, June 23 at 10 a.m.

Adult Bible Study and English as a Second Language classes are also offered each evening. For more information, call 617-471-6806.

First Baptist Church Children Activities

First Baptist Church of Wollaston will host two opportunities for young people in the Quincy area this summer.

The Harmony Youth Chorus will be held July 9-13 from 9 a.m. until noon.

Boys and girls of all faiths and cultures who have completed grades 1-7 may register. Cost is $25 per child or $50 per family. Charles Dillingham from the Braintree Public School's music department will direct the chorus.

A second program, called "Tiny Treasures," will be held Aug. 6-10 from 9 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. The workshop will be directed by Jan Burton. Boys and girls ages 9-13 may register. Cost per child is $20. The group is limited so register early.

Each participant will assemble one end of a castle great hall to create either a storybook room or a wizard's room, making a table, benches, wall hangings and other castle items.

To register or for more information, call the church office at 617-472-0824.

Squantum Christian Fellowship Bible Activities

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children to its "Avalanche Ranch: A Wild Ride Through God's Word" July 16-20 at the Squantum School from 9 a.m. to noon. "This year, our church is a stampede of excitement," says Pastor Mike Fehan. "Our Avalanche Ranch program will provide fun and memorable Bible activities

for kids ages 3-11.

"Each day, they will sing catchy songs, act out a Bible story, enjoy some horseplay down Chuck Wagon chow, and make a variety of cow-poke crafts. Kids will also collect Memory Buddies daily, and make teddy bears for orphans in needy lands."

Pastor Fehan said the activities are exciting way for kids to learn more about God's love. "Each day at Showtime Roundup, parents can see a slide show of the kids' activities. We hope this adventure will get everyone wild about God!"

For more information, call Helen at 617-328-8771, or visit www.squantumct.org for a video clip and registration form.

Following the worship service there will be fellowship time in the Allen Parlor where light refreshments will be served.

All are welcome.

The church is handicapped accessible.

Catholic Women's Prayer Group

The Catholic Parishes of Quincy sponsor a monthly Catholic Women's Prayer Group.

The evenings provide an opportunity to deepen ones relationship with Christ and be supported by the presence of other faith-filled women. All are welcome.

The women's prayer group will hold its next meeting Tuesday, June 19 from 7 to 8:15 p.m. in St. Joseph's Rectory conference room.

This meeting will be the group's last gathering for the spring. Meetings will resume in the fall.

For more information, contact Sister Pat Boyle at 617-479-5400 (St. Ann's) or Dorothy Ruggiero at 617-472-6321 (St. Joseph's).

First Baptist Selected For Church Meeting

First Baptist Church of Wollaston has been selected to be one of 25 participants in a nationwide conference in support of small congregations June 20-28 at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, VA.

The annual Summer Collegium is funded by the "Making Connections" initiative of the Lilly Endowment, Inc., which enables the Seminary to offer it at no cost. The estimated cost per clergy participant is more than $15,000.

Participating clergy and their spouses/partners will spend nine days learning and renewing their appreciation for the small church by taking workshops led by small church experts.

Salvation Army Overnight Camp

The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, is accepting applications for children ages 6-12 to attend overnight camp at Camp Wollaston in Sharon June 26-July 2.

Leona C. McSeveney, 79

Homemaker

A funeral Mass for Leona C. (Smith) McSeveney, 79, of North Quincy, a homemaker, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. in Saint Agatha's Church, Milton.

Mrs. McSeveney died Sunday at the John Scott Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, Braintree.

Born in Boston, she had lived in North Quincy for 60 years.

She enjoyed spending time with her family especially summers on Cape Cod. Her family had a summer home on the Cape in the Sand Shores Association of Marston's Mills from 1965 to 1997.

She was a member of the Sheraton Tara Braintree Health Club for many years. She also enjoyed bowling and played in several leagues during the mid-1970s and early 1980s.

Mrs. McSeveney was very generous and donated to several causes throughout the years, including St. Jude's, the Heart Association, Diabetes and Cancer Funds.

She loved shopping, eating out at her favorite restaurants and watching television, including game shows such as "The Price is Right" and

LEONA C. McSEVENEY

"Wheel of Fortune."

She was a fan of professional tennis.

She also enjoyed playing scrabble with her grandchildren and listening to her favorite musicians including Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Johnny Mathis and Tony Bennett.

She is survived by her husband, John C. McSeveney of Quincy; three sons, John C. McSeveney, Jr. of Quincy, Stephen G. McSeveney of Quincy and Mark J.

McSeveney of Hanson; and three grandchildren.

Burial will be in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Jude's Children Research, P.O. Box 50, Memphis, TN 38105.

KOCH

FOR MAYOR

Believe in a Better Quincy

Leadership

Tom served under three mayors over the last 20 years, proving that he can bring people together, make tough decisions and work hard for the citizens of Quincy.

- As Executive Director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery over the last 12 years, Tom was the architect of the largest overhaul of our city's park system and the most extensive beautification program in Quincy history.
- As Quincy's Executive Secretary, he wrote budgets, built relationships and shepherded a series of projects from start to finish.
- As Council on Aging Director, he gained a deep understanding of the contributions of our seniors and expanded the department's transportation program.

Commitment

Tom learned early the values of true public service from his mother, Simone, and father, Park Commissioner and legendary Koch Club founder, Dick Koch: You work hard, you treat every person with respect, and you help those who need it.

Tom lives those values every day.

- In his father's tradition, Tom took over the city's annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, which today is one of Quincy's largest community events.
- Tom inspired a new sense of volunteerism in Quincy by coordinating the first Cleaner-Greener Day 18 years ago.
- A decade ago, he co-founded the Quincy ArtsFest, which has grown into one of the region's largest art festivals.

Integrity

Tom resigned his job as Executive Director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery, a job he loved, because he was concerned about the direction of our city. For 20 years and for three different mayors, Tom has shown day-in and day-out the good things government can do when it stands up for people, always keeps its door open, and treats every person, no matter who they are, with dignity and respect.

Dear Friends,

I am honored to run for mayor in the city I love, and I am so thankful for all the kind words over the last four months.

We're building a grassroots campaign based on a positive new vision for our city, and I ask you to join us as we work together toward a better Quincy.

Please contact me anytime at 617-773-KOCH, and visit our website to see the first installment of "A Better Quincy," our plan to get Quincy on the right track.

Construction Starts In Summer

Demo Begins For Concourse Second Phase

Ground was broken Tuesday for the second phase of the Quincy Concourse, the road that will link the Parkway to Quincy Center and Southern Artery (Route 3A).

But actual construction will not begin until sometime during the summer.

The ground-breaking ceremony took place at the site of the former Tanline building on the Parkway, the first to be demolished to make way for the concourse.

"This is an exciting day in Quincy and one that has been talked about for almost 30 years," said Mayor William Phelan. "This roadway is a vital development in downtown Quincy."

State and city officials watched as a wrecker began chewing on the former Tanline Building at 148 Parkway at 4 p.m.

At a brief ceremony, MassHighway Commissioner Luisa Paiewonsky congratulated Mayor William Phelan and the city's local and state representatives for their foresight in support of the Concourse project.

"You can't have a great state without great cities," Paiewonsky said, explaining her support of the project. MassHighway will cover the $1 million cost of building the roadway while the city will fund the nine land-takings on the Concourse route.

Among those present at the ceremony were Senator Michael Morrissey, Rep. Bruce Ayers, Council President Douglas Gutro and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

"The common denominator for any new development is transportation infrastructure and the Quincy Center Concourse will create a necessary component to revitalize downtown Quincy," Phelan said.

"One of the main reasons why Quincy Center has remained stagnant in the retail market is the lack of such infrastructure. It takes bold steps to create change and that is what we are doing."

The city will construct the new roadway with help from a $6 million federal earmark achieved by Sens. Ted Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman Bill Delahunt. The State Legislature also

Teachers Vote Today On New Contract

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy teachers will vote today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m. at Sterling Middle School on a five-year contract negotiated by their union and the city.

Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association (QEA) said the contract must be ratified by two thirds of the 890 members of the union.

The contract offer approved unanimously by the teachers' bargaining committee concludes 18-months of sometimes bitter bargaining between the city and teachers' union that culminated in a four day strike voted by the teachers' union on June 7.

Teachers returned to their classes on Thursday, June 14, when the city and union bargaining units reached agreement after a nearly all-night session that started June 12 and continued into the early hours of June 13.

Phillips said this week that the contract provides for 17% in wage hikes over a five year period during which his members' insurance contribution will increase from 10% to 20%. The mayor's office has not issued any formal statement regarding the contract offer.

One of the perks of this contract is the "No Reprisal" clause which prohibits the city from taking any action against striking teachers. In addition, both the city and the union will withdraw their legal actions filed against each other with the labor boards.

"We were more worried about reprisals at the local

DA Keating Joins Partners In Prevention

District Attorney William R. Keating recently announced his affiliation with Partners in Prevention, a program of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association.

Partners in Prevention seeks to enhance the health and wellness of youth in Quincy and throughout the Commonwealth. It does so by providing schools, parents, students, and professionals who work with youth with accurate information on a range of issues in order to promote healthy lifestyles among adolescents.

"One of my priorities as District Attorney has always been to work with other agencies and organizations to prevent crime and violence in our communities," Keating said. "I firmly believe that the wide reach of the MIAA, combined with the individual strengths of the provider agencies, will enhance the collaboration represented by Partners in Prevention and will make a positive difference in the lives of young people in Massachusetts."

Among the resources provided by Partners in Prevention is a list of speakers on various topics including substance abuse, eating disorders, drunk driving, sportsmanship and dating violence.

In addition, the organization sponsors wellness workshops throughout the year which inform educators of adolescent health issues.

District Attorney Keating's staff has been working on many of these issues in Norfolk County schools, including Quincy Public Schools, whose high schools sent groups of students to the DA's Youth Town Hall Meeting at Eastern Nazarene College earlier this spring. The DA's programs will be augmented through the resources collected under the Partners in Prevention umbrella. Along with other District Attorneys, Partners in Prevention counts among its members the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Massachusetts Brain Injury Association, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Partnership for Drug Free America.

Council Gives Final Approval To Pageant Field Track

The City Council Monday gave final approval for the $1 million bond needed to construct a new track at Pageant Field. Councillors had delayed final approval pending additional documents from the mayor's office.

On May 14, the nine councillors, acting as the Finance Committee, had unanimously approved the $1 million funding provided Phelan's office submit new information on design plans, cost estimates and full approval of the track project by the Adams family. Councillors also required approval by the Park and Recreation Board.

Councillors were satisfied with the documents presented by David Murphy, Mayor William Phelan's Director of Operations, prior to the vote. Members asked that the mayor's office provide regular updates throughout the construction project.

Murphy, also, announced that the Park and Recreation

Board had voted 6-0 earlier that evening to approve the new plan. Three board members were absent.

Related Story Page 15

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel C. Raymond asked how many trees will be destroyed for the track project and Murphy estimated that at least 12 trees, some extremely old, would be removed. Raymond asked that the replacement trees be of the same value and size as those removed.

Murphy suggested that such a policy would be difficult, if not impossible to execute. He noted the plan included the planting of some 57 trees and those plantings will "increase the shade factor at Pageant Field."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee called the tree discussion a new roadblock created to stall the track and said, "You'd have to get a Chinook helicopter into to move the root ball of a 150-year-old tree."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said that the tree at the field, and their individual value, were a significant issue. All councillors joined in voting a recommendation that special attention be paid to the uprooting and replacement of trees on site.

The unanimous vote limited the bond issue to covering the construction of a new track at Pageant Field. If the track can not be completed there, a new bond will have to be issued for a different site.

On Tuesday, Mayor Phelan thanked both the City Council and the Park Board for their unanimous support.

"We need to move forward as a community to complete the project," Phelan said, "the finished product will be an absolutely beautiful track facility that can be used by our entire community for exercise and enjoyment."

Phelan also said, "Let's keep moving forward together. The track community and our community as a whole, has waited for a state of the art-track in Quincy for decades. The new track could be an amenity that will improve the quality of life of all our residents. Imagine how many people will use the beautiful sight on a beautiful spring morning to exercise and socialize. It's pretty exciting."

City Council Cuts $21M From Budget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday cut over $21 million from Mayor William Phelan's proposed 2008-2009 budget before approving $229,787,286 for city expenditures next fiscal year.

The council acted after a month-long review by the Finance Committee of Mayor Phelan's proposed $250,844,657 budget. All nine councillors are members of the committee headed by Councillor John Keenan.

Keenan outlined the committee's budget recommendations which included a $19,691,983 cut in Phelan's Employee Benefits line.

Councillors agreed that cut with the understanding that the Employee Benefit account will be revisited in September after the city finalizes union contracts.

Any additional funding will be requested as appropriations, according to Keenan.

In presenting his proposed budget on May 7, Phelan requested $42 million for Employee Benefits but councillors reasoned that new union contracts and employee agreements will reduce the need for the full amount.

Councillors agreed they will fund Employee Benefits as needed as appropriations in the Fall.

For the same reason, City Council also cut the city's reserve for salaries by $1,348,069 pending the settlement of union contracts.

Also cut from the mayor's budget was $10,000 from the Unemployment Compensation account and $7,319 from the salary listed for Traffic Control. The $7,319 represents a month's salary for the city's Traffic Engineer whose position is currently vacant. The mayor has announced an appointment is imminent.

At the same meeting, councillors approved the ordinance allowing full funding of the police union contracts.

Round 1 To Police Chief In Union Vacation Fight

Police Chief Robert Crowley won a round Monday in his long-standing conflict with the Quincy Police Patrolmen's Association.

Judge Elizabeth Donovan in Norfolk Superior Court turned down the union's request for an injunction in its dispute over vacation time.

The union had sought relief from the chief's directive that forbade officers from taking vacations a day at a time outside the vacation period.

"It's not over by a long shot," said Bruce Tait, president of the union, which had filed for the injunction last Thursday.

"We plan to still seek arbitration. We went for the injunction first because this is a time-sensitive emergency. We're in the vacation period now."

"The city is just delaying the inevitable."

Actually, the union sought two injunctions, one against the ban on vacation days outside the vacation period, the other against a ban on personal days July 3 and 4.

The vacation period for police is June through September. The chief's ban is on taking single days off outside that period.

NURSING HOME WEEK was recently celebrated at Marina Bay Skill Rehabilitation and Nursing Center by Rosemary McLaughlin, Nursing Center Director, Can Nguyen, Executive Assistant to Mayor William Phelan; and Activities Director Lucia Treggiari.

Council Approves $1.37M For Three Fire Engines

City councillors Monday unanimously approved funding for the lease/purchase of three new fire engines at a cost of $1,137,000 over a period of five years.

Prior to the vote, Deputy Chief Gary Smyth outlined the need for the three pumpers which bring water and hose and equipment, as needed, to fires and accident scenes.

Smyth told councillors that the existing fire engines are more than 20 years old, have "mechanical fatigue and chronic air leaks" and do not meet national fire fighting standards. One of the major problems with the current vehicles is that the "jump seats are open," according to Smyth.

Currently, firefighters are subjected to weather, rain, snow and sleet, and do not have access to communication with the engine driver. "We're beginning to spend a lot of money on repairs," Smyth said.

According to the purchase agreement with Greenwood Emergency Vehicles, Inc. of Attleboro, the city will have a ten year warranty.

Councillors unanimously approved the lease/purchase agreement which will be financed at 4.5% interest by Honeywell Global Finance LLC and the first payment will be due in 12 months.

The case for consolidating your mortgage and home equity line into one loan right now

You had a great rate on your mortgage and didn't want to touch that. But there was something you needed or wanted money for. And adjustable home equity line rates were low-low-low. So you took one out. Now that line keeps adjusting up-up-up. You're feeling the squeeze and suffering with the squeeze. You are not alone. If you're worrying about where rates are going next and simply want to have the same mortgage payment every single month, consider consolidating your original mortgage and that home equity line into one new locked-in fixed rate 30-year loan while those rates are still near historic lows. Come see us and we'll help you figure out if consolidating is right for you. Or call Richard Coleman or Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On June 22, 1611, after spending a winter trapped by ice in present-day Hudson Bay, the starving crew of the Discovery mutinies against its captain, English navigator Henry Hudson, and sets him, his teenage son and seven supporters adrift in a small, open boat. Hudson and the eight others were never seen again.
- On June 19, 1885, the Statue of Liberty, a gift of friendship from the people of France to the people of the United States, arrives in New York City's harbor. Originally known as "Liberty Enlightening the World," the statue commemorated the Franco-American alliance during the American Revolution.
- On June 24, 1928, the rocket-powered Opel RAK 3 debuts on a section of railroad track near Hanover, Germany, and records a rail-speed record of 157 mph on its first run. The result of a rather odd experiment, the RAK 3 carried a caged cat as its driver. Tragically, on the car's second run, too many of its rockets fired at once and the car crashed, killing its feline pilot.
- On June 21, 1956, playwright Arthur Miller defies the House Committee on Un-American Activities and refuses to name suspected communists. Miller's defiance of McCarthyism won him a conviction for contempt of court, which was later reversed by the Supreme Court.
- On June 18, 1961, the Western radio drama "Gunsmoke" goes off the air. The show debuted in 1952 and moved to television in 1955. "Gunsmoke" ran on television for 20 years.
- On June 20, 1977, with a flip of a switch in Prudhoe Bay, crude oil from the nation's largest oil field begins flowing south down the trans-Alaska pipeline to the ice-free port of Valdez, Alaska. The steel pipeline winds through 800 miles of Alaskan wilderness, crossing three mountain ranges and hundreds of rivers and streams.
- On June 23, 1984, an auction of John Lennon's possessions raises $430,000. A guitar he played during his years with the Beatles sold for $19,000. Lennon was shot and killed by a deranged fan in 1980.

They're Really Young At Heart

Would like to have you meet five people who are really young at heart.

And, in body, too.

The five-all in their 90s-competed in the recent 25th Quincy Senior Olympics and together brought home a total of 19 medals, most of them gold.

Warren Kirkland, the oldest Senior Olympian at 93, had the honor of lighting the Olympian Torch with Mayor William Phelan to open the competition.

And then went on to personally rack up eight medals: seven of them gold in horseshoes, basketball free throw, half-mile walk, one-mile walk, softball throw, bowling and volleyball. And a silver medal in bocce.

He is captain of the Beechwood Life Center volleyball team. And playevery Wednesday and Friday-after a three-mile walk with the Walking Group.

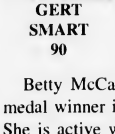

His four fellow nonagenarians did pretty well, too, in competition.

RUTH
90

Ruth Kundsins, 90, picked up four gold medals in the 50-yard breaststroke, 50-yard backstroke, 50-yard freestyle and the one-mile walk. She swims regularly in a Water Aerobics class.

Forrest Smith, 92, collected three medals: two golds in the javelin throw and darts and a silver in billiards. He volunteers four days a week in the Senior Center.

GERT
90

Gert Smart, 90, had three gold medals in horseshoes, basketball free throw and bowling. She volunteers three days a week at the Beechwood Center Lunch program and is a "Rocking Nanny" volunteer in the Infant Program.

Betty McCarthy, 90, was a gold medal winner in the one-mile walk. She is active with three-mile walks twice a week.

SHARRON
BEALS

"They're amazing," marveled Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center, co-sponsor of the Olympics with the city. "They are as sharp mentally as they are physically."

As for all the seniors competing this year, she adds:

"I personally was energized by the spirit that prevailed throughout the 10 days and the 25 events. Such enthusiasm. Such focus. Such commitment!"

LEGENDARY "FATHER BILL" is well on the way to recovery from those injuries suffered in a fall May 12 at his West Yarmouth home.

He, of course, is Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church, Quincy Center, and a founder of Father Bill's Place, the interfaith shelter named for him.

He suffered a fractured hip and a head injury and is now undergoing therapy at Mayflower Place Nursing Center in West Yarmouth.

"I feel good," he says. "Hope to be back home in a couple of weeks."

And he's itching to get back to work helping the homeless.

He and John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, are already planning the annual FoodFest fundraiser to be held July 31 at Marina Bay.

Last year's event raised $300,000 to help keep Father Bill's Place running.

"Got to get moving," he says.

Meanwhile, for those of you who would like to send Fr. McCarthy a card here's the address:

Mayflower Place Nursing Center, 579 Buck Island Road, West Yarmouth, MA 02673.

He'd be happy to hear from you.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE candidate Nick Puleo and his wife, Sarah, who were married last October, are excited about the purchase of their first home.

The house is on Acton Street in Wollaston and says Puleo: "This is the home where we will raise our children and they will be able to go to the Wollaston School down the street."

Puleo, past president and long-time officer of the Ward 5 Community Association was born and raised in Quincy. Sarah was born and raised in Dallas, Tex.

And cupid introduced them while they were attending Northeastern University.

PERSONAL: Thank you, Terry and Don Calabro, Vincent Del Vecchio, Dorothy Giarusso and Gerald Sharkey, for all those kind words. Readers like you make it all worthwhile.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS THE PLANT THAT HAS EVERY FACILITY FOR SAWING CUTTING AND POLISHING GRANITE MONUMENTS AND BUILDING WORK. DEACON BROS. QUINCY MASS.

THIS IS A 1911 real photo trade postcard used by the Deacon Brothers Granite Company that was on Centre Street in South Quincy. Begun in 1889 as Cole & Deacon, William Deacon soon bought out his partner and brought in his brother Walter. They were both immigrants from England where they had learned the stone cutting trade with their father. The company operated under the Deacon Brothers name until WWII, even though Walter had left in 1906 to start his own company and William died in 1923. This view of the plant and its employees is from across Centre Street at the end of Trafford Street showing the expansive operation on almost an acre of land. The site is now home to Schlager's Auto Body Repair shop. Deacon Bros. was only one of dozens of stone cutting companies that operated in South Quincy for over one hundred years. Today, there are only a few still in business. An example of the company's work can be seen in the beautiful Celtic cross marking William Deacon's grave at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quality of Life Issues

As the Quincy City Council begins to deal with quality of life issues that negatively impact our daily lives in our neighborhoods, hopefully, City Hall will take a good hard look at those issues such as hard-topping lawns for cars, as there is no question, Quincy has more cars on the road compared with 20 years ago.

As I walk around Wollaston Center, I see a vital retail district still working. The same can't be said for Norfolk Downs. Everyone focuses on Downtown Quincy and the Quincy Concourse, but the real life of Quincy won't be found in Downtown Quincy.

The polls seem to think the Quincy Concourse will rebuild Downtown Quincy, it won't. It will be a by-pass road, taking folks from Boston to Braintree and beyond.

South Shore Plaza, 47 or so years ago was the death knoll for areas of commerce like Downtown Quincy and also for such retail areas in other cities, north, west and south of Boston.

City Councillor Kevin Coughlin has been concerned about the little sores that lead to bigger problems, not just downtown, but in his own Montclair neighborhood as well.

There is still a place for Quincy in the 21st century, but the place isn't bringing Shopperstown USA back to life. Quincy can still be the Hub of the South Shore. New housing is sprouting up all over the city. Just take a look at the Neponset River.

The Lee Kennedy project between the bridge and the Red Line tracks will be a positive for Quincy, as will another project on the other side of the bridge next to the Best Western Quincy Bay Inn.

Upscale housing will help the city's economy, but the city councillors can't forget about the poor and working families in need of real affordable housing. Otherwise, they will leave for greener pastures elsewhere.

There's community policing and there's community police patrols. However, the best community policing is you and I working to improve the status of our city.

Whether or not Quincy is the safest city in Massachusetts, according to the FBI, is secondary. The real stat that counts is whether or not ordinary folk see Quincy fitting into their lives.

Retiring Teacher Focuses On The Positive

In two weeks, after 35 years of working at North Quincy High School, I will be retiring.

What should be a happy and nostalgic time for me, in my final year, has been a period of turmoil. This will be the third time in my career, that we, as teachers, have gone through an emotional battle over what many others are given automatically—a raise.

3 Residents Receive Trinity Honors

Three Quincy residents have received faculty honors for the fall semester at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

Once again, we are "dutifully" working without a contract—somehow the public thinks of us as semi-missionary workers who will continue to go to work daily—no matter the situation—"for the good of the children."

The never ending emotional blackmail that traps us in our classrooms to the relief, well, sadly and unfortunately for us, the "children" do not pay for our bills, tuitions, mortgages, etc. We do.

We have attempted to negotiate respectfully for a year now. I am dismayed at the results. I watch young teachers, observe their frustration and fear, hoping that they will not leave for better paying communities—and not blaming them if they did. Our union and building reps advised us to initiate a "slow down." We have.

We cannot enter the building early, or leave late. This has paralyzed many of us whom for years have prepared on our own time before and after school without a second thought to not being paid. Trust me, this city cannot afford our overtime hours if we could submit them for payment.

I am tired of hearing the comments that "go" with this profession—"how easy teachers have it," (try it for a month, please) and "how we have summers off" (I say this slowly—we are paid for the days that we work, only!). Most of us have and do work summers and how we should get "real jobs or try working in the 'real world.'" I have done both.

This job is just as tiring. If educating our youth under circumstances that would never be tolerated in the "outside" business world is not "real enough" then I don't know what is.

As I prepare to leave, I will try to focus on the positive side of teaching—the joy and satisfaction of educating and the incredible rapport and support system of my fellow colleagues—two factors that keep us going each day.

A USED BOOK SALE organized by fourth graders at the F.W. Parker School, North Quincy, raised over $200 for new books for the school. Leftover books were packed for the Atlantic Middle School students who shipped them to Zambia, Africa.

Parker School Students Activities Promote Reading

Students at the F.W. Parker School, North Quincy, recently celebrated reading by participating in several projects designed to promote reading enjoyment.

In one effort, the students participated in the school's "Read Across America" project by reading 39,000 minutes (650 hours). In addition, students created their own hats for Crazy Hat Day which honored children's author Dr. Suess.

Also, the fourth grade students in Ms. Kate Kelly's class organized and sold used books for 25 cents each to promote reading at their school.

The students' projects raised $210 for the Parker School Media Center. All leftover books were sent to Atlantic Middle School where students are sending books to Zambia, Africa.

CRAZY HAT DAY was a big day for students at North Quincy's F.W. Parker School as they created and exhibited lively creations featuring brown bags, balls, and feathers.

QHS Teacher Maria Cash Accepted To Summer Mathematics Institute

Maria Cash, a first-year mathematics teacher at Quincy High School, will participate in Boston University's Program in Mathematics for Young Scientists (PROMYS) for Teachers.

The purpose of PROMYS for Teachers is to support current efforts in Massachusetts to enhance problem-solving and open-ended explorations in high school mathematics classrooms. PROMYS engages a select group of middle and high school teachers in intensive mathematical exploration.

Over the course of six weeks this summer, PROMYS teachers develop many classical results in number theory. This experience is enriched by a supportive community of other teachers, high school students, graduate students and research faculty.

The program fosters new insights into the nature of mathematical investigations as participants practice the habits of mind that are at the core of creative mathematics. Academic year workshops help teachers translate the summer experience into fundamental change in their own classrooms.

The Massachusetts Mathematics Curriculum Framework calls for exactly this kind of exploration. It requires a shift away from solving routine problems to problem-solving as the focus of mathematics programs. Indeed, one of the Frameworks' guiding principles is that students should explore mathematical ideas in ways that help them maintain their enjoyment and curiosity about mathematics. Accordingly, PROMYS participants must work beyond their centers of competence and push the limits of their knowledge. The PROMYS community provides a rich support network so that teachers can develop as mathematics learners.

"I am very much looking forward to this experience," said Mrs. Cash, a 2006 graduate of Clemson University in South Carolina. "Number theory was my favorite course in college. I look forward to meeting people who share my enthusiasm for teaching mathematics. Most of all, it will be exciting to bring what I learn back to my Quincy High School classroom."

N.Q. Catholic Women Honor 9 Past Presidents

The Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy honored nine of its past presidents at a recent luncheon at the Fox & Hound Restaurant, Quincy.

Chairwoman Priscilla Langille presented each former president with a token of appreciation. Rev. John O'Brien of Sacred Heart parish and Rev. James McGowan attended the event.

Past presidents honored were: Mrs. Donald Blake, Mrs. Fred Casey, Mrs. Howard Crowley, Mrs.

Thomas McNamara, Mrs. William Moore, Mrs. John Mullaney, Mrs. Charles Sheedy, Mrs. James Timilty and Mrs. Joseph Sullivan.

The club will honor outgoing president Mrs. Kate Shannon this week at The Quincy Market.

Five Quincy Residents Graduate Fitchburg State

Five Quincy residents received degrees from Fitchburg State College at the college's 111th commencement exercises. Alumnus Peter H. Reynolds, founder and CEO of FableVision, addressed the graduates. FableVision is an award-winning children's media company.

Bachelor's degrees were awarded to Ashley K. Nee of North Quincy and Amy Orlando of Quincy. Kristen M. Molinski, Alycia N. Sorrentino and Kate Southworth, all of Quincy, earned Master's degrees in education.

Diane DiNocco Married To Mark Marrese

A reception at Florian Hall in Dorchester followed the wedding of Diane M. DiNocco of West Roxbury and Mark F. Marrese of West Roxbury. Rev. Jack Ahern officiated at the ceremony at St. Ann Church, Wollaston.

The bride is the daughter of Blanche C. DiNocco of Quincy and the late Robert E. DiNocco. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Marrese of Bridgewater.

Karen Joyce of Dorchester was the Matron of Honor. Bridesmaids were Dawn DiNocco and Nancy Marrese. Alyssa Marrese was the flower girl.

Christopher Marrese was Best Man. Ushers were David DiNocco, Gregory Butner, and Dino D'Emilia. Ring-bearer was Ryan DiNocco.

Rene Rancourt sang both the American and Canadian national anthems at the reception as a surprise wedding present from the bride to her husband. Rancourt sings the national anthem before the Bruins games at TD BankNorth Garden.

Instead of reception favors, the couple made a donation to the Floating Hospital Children's Cancer Center where the bride was treated for ovarian cancer in 1989 at the age of 13. A teal colored pin was wrapped around each scroll with a teal ribbon. Teal symbolizes ovarian cancer.

MR. and MRS. MARK MARRESE

The bride graduated from North Quincy High School, Laboure School, and University of Massachusetts, Boston. She is employed by Bridgewater Goddard Park Medical Associates.

The groom graduated from Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High School and Bridgewater State College. He is employed at Meditech.

After a wedding trip to Walt Disney World, the couple live in West Roxbury.

QRTA Awards $146,050 In Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) awarded $146,050 to 54 seniors graduating from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

It brings to $1,369,400 the total amount and the number of recipients to 660 since 1981.

The 26th annual awards ceremony was held in the Sawyer Center at the Beechwood Knoll School presided over by QRTA President Arthur Foster.

Nine of this year's recipients received $8,000 Harry A. and Louisa P. Beede Scholarships. Ten received $2,500 John W. Walsh Scholarships established in honor of the former North Quincy High School principal and Quincy Point Junior High teacher, by his son, John W. Walsh, Jr.

Beede, long-time principal of the Broad Meadows Middle School and his wife bequeathed $1.5 million to the Quincy Retired Teachers Association for scholarships.

Foster said the interest from donation covers the

Dick Lombardi Honored With Richard J. Koch Award

Long-time Quincy Babe Ruth President and coach Dick Lombardi was awarded this year's Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award at last Saturday's Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

"Dick's dedication to Quincy's young people and the entire community over the last 20 years is a wonderful testament to all of the great things about Quincy," said Flag Day Chairman Tom Koch. "He has given his energy, his time, and his heart in countless ways over the years without fanfare or ever seeking recognition. It is time he is recognized."

Lombardi, a lifelong Quincy resident, started coaching Babe Ruth baseball in 1990. In 1993, he was named Quincy Babe Ruth President, a job he still holds. Lombardi was the driving force behind Quincy's successful hosting of the National Babe Ruth World Series in 2003 and 2005, two of the biggest sporting events in recent Quincy history.

As a coach, Lombardi led Quincy Babe Ruth teams into two New England Regional Tournaments in 1997 and 2001 and five state tournaments. He was recently inducted into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame as a youth coach.

Lombardi was also an active member of the Quincy High Football Parents Club, serving as the club's treasurer for nine years.

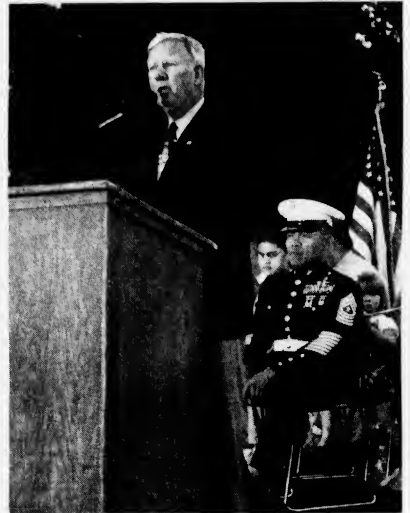

A 1962 graduate of Quincy High School and a U.S. Navy veteran, Lombardi lives in Adams Shore with his wife, Connie. In November the couple will celebrate their 42nd wedding anniversary with their two sons, Rich, 37, and Mike, 31.

"Quincy is fortunate to have so many great organizations for our children, and it is only because of tireless volunteers like Dick Lombardi who make it possible," said Koch. "Dick is a great husband, father, and friend. We're proud to give him the award this year."

The Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award is given annually by the Flag Day Committee to someone who displays a lifelong commitment to young people in Quincy. The award is named in honor of Richard J. Koch, who served as the city's park commissioner for 25 years and founded the Koch Club youth sports and charitable organization and Quincy's Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

Doug Gutro To Seek Ward 5 Fourth Term

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro has announced he will seek reelection to a fourth term this fall.

Gutro, who is also city council president, cited "a strong record on citywide issues as well as neighborhood initiatives and a solid reputation of responsiveness to resident concerns."

"I hope to earn the continued trust and confidence of the people of my district to serve as a voice of pragmatism and integrity on the city council," he said.

"I've prided myself on being a reliable and responsive advocate for the people I represent."

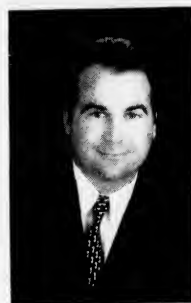

An advocate of Wollaston Beach improvements, Gutro said: "This summer, Wollaston Beach will realize long-awaited investments that will make it more pedestrian friendly, bike friendly and family friendly."

Gutro is also credited with being a leading force in the creation of the Friends of Wollaston Beach Reservation, a group dedicated to organizing events, cleanups, plantings as well as advocacy along the beach.

"I am tremendously proud to play a role in the creation of an organization that will undoubtedly serve as the future stewards of this our Quincy's most widely visited recreation destination," he said.

Regarding Quincy Center, Gutro said: "I firmly believe that this year's city council actions have set the stage for a dramatic revitalization of our downtown."

The council approved a new Urban Development District, a $30 million District Improvement Finance package, and authorized the eminent domain takings of several buildings to allow for the new cross town roadway.

DOUG GUTRO

In 2006, Councillor Gutro established a special city council committee on energy efficiency and renewable energy sources, which brought needed attention to this important fiscal and environmental issue.

This spring, the committee helped to shape a $32 million energy performance contract that the city of Quincy signed with Honeywell International for a program to reduce energy usage and water consumption in the city's 40 schools and municipal buildings without a dime of new tax dollars.

On neighborhood initiatives, Gutro said, he has:

- Called on the administration to plant 2,000 new trees by 2012.

- Advanced a proposal to support a new state law seeking to hold utilities accountable to remove double telephone poles.

- Co-authored a new law regarding door-to-door salespeople that holds the employers of unlicensed "hawkers and peddlers" accountable.

- Proposed a new law to ensure that news vending machines are properly placed and well maintained.

- Supported funding for new roads, fire trucks, police cruisers, as well as capital improvements to neighborhood schools, fire houses and public buildings.

- Advocated strongly for marsh restoration, pond and park improvements and flood relief in his district.

"Just as informed decisions on the city council floor determine the fiscal health, quality of life and wise growth of our community, I recognize that the actions of reliable and responsive ward councillors are equally important in protecting and improving our city's neighborhoods," Gutro said.

"I take these responsibilities seriously and value the privilege of representing the people of Ward 5."

Quincy Girl Rescues Missing Turtle

Ashlyn Grace Frank, 9, was playing at Wollaston Beach on Memorial Day, when she spotted something odd trying to climb its way out of the salt water.

Sensing that something wasn't right, Ashlyn waded into the water to investigate and discovered a turtle trying to make its way onto the large rocks on the shoreline.

"I'd never seen a turtle in that water before," she said.

She rescued the turtle and carried it back up the beach and showed it to her babysitter, Dorothy Graham of Quincy. By coincidence, Ms. Graham had just read a newspaper story about two turtles named Tony and Carmela, which were missing from the Philips Old Colony House Restaurant in Dorchester.

Graham called the Old Colony House and the general manager came out and identified the turtle as one of the ones that had gone missing.

"It never occurred to me that this was a famous turtle," Frank said.

When she returned the turtle to the restaurant, the manager rewarded her with a gift certificate. The Philips Old Colony House further honored Ashlyn by renaming the rescued turtle, Frank.

How the turtle, which had been outside the restaurant, wound up on Wollaston

Beach is not known, but what is known is that the turtle is a fresh water creature and never would have survived in the ocean if Ashlyn had not removed him as quickly as she did.

While this is the first turtle that Frank has ever rescued, she has been working on behalf of animals for several years. In 2005, she and her friends opened up a lemonade stand in her neighborhood to raise money for pets left homeless by Hurricane Katrina. Their lemonade stand raised more than $500. Ashlyn and her friends gave this money to a representative from the Humane Society of the United States.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, June 10, at approximately 10:25 p.m., Officer Nancy Coletta was working the detail at Stop & Shop on Newport Avenue when the manager summonsed her to one of the registers.

The manager stated the shopper at register 19 was attempting to purchase food items using a fraudulent $100 American Express Travelers' Check. The manager said she recognized the check was bogus because the hologram of a Trojan soldier head on the right side of the check faced the opposite way of the head on the other corner. She knew that both heads should both face the same way. In addition, she stated the color of the check was too dark.

The manager gave the check to the store's Loss Prevention/Security Officer so that he could contact American Express to confirm that the check was fraudulent. During this time, Officer Coletta questioned the suspect about the check, who appeared very nervous, with his bottom lip quivering.

When asked if he was with anyone, the suspect stated he was with his girlfriend and she was in a blue Honda parked in front of the store. When asked where he got the check, the suspect stated, "My friend gave it to me," identifying his friend as Larry. When asked why Larry gave him a $100 check, the suspect said, "I don't know - he's my friend."

The Loss Prevention Officer returned and told the officer the American Express Cheque Verification Office confirmed the check was a fake, providing additional ways to show it was bogus. Officer Coletta directed the suspect to step inside the loss prevention office. Once seated, the suspect was again asked where he got the check and he responded that his friend "Frank" gave it to him.

Officer Coletta sought identification of the suspect, who gave a name and date of birth - adding that he did not have a Social Security number - even though he was 18 years old. As warrants were being checked for the suspect, Officer Coletta requested back-up and Officers Pat Watkins and Mike Kelly were dispatched. As Officer Watkins came into the loss prevention office, another male came in looking for his friend.

Officer Watkins instructed this man to sit down on the stairs outside the office. The suspect and his friend did not have any warrants. Officer Steven Kelly arrived on scene and he checked out the blue Honda in the parking lot, which had two men sitting in it, but no girlfriend. They did not have warrants and the car was properly registered.

LT. DAN MINTON

Based on the above information, Officer Coletta decided to place the suspect under arrest. Officer Watkins asked the suspect to stand up and as the suspect did this he lunged at Officer Watkins and the store security officer, knocking them back into Officer Coletta and then into the wall and desk area. The suspect swung his arms wildly, striking Officer Coletta in the face just below her left eye. The suspect also struck Officer Watkins and the security officer numerous times in the head, chest and arms. He then attempted to run through Officer Watkins and the security officer while flailing his arms and screaming.

As he did this, he kicked Officer Coletta in the right knee and the security officer in the upper left leg area. The suspect then attempted to run from the office but was hauled down in the hallway, still punching, kicking and fighting.

The store manager ran over to help and he was struck in the upper body area and in the knee by the suspect as he tried to escape. At this time, Officers Kelly and John McGowan arrived and the officers were able to subdue the suspect and put him in handcuffs. The suspect was escorted from the store as he continued to scream, swear and resist to the awaiting cruiser.

While in the cruiser, the suspect attempted to kick out the windows. The suspect did damage part of the cruiser's interior. The police wagon was called and transported the suspect to jail. Once at the station, the suspect, and 18-year-old Boston resident, was charged with: two counts of assault and battery on a police officer; three counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (foot); possession of a forged document, uttering a forged document, knowingly resisting arrest and malicious damage to a motor vehicle.

Nice work!

RECENT SCAM: A Kansas resident contacted the Quincy Police to report he was in the process of taking out a loan through the internet with a Quincy-based company and after sending a deposit via wire of $1,060, he has not heard from the company. The victim sent the money using a "Wal-Mart Money-gram."

Officer John O'Donnell investigated the call and determined there is an actual business at the address provided, but it was not the loan company that the victim sent money. The business owner at the address told the officer he reported the loan company had used his business address in the past to scam people.

The Attorney General's office and the Norfolk County District Attorney's office are both investigating.

Best bet: Research the company and/or speak with friends or family that may be able to refer you to a reputable company. The internet is rampant with unscrupulous offers. In this case, the victim looked for the best loan rate, which was probably too good to be true and is now out over a $1,000.

"To control taxes, we need new development in areas that can sustain development, not in our neighborhoods," said Phelan. "In or-

Fundraiser To Benefit Karen Boussy To Be Held Saturday At QYC

On Saturday night, family and friends of Karen Boussy will be hosting a fundraising benefit at the Quincy Yacht Club from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight to help her in her time of need.

Boussy, while living in New Orleans, lost her home and most of her personal belongings when Hurricane Katrina hit. Shortly after moving home to Houghs Neck to live with her parents, Tom and Barbara Boussy, Karen was diagnosed with breast cancer.

She has undergone surgery and is presently going through chemotherapy before moving onto intense radiation therapy.

Her friends and family have organized this benefit to help defray some of Karen's expenses and to bring her some peace and hope. The event will include a DJ, a silent auction and many raffle items.

Tickets may be purchased at the door on Saturday. Cost is $15 per person or $25 per couple.

To make a donation, purchase tickets or for further information contact Erin Quigley at (617) 472-9496 or Clare Barrett at (617) 328-8009.

Dunkin' Donut Food Drive Underway

Dunkin' Donuts Franchisees Victor and Octavio Carvalho are teaming up with the Germantown Neighborhood Center (GNC) to collect non-perishable food items for the local GNC Food Pantry for the second year in a row.

Starting this Sunday through Labor Day participating Dunkin' Donuts stores will be accepting non-perishable food items. With the need for food at its highest in Massachusetts, the Carvalho's hope to collect enough donations to replenish the supply in the GNC Food Pantry.

"In our inaugural year, we were excited to donate a significant amount of food," said Victor Carvalho. "This year, we hope to donate even more to the people who need it most. Octavio and I hope to carry on this annual initiative and continue to donate a substantial amount of food every year."

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a private, non-profit organization. The programs spearheaded by Kathy Quigley, Director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center supports families of low to moderate income who are in need by providing nutritious meals and gifts, as well as confidential advocacy, crisis intervention and counseling services to area residents.

The Bosse School of Music (BSM) in Weymouth will hold an Open House on Sunday, June 24 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at its new school facility at 998 Middle Street., Weymouth.

Professor Jon Finn of the Berklee College of Music will present free solo performances during the event as will student and faculty who plan ensemble and solo performances.

In addition, there will be a raffle for a brand-new electric guitar.

The school is still located in the Middle Street Place Complex but has moved to the other side of the complex. The new location offers state-of-the-art facilities for its students, including a 32-track digital recording studio, an acoustically designed concert hall and 14 sound-proof private lesson rooms.

In addition, Ron Bosse announced that BSM has expanded its faculty of college-degreed professionals. The new facility also includes an on-site bookstore featuring musical accessories and the latest most comprehensive instructional method books available.

Bosse said the BSM has gained immense popularity from South Shore residents due to its "myriad of offerings, its faculty and inspiring atmosphere. BSM offers private instruction for all instruments and voice, ensembles, scholarships, vacation programs, concerts and master classes."

As a result, Bosse said that BSM serves students of all ages and levels from Quincy and all over the South Shore, including Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham, Milton, Cohasset, Holbrook, Norwell, Scituate, Randolph, Hanover, Marshfield, Abington, Whitman and Bridgewater.

Additional information is available by calling 781-337-8500 or visiting BSM on the web at www.bosseschoolofmusic.com.

YOUR FEET AND YOUR HEALTH

Many chronic health problems first show themselves in the feet. Diabetes and arthritis, as well as circulatory problems, develop their earliest symptoms in the feet. Therefore, it is important to see your podiatrist at the first sign of any foot problems. To keep your feet and body healthy, walking is the best all-around exercise. Arthritis, which is the No. 1 cause of disability in the United States, can greatly limit what many people are able to do. It affects approximately 7 million Americans. The average person takes between 8,000 and 10,000 steps a day, which adds up to 115,000 miles in a lifetime — enough to walk all the way around the earth four times.

Some of the early signs in the feet of diabetes, arthritis, and circulation diseases include dry skin, brittle nails, numbness, discoloration, slow healing sores, or a combination of these. If you notice these symptoms, call us for an appointment at 781-986-3668 for a diagnosis and treatment plan. In addition, we carry a line of comfortable shoes for diabetics, which we expertly fit here in the office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. And be sure to ask us about the Medicare Therapeutic Shoe Bill. For those who qualify, Medicare annually pays 80% of the cost of a pair of shoes specifically designed and made for the diabetic foot. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Approximately 5% of Americans have toe problems each year.

Protecting Homes From Hurricanes

(NAPS) — In a battle between homeowners and hurricanes, who would win? Americans residing along the South and East Coasts may find out during the 2007 hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to November 30.

While the relative calm of last year brought a total of five hurricanes to the United States, this year may see 17 tropical storms, of which nine could strengthen into hurricane with winds of at least 74 miles per hour, according to forecaster Tropical Storm Risk.

The National Hurricane Center for the National Weather Service (NWS) is the primary source of weather data, forecasters and warnings in the United States says homeowners should be informed and prepared. The NWS recommends homeowners verify that their homes meet current building code requirements for high winds, one of the many components associated with vicious Category 3 hurricanes and above. NNWS says structures built to meet or exceed current building code high-wind provisions have a much better chance of surviving violent windstorms.

Stronger Homes — Homeowners can strengthen the exterior of their homes to prevent wind from entering and tearing large openings through better choices in the new construction phase. According to tests performed at Texas Tech University, walls built with insulated concrete forms (ICFs) — hollow foam forms or panels used to hold concrete in place — are less likely to suffer high-wind damage than conventional wood-framed houses.

Solid concrete-reinforced walls built with ICF option Fold-Form, produced by building science technology leader Owens Corning, have been proven to provide exceptional protection against flying debris from winds as high as 250 miles per hour, when compared to conventional framed walls or hollow concrete block walls. As a frame of reference, FEMA states that historical major hurricanes, such as Hurricane Katrina, have achieved landfall wind speeds of 140 mph in southeast Louisiana.

"Homes built with ICFs provide homeowners with sustainable structures capable of withstanding extreme weather conditions," says Dr. Ronald Zollo, professor of civil and architectural engineering at the University of Miami and a licensed professional engineer. "They're easier to clean up after hurricane weather or flooding and provide the homeowner with moisture resistance in the walls themselves, when combined with appropriate interior finishes. Those utilizing ICFs can also expect greater energy efficiency due to added thermal protection."

Fighting Winds — The superior protection offered by ICFs is also backed up by the Insulating Concrete Form Association (ICFA), in conjunction with the Wind Science and Engineering Research Center at Texas Tech University, which conducted laboratory research to test the strength of ICFs. The test found that the forms had the weight and mass to resist the impact of wind-driven debris at over 100 mph.

According to Dr. Zollo, "In the future, I think we'll see faster recovery times for communities built with ICFs than those that are built without."

Additional Use — "While ICFs meet some of the United States' most strict building codes and are up to nine times stronger than traditional wood frames, they're not just for hurricane protection," says Jeff Van Sloun, business leader, Fold-Form. "We're seeing a dramatic increase in consumer demand throughout the entire United States for building products that are greener, offer greater energy efficiencies, air and moisture management and contribute to greater comfort levels by reducing noise in the home."

To learn more about the benefits of ICFs before, during and after hurricane season, contact an area builder or visit the Web site www.foldform.com.

Avoid These Potential Electrical Hazards

(NAPS) — Electrical safety in and around the home is no accident. These tips from the Electrical Safety Foundation International will help to remind you that hidden dangers can lurk in the most enjoyable environments. Improperly placed metal ladders that come into contact with overhead power lines can be deadly, as can power cords that accidentally dip into water puddles.

To help keep you and your family safe, here is a checklist that will guide you:

- Use appliances and equipment according to the manufacturer's instructions.

- Replace damaged electrical equipment or have it repaired at an authorized repair center.

- Make sure power strips, cords and surge suppressors are designed to handle the loads for their intended use. Avoid overloading circuits by plugging too many items into the same outlet.

- Use ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI) protection when working where water is near electricity to protect against electric shock.

- Make certain that an independent testing laboratory such as Underwriters Laboratories (UL), Canadian Standards Association (CSA) or ETL SEMKO (ETL) has approved all products and equipment.

- Add protection by installing a new electrical safety device — an arc fault circuit interrupter (AFCI) — to detect and stop electrical arcs that can cause fires. Most breakers and fuses do not detect arcs.

- Avoid contact with power lines by being aware of the location of power lines and keeping a distance of at least 10 feet between you and power lines to avoid arcs.

QCAP Sponsoring Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., will sponsor two free first-time homebuyer workshop sessions Saturday, July 14 and July 28 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The workshop will be held at 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center, in the fourth floor conference room.

Workshop speakers are professionals representing different real estate fields. Participants receive a workbook, which contains valuable references that pertain to homebuying.

Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a pre-requisite for down-payment cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information, call Ann Marie Casey at 617-479-8181 ext. 119.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with South Shore Savings Bank, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, June 25 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, June 30, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop, open to all Massachusetts residents, will be held at South Shore Savings Bank, 1530 Main St.,

Weymouth.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person.

For more information, call (617) 770-2227 ext. 31.

Reverse Mortgage Explained

Ed Barrett, a reverse mortgage specialist, will discuss his specialty on the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 1 p.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Getting More Green Out Of A Home

(NAPS) – Building a “greener” house can help boost a home’s value, help it stand out in even the most crowded of housing markets and cut energy costs.

In fact, a recent study from the National Association of Home Builders found that 63 percent of green home owners report lower operating and maintenance costs as the key motivation behind buying a green house.

Fortunately, builders and developers are catching on to the benefits of environmentally friendly homes, with 40 to 50 percent of houses built in 2010 expected to be green.

But if you’re not planning on building a new home, you can still join the green revolution. Incorporating a few Earth-friendly products into a project – such as roof tiles made from clay and concrete – can make a big difference. The Tile Roofing Institute (TRI) provides this look at five general areas in which tile roofing may earn points toward a home’s overall green rating:

Building Products

Many green building programs cite the use of durable products as the way to increase a home’s green rating. Concrete and clay roof tiles are extremely durable and tend to require less long-term maintenance when compared to alternate products, such as asphalt, shake or metal roofing.

Energy Efficiency

Energy efficiency is a staple of green building programs. Concrete and clay roof tile may contribute to the points for a home’s building envelope, as well as earning credit for a low-energy cooling design with its “cool roofing” attributes. Tile’s thermal mass and sub-tile ventilation can reduce a home’s heat transference by up to 40 percent, and in some instances with clay tile by up to 70 percent.

Stay Local

Green programs often award points for using materials made locally. Many manufacturer members of the TRI find that much of their products stays within a 500-mile radius from where it is made.

Nontoxic Materials

Clay and concrete products such as tile roofing can earn points toward a home’s green rating, as they off-gas virtually no noxious fumes. As a rule, concrete tile is composed of water, sand, and portland cement, and clay tile is composed of clay and water – neither of which emits toxic vapors once they’re cured at the manufacturing facility.

Building Site Recycling

If broken, roof tiles are 100 percent recyclable, as they can simply be crushed and worked back into the production process. Additionally, tiles broken or found to be out of tolerance at the manufacturing facility, as well as the water used to make the tiles, can be recycled and used again to make new tiles.

For more information, visit www.tilerooting.org.

Choosing Materials To Make The Most Of Your Time, Budget

(NAPS) – When it comes to outdoor wooden structures, such as decks, gazebos, sheds and fences, a successful do-it-yourself project begins with choosing the right building materials.

To know what materials you should choose, ask yourself the following questions:

- How much do I want to spend?

The cost of construction varies depending on the type of materials used.

For example, composite lumber can cost twice as much as treated wood. Also, fasteners required for outdoor use tend to cost more than fasteners for indoor use. These costs should be factored into your budget.

- How long do I plan to use my final product?

Choose your building materials based on how you plan to use your project and how long you want it to last.

Many structures, such as decks, are built for long-term use. The manufacturer’s warranty can offer a clue for how long to expect building materials to perform.

For example, Ecolife, a new originally stabilized and preserved treated wood product, offers improved weathering performance compared to traditional treated wood. The product also comes with a limited warranty, while warranties for composite lumber typically cover only 10 years.

- How can I be sure that my building materials will stand the test of time?

To be sure your materials will last, look for materials inspected or certified by a third party.

The American Lumber Standard Committee accredits agencies that inspect treated wood, ensuring that the wood meets industry standards.

Inspected treated wood is marked or tagged with information such as the name of the company that treated it, exposure category, preservative used and year of treatment.

- What kind of maintenance will this project require once it is finished?

All outdoor structures require maintenance. However, new advancements in technology make it possible for natural materials such as treated wood to now offer improved long-term performance against the effects of weathering, making them, in effect, lower maintenance.

New stabilized wood products significantly reduce cracking, warping and splintering, and because new formulations such as Ecolife contain no metals, they are no more corrosive to fasteners than untreated wood.

Keep in mind, though, that to sustain the beauty and life of your treated lumber or composite building materials, low maintenance does not mean “no maintenance.” Both types of materials will require some maintenance and will need to be cleaned and possibly sealed, stained and/or painted.

Composite building materials may require specialty sealants, paints and cleaners that are designed for use specifically with these materials.

No matter the materials used, all outdoor structures must be checked annually for signs of distress and maintained appropriately. If not, warranties for your building materials may be void.

For more information on choosing the right building materials, visit your home-products retailer.

Internet sites such as www.treatedwood.com are also a good place to research a project and find answers to your questions about building materials.

Finally, check and follow your local building codes when adding a new structure, as this can impact the warranties on your building materials.

Enjoy Your Lawn All Season Long

By JOHN BUECHNER

(NAPS) – It’s time to be one with nature again. The following tips can help homeowners have the grass greener on their side of the fence:

Watering

- Water deep and often. Most lawns need about an inch of water a week. If you’re unsure how long to water, mark one inch from the bottom of several see-through containers and spread them around the lawn. Clock the time it takes to reach the one-inch mark and water for that length of time in the future.

- While water may be applied anytime of day, morning watering is most effective.

Mowing

- Before mowing, be sure the mower blade is sharp to prevent tearing the grass blades.

- Raise the mower to a high setting, so you only remove the top one-third of the grass blade.

- Change the mowing direction each time to keep coarse grasses under control and ensure an even surface. Grasscycling

- Leave clippings when you mow. The clippings will recycle nutrients back into the soil and they don’t contribute to thatch buildup.

Thatching

- If your lawn gets soft and spongy, you likely have thatch – dead roots caused by improper mowing, overwatering or fertilizing.

- A little thatch is okay (no more than half an inch) but too much can cause problems.

- To control thatch, ask a lawn care specialist about aeration and pH balancing.

Weeding

- For a lush lawn, control weeds and unwanted plants with special applications and appropriate treatments.

- Wait for weeds to die, clear out dead foliage and reseed the bare patches as soon as the treatment directions allow.

If you’re following these tips and your lawn still isn’t up to par, you may want to dig a little deeper. Contact a lawn care specialist for a soil test to analyze the makeup of your soil and possibly identify the causes of a less-than-perfect lawn.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Tailor Program to Meet Your Goals

Q. I am following a prescribed program to boost my metabolism by eating six small meals a day. I'm also doing cardio every day, with some weights twice a week. The program says that in six weeks I should definitely be seeing a difference in my body, which I believe is true, but I am not seeing any results. What should I be doing differently. I just feel very discouraged.

A. A generic fitness and nutrition program can help get you started, but you must remember that it was not designed with your personal needs in mind. The following steps can help tailor general fitness programs to meet your goals.

Carefully read the description and purpose of the fitness program. Titles such as "Speed up your metabolism" or "Slim down your middle" imply that the program will work if you simply follow the designed workout. This can be misleading, since there are many factors that affect how your body responds to exercise.

Also remember that there should be no guarantee that you begin to see results in six weeks. Generally, most people beginning an exercise program that is within healthy and safe guidelines, in addition to proper nutritional habits, can begin to see changes within six weeks. However, these changes may not include a dramatic loss in body fat or weight, or a large, visible change to your body.

Use measures other than weight loss to gauge your progress. Monitor your body fat, circumference, strength and lean muscle gains as a better measure of success. Yes, your body will have visible changes, but also use these other assessments to give you a good idea of how your body composition is changing.

There may be certain modifications you need to make for the program to work for you. These can include increasing the type, intensity or frequency of your cardiovascular and strength-training workouts. For example, the program might suggest that you complete walking or jogging as your cardiovascular exercise every day, while you may find that other forms of cardiovascular exercise are more effective for you.

Keep a log or journal that includes your daily nutrition, exercise and lifestyle habits. Writing down what you are actually doing can allow you to compare it with the program you are following. Maintaining a log or journal also requires your honest account of your daily eating habits and the exact workout program you are completing. Oftentimes you can find small but important elements missing that can help you begin to see results.

Don't forget that an increased energy level, being able to move through everyday activities easier and feeling stronger are also positive results. Six weeks is a great kick-start, but you want to develop a positive lifestyle that you can maintain for years to come.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Protect Your Eyes From An Invisible Threat

American Academy Of Ophthalmology Offers Tips For Safe Fun In The Sun

(NAPS) — One of the greatest threats to your eyes is invisible. The American Academy of Ophthalmology reminds Americans of the importance of protecting their eyes from the sun's harmful rays by wearing sunglasses and wide-brimmed hats.

Studies show that exposure to bright sunlight may increase the risk of developing cataracts, age-related macular degeneration and growths on the eye.

"I see many patients with lesions and growths that are triggered by exposure to UV (ultraviolet) light," said Lee Dullner, M.D., an ophthalmologist in Florida and climate correspondent for the American Academy of Ophthalmology. "Many of these growths require surgical removal."

The longer the exposure to bright light, the greater the risk. Excessive exposure to UV light reflected off sand, snow, water or pavement can damage the eyes' front surface. Your eyes never recover from UV exposure.

The American Academy of Ophthalmology offers these tips on protecting your eyes:

- Don't focus on color or darkness of sunglass lenses. Select sunglasses that block UV rays. Don't be deceived by color or cost. The ability to block UV light is not dependent on the price tag.

- Do check for 97 to 100 percent UV protection. Make sure your sunglasses block 97 to 100 percent of UVA and UVB rays.

- Don't rely on contact lenses. Even if you wear contact lenses with UV protection, remember your sunglasses.

- Do choose wrap-around styles. Ideally, your sunglasses should wrap all the way around to your temples, so the sun's rays can't enter from the side.

- Don't be fooled by clouds. The sun's rays can pass through haze and thin clouds. Sun damage to eyes can occur anytime during the year, not just in the summer time.

- Do wear a hat. In addition to your sunglasses, wear a broad-brimmed hat to protect your eyes.

- Don't forget the kids. Protect their eyes with hats and sunglasses. In addition, try and keep children out of the sun between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., when the sun's UV rays are the strongest.

- Do protect your eyes during peak sun times. Sunglasses should be worn when ever you're outside, and it's especially important to wear sunglasses in the early afternoon and at higher altitudes, where UV light is more intense.

The American Academy of Ophthalmology is the world's largest association of eye physicians and surgeons—Eye M.D.s—with more than 27,000 members worldwide. To find an Eye M.D., visit the Academy's Web site www.aao.org.

Working World

Tips To Combat Stress At Work

(NAPS)—Anyone who has ever worked knows that stress is part of the job. Some stress helps keep us motivated and productive, but too much or poorly managed stress can negatively impact our health and efficiency.

Recent studies show that stress costs the U.S. economy more than $300 billion a year in poor performance, absenteeism and health care. The World Health Organization estimates that stress will be the major cause of poor health in the workplace by 2020. Despite these grim statistics, there are simple things employees can do to combat stress at work.

Deralce Scanlon, registered dietitian and consumer education specialist, offers tips to manage workplace stress.

- Skip the Java: Coffee helps many of us get started in the morning. But instead of an energy jolt, we may experience altered mood and anxiety. Instead of coffee, try a cup of green or black tea.

- Nosh on Nuts: Proper nutrition plays an important role in managing stress. Instead of snacking on chips or chocolate, choose nutrient-rich sunflower seeds or walnuts. These nuts contain B vitamins, which may be helpful to the body during times of stress. Walnuts also contain omega fatty acids, which may help improve mood and brain function.

- Take a Break: Time pressures and work demands have resulted in fewer workers taking time for lunch. In fact, a 2006 study on behalf of KFC found that more than half of employees eat lunch at their desk while working or take a lunch break of 30 minutes or less. This practice may lower productivity and increase stress. Instead of working through lunch, go for a short walk. Increasing midday physical activity helps release endorphins—the body's natural stress fighters.

- Supplement: Stress-Eez, a fast acting and easy-to-swallow tablet, contains scientifically supported herbs and vitamins that help reduce stress quickly and naturally. Stress-Eez, which contains Bacopa, Valerian, Gotu Kola and B vitamins, is found in the vitamin aisles of Walgreens, Rite Aid and CVS.

Skin Sense - Sunscreen Guidelines

(NAPS)—Protecting your skin may be easier with some guidelines from dermatologist Dr. Craig Eichler:

- Pre-apply sunscreen at least 20 minutes before sun exposure so it has time to absorb.

- Reapply every 80 minutes and after swimming or sweating.

- If you wear insect repellent or makeup, apply sunscreen first.

- Be generous. It takes at least one ounce of sunscreen to cover the arms, legs, neck and face.

- Choose products with an effective, broad-spectrum sun-blocking ingredient such as Parsol 1789 and a minimum of SPF 15.

- Check expiration dates. Exposure to extreme temperatures can shorten sunscreen's life.

- If cream sunscreens feel too heavy, try a gel or spray, such as PreSun Gel, which has a light feel, or new PreSun Spray, which is light and quick to apply.

- A wet T-shirt only provides SPF 4 protection, so apply sunscreen under clothes. For more information, visit www.presun.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

POCKET CALCULATOR

The standardized screening test for gum disease, called "periodontal screening and recording" (PSR), involves the insertion of a thin, metal probe under the gumline around each tooth. When the calibrated tool meets resistance, the depth of the "pocket" is then measured using markings on the side of the probe and assigned a measurement number. These numbers are then recorded to give an overall reading of the periodontal health of each tooth. Scores range from zero (healthy) to four and above (periodontitis). This simple, quick, and easy exam provides dentists and patients with an efficient means of identifying gum disease in its early stages. By taking corrective measures at that point, more severe forms of disease can be averted.

Whatever your age, it's important to keep your mouth clean, healthy and feeling good.

And it's important to know the state of your periodontal health. There's nothing like a bright smile, filled with sparkling teeth and healthy gums. Don't let tooth decay, gum disease, or worse rob you of that smile! Learn the basics of a sound mouth, and learn the secrets to keeping it that way. We provide dental services for every type of dental problem. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer dental care for the entire family with an emphasis on preventive care. Let us show you how to properly care for your teeth. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. By quitting smoking, you can eliminate one of the major contributing factors of gum disease.

Quincy Rallies For 3-2 Win Over Holbrook

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Post 95 Legion baseball team came-from-behind to defeat Holbrook Post 137 3-2 in eight innings Sunday evening at Adams Field. With the victory, Quincy Post 95 ran its record to a perfect 5-0 in District 6 East play.

Tom Conley drew a bases loaded walk in the top of the eighth inning to score Anthony Alibrandi with the winning run. Alibrandi (4 innings, 0 runs, 2 Ks, 2 BBs, W), who had come on in relief of starting pitcher Scott Worwick to start the fourth, earned the win with four innings of shutout ball.

Quincy, playing as the visitors on their home field, threatened to score in the top of the first after shortstop Mike LeBel singled and stole second. A single by William Kiley (2-for-3, SB, run) put runners on first and second with one out, but Quincy could not capitalize and failed to get the run across.

Worwick (3 innings, 2 runs, 4 Ks, 5 BBs, 2 hits) struggled with his control in the bottom of the first. After issuing a walk to start the game, the Holbrook runner stole second and took third on a passed ball. Worwick struck out the second batter he faced, but followed that by giving up a single and two walks to the next three batters. By the time the third and final out was recorded, Holbrook had scored two runs to take the early 2-0 lead.

Quincy's Mike Jay (1-for-4, RBI) reached base on a single to start the top of the second, but Tom Power, Dan Richards and Pat Totten went down 1-2-3 to end the threat.

Worwick settled down in the second. After allowing his fourth walk to lead off the frame, Worwick retired the next three batters he faced including a strikeout to end the inning.

After an uneventful top of the third inning for Quincy Post, Worwick came out to pitch what would be his final inning. He got the first batter he faced to ground out to LeBel at shortstop for the first out of the inning, but he followed that by allowing a single, a walk and a hit batsman. Facing a bases loaded one-out jam, Worwick bore down and got a strikeout and a fly ball to center to quash the scoring threat.

Quincy, which had trouble manufacturing runs all evening against Holbrook starting pitcher Chris Doherty (7 1/3 innings, 2 runs, 3 Ks, 2 BBs, 9 hits), went down in order in the top of the fourth.

Legion Baseball

In the bottom of the fourth, Quincy Post's manager, Dan Sweeney, pulled Worwick and replaced him with Alibrandi. After getting the first batter he faced to line out to second baseman Mike Jay (a spectacular diving catch), Alibrandi allowed the next three Holbrook batters to reach base on two walks sandwiched around a single.

For the second inning in a row, Quincy Post faced a bases loaded, one out situation. And for the second inning in a row Quincy escaped without allowing a run to score. Alibrandi fanned the first batter he faced with the bases loaded, and when Holbrook tried to score on a passed ball, catcher Kevin Bossart pounced on the loose ball and threw out the runner at home with Alibrandi covering the plate.

With their pitching creating and then escaping additional scoring threats, Quincy's offense was still struggling to pick up its pitchers. Third baseman Pat Totten led off the top of the fifth with a hard-fought at-bat, but he finally grounded out to first for the first out. Leadoff man, Mike Leone, drew a walk, but was thrown out on a bang-bang play trying to swipe second and LeBel grounded to third to end the inning.

Alibrandi walked the first batter of the fifth, but settled down to get the next three batters in a row, breathing life into a Quincy team that seemed to be waiting for a big hit to jump start its offense.

That big hit came courtesy of Bill Kiley. Kiley singled and stole second to start the top of the sixth. Steve Kussman followed Kiley with single and took second on the throw to the plate. With runners on second and third, Doherty got Bossart to pop to short, but Jay scored Kiley on a force out to second base. Power flew to left to end the inning, but the damage and the momentum had shifted to Quincy's dugout.

Alibrandi shut the door on Holbrook in the bottom of the inning, and Quincy Post entered the final inning down 2-1. Sweeney, a first-year manager, pinch-hit Dan Richards with QHS star John Alexander, and the move paid off when Alexander singled.

Sweeney went to his bench once again, pinch-hitting Tom Connolly for Pat Totten, and that move paid dividends. Connolly, an imposing force at the plate, laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt, doing his job and moving Alexander into scoring position. After a Mike Leone groundout moved Alexander to third, Mike LeBel (2-for-4, 1 RBI) came through with a big two-out hit to tie the game at 2-2.

Holbrook had a chance against Alibrandi in the bottom of the seventh, putting runners on first and second with one out. But for the second time in three innings, Alibrandi escaped without allowing a run to score.

Alibrandi took his excitement of getting out of that seventh inning mess into the batter's box and singled leading off the eighth. After another perfect sacrifice by Kevin Bossart pushed him into scoring position, Mike Jay grounded out to second. Tommy Power drew the walk, and the Holbrook coach panicked and took out Doherty.

Alexander drew a four-pitch walk against the Holbrook relief pitcher, loading the bases for Conley. After another pitching change, Connolly also drew a walk on five pitches. It was not the home run the fans were hoping for, but it was the winning RBI nonetheless.

Alibrandi made things interesting in the bottom of the eighth, hitting the first two batters he faced, but after getting a fly ball to right for the first out, Holbrook ran into a loss. With runners at first and third, Holbrook sent the runner at first, but a short foul fly out to first resulted in a double-play and Quincy eked out the 3-2 win.

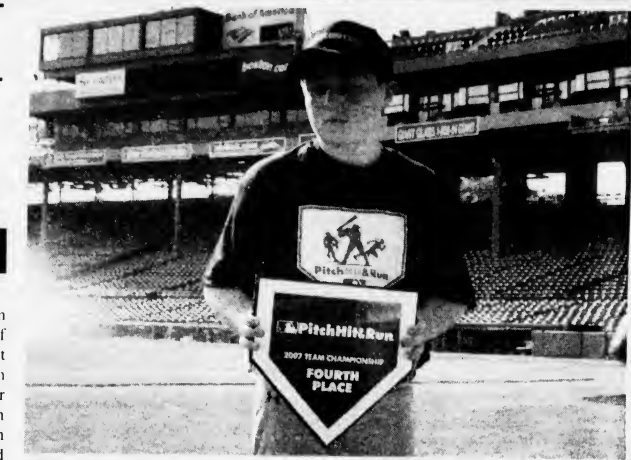

Girls' Soccer and Boys' Lacrosse Clinics

BRIAN JOYCE, 10, of Quincy competed in the semifinals of the Major League Baseball Pepsi Pitch, Hit and Run contest at Fenway Park last Saturday. Joyce won the pitching segment of the first round, co-hosted by Mini Fenway Park and Quincy Youth Baseball on May 12. Joyce then finished first among 40 other competitors on May 20 in Stoughton to earn his spot at Fenway. He finished in fourth place for all of New England.

Morrisette Defeats Weymouth For 3rd Win

By DOMENIC POLI

Morrisette Legion improved its record to 3-2-1 with a 9-7 victory over Weymouth on Monday.

Morrisette got things started in the bottom of the first inning as Kenny Carberry singled to right-center. After Joe Vialpando struck out swinging, third baseman Ricky Salvucci hit a ball that got booted by Weymouth shortstop Tony Luciani. Salvucci came around to score when the next batter, Morrisette shortstop John Orlando, smashed a double into the left-center field gap.

But, Weymouth delivered a strong counterpunch in the top of the second. First baseman Ryan Murphy led off the inning with a single to right. Pat MacDonald duplicated his teammate's hit the next at-bat with a soft single to right. Center fielder Justin DiConze made it three in a row with a rope up the middle, loading the bases. Weymouth scored its first run when Morrisette pitcher walked third baseman Jon Norris, bringing Murphy in from third.

Two more runs crossed the plate for Weymouth on an error by Orlando at short. On a grounder by second baseman Matt Kelly, Orlando tried to chuck the ball to third base to nail the lead runner. His throw was wide of the mark and the ball went sailing into the Morrisette dugout. MacDonald and DiConze scored, as Kelly wound up at second.

But Weymouth was not done yet. It scored another two runs - Norris and Kelly - off the single into center by right fielder Tim Curran.

The bleeding finally stopped when pitcher Glen Misho got designated hitter Jon Smith and Luciani to ground out to third base and shortstop, respectively.

Weymouth would score one more in the third to make it 6-5.

Morrisette began to crawl back in the bottom of the third. Vialpando pulled a ball into left that landed just inches to the right of the foul line. The center fielder raced around first and glided into second to start the inning. Vialpando then reached third when a pitch blocked by catcher Peter Hogan deflected off to the side. Salvucci, the next batter, walked and Orlando singled, bringing home Vialpando. Pelletier then shot a single into left. After Connolly and Garland struck out swinging, catcher Matt Rodriguez drew a walk. Second baseman Alex Tragellis was hit by a pitch, scoring Orlando to tie the game 5-5.

The top of the fifth would provide some excitement for both teams.

After MacDonald flew out to center to start the inning, DiConze roped a double into the right-center gap. He would then move to third on a wild pitch by Misho. DiConze then walked and Kelly knocked a single between the third baseman and shortstop to load the bases.

Weymouth would record the inning's second out with heads-up defense. On a ground ball to third, Salvucci fired home to get the force out. Curran then sent a double into the gap to tie the game. The runs were overturned, however, with an appeal to first base.

Pelletier noticed from the dugout that Curran missed first when rounding the bag and signaled to head coach Ray Cattaneo to appeal. Pelletier's attention to detail saved his team the two crucial runs that led to the win.

Things got a little interesting in the last inning when Misho walked MacDonald to start the frame. Not wanting to take any chances, Cattaneo decided to switch pitchers. He took the ball

MR. CHRIS BARRETT (left) presents the 2006 Steven V. Barrett Memorial Award to graduating senior captain Steve Connolly.

QHS Golfers To Get New Look

When the 2007 golf season get under way in the fall, the Quincy President golf team will sport twelve new Callaway Golf bags thanks to a generous donation from Mr. Chris Barrett.

Each year, Mr. Barrett hosts a fundraiser golf tournament in honor of the memory of his son Steven, who was a three-sport athlete at Quincy High School.

Steven's love of golf, he was captain of the QHS golf team, has been remembered each season with an award given annually in his name. A beautiful trophy and plaque recognizing the recipients of the Steven V. Barrett Award is prominently displayed in the Quincy High School Pride Room.

Last season, Mr. Barrett came up with the idea of outfitting the golf team with new bags. He agreed to help with the cost of the new bags, and with additional help from the Quincy Public School Athletic Department, the monies needed became a reality.

Mr. Bob Keezer of Keezer Sports in Weymouth and head coach Lou Venturelli worked on the design of the bags and the 2006 team tried out the bags in the final few matches of the season.

The QHS golf team is looking forward to an exciting 2007 season said Venturelli. Next fall's captains will be Kevin Shea, Mike LeBel and Ricky Salvucci. Incoming freshmen to QHS can try-out for the team by attending practice at 8 a.m. on August 27 at Furnace Brook Golf Course.

Morrisette Opens Season With A 2-2-1 Record

Morrisette Legion Post opened their 2007 season with a 19-1 loss to Milton on June 8.

Morrisette Legion - 8
West Roxbury Legion - 8

The team came back on June 11 and played West Roxbury to an 8-8 tie. The game was called due to darkness. Starting pitcher Glen Misho went seven innings, allowing 11 hits, and seven runs while striking out 11 batters.

The offense got going in the fifth inning when it scored six runs. John Orlando, Jonathon Pelletier and Steve Sullivan all reached on singles and Matt Rodriguez took a walk to drive in the first run.

His RBI walk was followed by consecutive RBI singles from Joe Lousarian and Joe Vialpando. Orlando knocked in two more runs with a two-run RBI single later in the frame.

In the seventh inning, Ricky Salvucci doubled, John Orlando knocked him with a RBI single and Jon Pelletier followed with a RBI double.

Morrisette Legion - 2
Cohasset Legion - 1

Starting pitcher Steve Connolly went seven innings, allowing one run on eight hits while striking out five batters as Morrisette earned their first victory of the year. With the win, Morrisette upped its overall record to 1-1-1.

The team got all the offense they would need in the first inning. Ricky Salvucci doubled and John Orlando walked. Jon Pelletier knocked them in with a RBI single.

Canton Legion - 1

Morrisette Legion - 0

Starting pitcher Jon Pelletier threw six innings of three-hit ball, striking out one while walking three and allowing only one run.

The offense could manage just three hits in the loss. Leadoff man Kenny Carberry reached base three times (single, HBP, and E4) and had a stolen base. With the tough-luck loss, Morrisette fell to 1-2-1.

Morrisette Legion - 10
Stoughton Legion - 5

Starting pitcher Joe Garland went four innings, allowing three hits and four runs. He struck out four batters and walked eight. Mike Joyce came on in relief and pitched two innings allowing just one run. The win gives Morrisette a 2-2-1 overall record.

Matt Rodriguez opened the third inning with a single and a stolen base and would come around to score on a wild pitch.

In the fifth inning, Kenny Carberry and Joe Vialpando singled and Steve Sullivan knocked in two runs with a double.

Alex Traggellis and Vialpando both contributed with RBIs.

Quincy Post 95 Starts Season 4-0

Quincy Legion Post 95 opened its 2007 season with an 8-4 victory over Stoughton Post 89.

Legion rookie Scott Worwick was the winning pitcher, striking out five and allowing six hits in six innings. The game was called because of darkness.

Mike LeBel finished the game with a double and a triple and six RBIs. Mike Leone went 1-for-2 with 2 RBIs. John Alexander and Mike Horgan both recorded one hit in the win.

Quincy Post 95 - 3
Weymouth - 2

Jared Kenney doubled and had two RBIs and Mike Leone added two hits and scored twice as Quincy defeated Weymouth 3-2 to run its record to 2-0 in District 6 East play. Leone's throw to the plate from right field ended the game and secured the win.

Mike Horgan went the distance on the mound to earn the win. He struck out two, allowed six hits and two earned runs.

Tommy Power, John Alexander, Bill Kiley and Jay Lewis each had one hit.

Quincy Post 95 - 3
Braintree - 2

Jared Kenney pitched a complete game six-hitter with three strikeouts as Quincy Post 95 knocked off Braintree Post 86 3-2 to open their season at 3-0.

Mike LeBel had two doubles and scored a run and Bill Kiley singled and doubled.

Second baseman Jay Lewis played a stellar defensive game for Post 95.

Quincy Post 95 - 12
Canton - 8

Kyle Tobin pitched 2 1/3 innings of solid relief, striking out three, while allowing no runs and no hits as Quincy defeated Canton 12-8. With the win, Quincy upped its record to 4-0.

Mike LeBel had three hits, a stolen base and three runs scored, while Bill Kiley had two hits and scored three runs. Kevin Bossart chipped in with two hits and a stolen base.

John Alexander pitched the first 4 2/3 innings allowing six hits and eight runs.

from Misho and Connolly moved from first to take his place. In the switch, Cattaneo replaced Connolly with Pelletier at first base.

MacDonald then stole second and DiConze shot a single to left. Weymouth then played a bit of small ball as Norris sacrificed DiConze to second. After striking out Kelly, Connolly got Hogan to hit a soft grounder to shortstop. Orlando charged the ball and threw to first on the run to wrap up the win. It was a win Cattaneo was pleased to put in the 'W' column.

"Weymouth is always tough," he said. "They're always a good team. They hit the ball. They really hit the ball and you got to play tough with them. You can't give them any runs. We gave them a few and that kept them in the ballgame."

Morrisette's next game is a matchup against Braintree at Adams Field at 8 p.m. on Friday.

Squantum 5 Road Race June 28

The Seventh Annual Squantum 5 Road Race to benefit the Dana Farber Marathon Challenge will take place on June 28 at 6:45 p.m. beginning at WaterWorks, Marina Bay.

This 5-mile race starts and finishes at WaterWorks, going from Marina Bay, along Dorchester Bay, Quincy Bay, and back to Marina Bay. The course is flat (except for the third mile) and is USATF certified.

There is a $15 pre-registration fee, check payable to "Squantum 5 Road Race," P.O. Box 7316, Quincy, MA 02169. There is a $20 post-registration fee for anyone who wants to sign up and run on the day of the race.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Recently obtained information could open a new opportunity for a career change. But temper that Arian impatience and act on it only when all the facts are made available.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're moving into a more active cycle. So put your ideas back on the table, where they'll be given the attention they deserve. Expect a favorable change in your love life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A friend might ask for a favor that you feel would compromise your values. Best advice: Confront him or her and explain why you must say no. A true friend will understand.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A relationship continues to develop along positive lines. Meanwhile, a brewing job situation could create complications for one of your pet projects. Look into it right away.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your interest in a co-worker's project could lead to a profitable experience for you both. But before you agree to anything, be sure to get all your legal I's dotted and T's crossed.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful whose counsel you take about a possible long-distance move. Some advice might not necessarily be in your best interest. Stay focused on your goals.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone might try to complicate efforts in an attempt to work out that confusing job situation. But don't let that keep you from sticking with your decision to push for a resolution.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A disagreement on how to handle a family problem could create more trouble for all concerned. Look for ways to cool things down before they boil over.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unexpected change in long-standing workplace procedure and policy could provide a new career target for the Archer to aim at. Start making inquiries.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're finally able to get back into the swing of things, as those temporary doldrums begin to lift. Expect some surprising disclosures from a new colleague.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your innate sense of justice to see you through a dilemma involving a family member. Other relatives who've stood back will soon come forward as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend seems to be pushing you into taking risks — financial or otherwise. Best advice: Don't do it. She or he might have a hidden agenda that hasn't surfaced yet.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

An eighteenth-century German philosopher, Johann Schiller, once stated, "He who neglects the present moment throws away all he has." Too often we live today with our minds so tied to our tomorrows... and even yesterdays... that we fail to enjoy the present. We say, "It was easier when the children were little." Or we say, "Everything will be better, once the children are grown, or I get that raise, or pay off the mortgage." But as Daphne de Maurier reminds us in "The Scapgoat," "The future begins today."

This thought reminds me of the story of a woman who was being urged by a friend to obtain her family history so she could become a member of a particular organization. She thanked her friend and said, "It's important to know who your ancestors are, and I'm proud of mine. But I'm too busy now trying to be a good ancestor for my grandchildren. I think I'll wait!"

The only time we have is the present. We need to adjust to this fact and learn to live, making the best of the time, and thanking God. This makes each today worthwhile...

Dog Training Classes At Union Congregational Church

OBEEDIENCE CLASSES for dogs, such as those shown above, have been scheduled for spring and fall at Union Congregational Church, Wollaston. Registration is open now.

Summer dog training classes have been scheduled at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Road, Wollaston.

Both Level 1 and Level 2 classes will be offered and will be held on Wednesday evenings once a week for five weeks at a cost of $110. Contact 617-789-3647 for additional information.

Level 1 classes, "Good Manners for Beginners" teaches the dog such basic commands as "Sit, Stay, Come, Down, Heel," and "Drop it." This class also teaches owners how to solve basic problems like jumping and chewing as well as offering playtime for the dogs.

Level 2 classes, "Obedience with Distractions," teaches the dog to do such things as staying in place or responding to a command while there are distractions. In addition during this class, the owner will stand further and further away from the dog while issuing commands and use less and less leash control.

There will also be agility training for the dog in this class.

The spring/summer dates are all on Wednesday evenings: May 30 at 6 p.m., "Obedience with Distractions," May 30 at 7 p.m., "Beginners," July 11 at 6 p.m., "Beginners" and July 11 at 7 p.m., "Dog Agility plus Obedience Training," and Sept. 5 at 6 p.m., "Beginners."

ENC Students Work To Save Periled Species In Blue Hills

Biology students at Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) are spending their Tuesdays and Fridays this spring searching for "vernal pools" to protect in the Blue Hills Reservation.

A vernal pool is described as a basin-like depression that contains water part of the year and dry the rest and is essential for the breeding of several types of amphibians.

They receive some protection under the Massachusetts

Wetlands Act but encroaching development often destroys the environment surrounding the pools.

The ENC students have partnered with the Reservation to complete the certification process to bring the pools under the State Natural Heritage and Endangered Species Program (NHESP).

"In our area, the amphibians include wood frogs, spotted salamanders, blue spotted salamanders and marbled salamanders," said

Jonathan Twining, associate professor of biology at ENC.

"All of these species are obligate vernal pool species, meaning they must have a vernal pool for all or some portion of their life cycles. Fairy shrimp are also considered to be an obligate vernal pool species."

The project began with an e-mail plea from the Friends of the Blue Hills in early March that the Department of Conservation and Recreation needed assistance in certifying the vernal pools.

To Twining, it looked like just the right hands-on project for the students.

"They have been counting and photographing amphibian egg masses, documenting the presence or absence of fairy shrimp, measuring the depths of the pools and recording the types of vegetation around the pools," he said.

Twining and the students are working closely with Park Rangers David Foley and Maqui Brown.

"Potential vernal pools must be located on maps and their presence verified by ground surveys. The presence of breeding vernal pool species must be documented."

Presence of breedings, says Twining, "might include the churning of tripe, the presence of egg masses, or the presence of tadpoles."

Maps will then be prepared to show the exact location of each pool and the attached certification form will be completed and sent to the NHESP with all supporting documentation.

Russell O'Connell Honored At Marriott Hotel Reception

Friends recently saluted Russell E. O'Connell, Quincy's first Executive Director of the city's Community Action Program (CAP), at a reception held in the Liberty Room of the Marriott Hotel.

When O'Connell was appointed, CAP headquarters operated out of a storefront in West Quincy and served south and West Quincy.

Under O'Connell's leadership, CAP offered training and education programs for single mothers. The group was involved in the building of the Lincoln-Hancock School and instrumental in having a pool located there, according to Earle P. McLeod who worked for O'Connell at the time.

McLeod also credits O'Connell with initiating some of the first senior programs and with helping the Head Start and Neighborhood Youth Programs when they began in Quincy. After leaving Quincy CAP, McLeod served as the state's Commissioner of Rehabilitation for five years. He now lives in New York.

McLeod's successor was Rosemary Wahlburg, who also expanded CAP's Headstart Program on site by hiring teachers and arranging for transportation. The programs have since expanded to a $19 million operation.

Squantum Christian Fellowship Bible Activities

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children to its "Avalanche Ranch: A Wild Ride Through God's Word" July 16-20 at the Squantum School from 9 a.m. to noon.

"This year, our church is a stampede of excitement," says Pastor Mike Fehan. "Our Avalanche Ranch program will provide fun and memorable Bible activities for kids ages 3-11.

"Each day, they will sing catchy songs, act out a Bible story, enjoy some horseplay, down Chuck Wagon chow, and make a variety of cow-poke crafts. Kids will also collect Memory Buddies daily, and make teddy bears for orphans in needy lands."

Pastor Fehan said the activities are exciting way for kids to learn more about God's love. "Each day at Showtime Roundup, parents can see a slide show of the kids' activities. We hope this adventure will get everyone wild about God!"

For more information, call Helen at 617-328-8771, or visit www.squantumcf.org for a video clip and registration form.

A Hot Dog Stand In Front Of City Hall?

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A hot dog stand in front of City Hall?

That's what the License Board heard at Tuesday's meeting.

Scott Palmer wants to open a mobile concession hopefully in front of City Hall Plaza featuring "New England's Original Franks To Go."

The cart, which Palmer said weighs 600 pounds is painted in red, white and blue with an American flag to "blend in with the City of Presidents." He said the cart is equipped with steam tables, and a sink.

Palmer said he took the mobile cart to the Flag Day Parade and parked it near the parking area at Veteran's Memorial Stadium and said he was "pleased with the outcome." He said it was sort of an "old fashioned idea" and one he hopes will work.

He told the board that if he couldn't park it at City Hall, then maybe other areas in the city mentioning the Court House parking lot.

Capt. John Duggan, sitting in for Police Chief Robert Crowley said he was afraid other vendors would be "calling city hall" when they find out there is a stand out there.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said "It's a nice idea," but he was also afraid he would be "flooded with calls." And said if one license is issued, then others would want one as well. He said usually vendors take their mobile carts anywhere there is an event, but only stay temporarily.

Chairman Joseph Shea said vendors usually attend football games and other events, and that persons may complain that vendors do not have to pay taxes.

Palmer, who has owned restaurants in the past, said he didn't think he'd be in competition with any area eateries, because he cannot function in the rain or snow as they can.

The board said they will send Palmer's concept to the city solicitor and report back at the July 10 board meeting.

Teachers Vote Today On New Contract

level," Phillips said of this protective clause. As for the strike, he said, "It was something we felt had to be."

However, the $150,000 fine leveled against the union by Judge Thomas Connors in Norfolk Superior Court will likely stand.

As for the contract, Phillips said some members will benefit; some will be hurt.

"Some of my members will be taking a pay cut. Some will do pretty well," Phillips said, noting those teachers on an individual plan, rather than family plans, will benefit. The union bargaining committee attempted to adjust to the insurance premium hike "in a way that would not hurt too many of us."

"The newer teachers are more often in an individual health insurance plan," Phillips said. "My biggest worry is when they will have to go on a family plan."

At this time, teachers can choose between the more expensive PPO (Preferred Provider Option) or the HMO (Health Maintenance Option), according to Phillips who said, "Families on the PPO tend to be people who have health issues."

The city is trying to cut down or eliminate the PPO, according to Phillips who estimated that teachers on family plans will pay an additional $2000 a year and individuals will pay $800 more a year plus the insurance company's rate increases.

If approved, the new contract will work "best of all for the people who don't take (insurance)," Phillips said.

The QEA voted to strike June 7 and did not report to their classrooms for the four school days from June 8 through June 13. During that period, teachers picketed City Hall and the city's schools.

During the strike and for months prior to the strike, teachers and Mayor William Phelan engaged in contentious debate through the media.

Several times, Phelan offered statistics indicating that Quincy teachers are the highest paid on the South Shore and noted that Quincy teachers paid the lowest percentage of health insurance costs.

Teachers countered that Quincy teachers with master's degrees actually ranked 21st of 23 South Shore communities and actually earn over $11,000 less than similar teachers in Norwell and Duxbury.

In addition, supporters cited figures from the Massachusetts Department of Education indicating that Quincy's teachers' salaries rank 85th of the state's 328 school districts and their actual health insurance premium payment, not the percentage, was higher than teachers pay in Cohasset, Norwell, Milton and Silver Lake Regional District.

Phillips has been union president for 10 years. The last teachers' strike in Quincy was prior to his taking office.

Now, union members will have to unite to pay the $150,000 fine, according to Phillips who said that the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) represents the QEA in court actions.

"MTA lawyers will ask for relief," Phillips said, but does not expect much of a change. "We've have to engage in fundraising, t-shirts and that.... Dues would probably have to be raised for a while."

Major Lighting Improvements Begin Energy Efficiency Program Underway At City Buildings

Energy conservation improvements are underway at municipal buildings in the city, announce Mayor William Phelan and Mike Ryan, Director of Buildings and Construction.

Quincy is the first city in Massachusetts to take advantage of the state's new Energy Savings Law to upgrade its municipal buildings with financing provided by future energy savings.

"Not only will we be improving the conditions inside our schools and municipal buildings, we will be saving our taxpayers money," said Phelan. "This program makes great sense from an economic and environmental perspective."

Currently underway is a major lighting survey of all schools and municipal buildings. It is estimated that 18,000 fixtures or bulbs will be replaced and upgraded.

"The lighting improvements alone will make a significant difference in our schools," said Ryan. "Students and teachers should notice the upgrade when they return in September."

Honeywell, Inc. has been signed to oversee the energy management and conservation project. The state law that allows for the city to invest future energy savings requires Honeywell, Inc. to guarantee the savings to the city of Quincy.

Similar water conservation efforts are underway at the police station and at fire stations throughout the city. Replacing old plumbing fixtures with new conservation fixtures will help Quincy capture savings in water consumption.

A new flat roof is also being installed at the Fire Department Headquarters on Quincy Avenue. This summer, new roofs will be installed at the Squantum Elementary School, Bernazzani Elementary School, and the Snug Harbor Elementary School.

"This program allows us to invest in middle income structure and building improvements while simultaneously saving money in the process," said Phelan. "We take great pride in being a leader in this important area of energy conservation, but even more pride in our efforts to conserve taxpayer dollars in the process."

THE THERMOMETER AT the Colonial Federal Savings Bank on Beach Street, Wollaston reached 93 degrees at 2:41 p.m. Tuesday and still climbing as a predicted heat wave set in.

As Temperatures Hit 90's Health Dept. Offers Tips To Survive Heat

By TOM HENSHAW

Remember? Only a few days ago we were wondering where the summer went.

Well, now it's here with a vengeance, so much so that the Health Department felt called upon to issue hot weather survival tips, especially for the very young, the chronically ill and the very old.

For one thing, drink plenty of water — that's water, not beer or coffee, because alcohol and caffeine increase water loss and can dehydrate the body.

Eat light and choose foods high in water content, such as fruits, salads and soups, and cool the skin with cool cloths or take cool baths or showers, and, as Satchel Paige might add, think cool thoughts.

If you don't have air conditioning or good ventilation in your living quarters, seek out an air conditioned shop-

Supporters Helping QEA Pay $150,000 Fine

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Teachers last week voted 620-43 to ratify a five-year contract with the city, maximizing a bitter 18-month period of bargaining between their union, the Quincy Education Association (QEA), and city officials.

QEA president Paul Phillips said that other ballots were invalid or blank.

The union still faces a $150,000 fine imposed by Judge Thomas Campos, federal court judge in North Quincy, for failing to pay the city's share of the cost of the strike. The city has not yet received the fine, but the city has not yet received the fine.

The contract impasse between the city and the QEA ended after a four-day strike by teachers. The strike postponed school closing this year until the 2008-2009 school year. The city has not yet received the fine, but the city has not yet received the fine.

Teen-Senior Center Considered

Eight-Lane Track For Pageant Field

Mayor William Phelan this week promised that the city will soon have a state-of-the-art track facility at Pageant Field with an eight-lane track that will be the first in the city's history.

"I want to thank the Park Board and the City Council for their unanimous support," Phelan said referring to the recent votes by both groups. "We need to move forward as a community to complete this project. The finished product will be an absolutely beautiful track facility that can be used by our entire community for exercise and enjoyment."

Among the project's special features are a picnic pavilion located for spectacular views of Quincy Bay and also, designated space for athletic field events, according to Phelan.

In addition, the city will plant 87 new trees in accordance with the wishes of the Adams family. The Adams family decided the land to the city in 1885 provided the property be used solely for the "public pleasure free to all inhabitants of Quincy..."

"Let's keep moving forward together," said Phelan, after noting that the city has wanted decades for a new track facility.

Phelan predicted that "the new track could be an amenity that will improve the quality of life for all our residents. Imagine how many people will use the beautiful site on a beautiful spring morning to exercise and socialize. It's pretty exciting."

According to the mayor, the conceptual design has met all the criteria set by the Adams family.

Family representatives, the Quincy track community, City Council members and residents.

Another design element for the new field includes the use of green only on the track to blend the facility into the landscape. Also, neither fencing nor any other permanent structures will be constructed.

Under the current plans, the track will be open to the public from dawn to dusk.

The Adams family had also requested that a Senior and Teen Center be located on the property and those plans are currently being considered by the mayor's team. Nothing has been finalized as the project is in its early planning stages.

The current Council on Aging newsletter will include a survey asking seniors for their opinions. City officials are also surveying senior centers in other cities and in towns to determine the best project. Currently, senior programs are held in a variety of locations, such as libraries, schools, and private facilities operated by non-profit organizations.

According to the mayor's spokesman, David Murphy, there is no centralized space dedicated specifically for senior activities, such as computer classes or gathering spots, anywhere in the city.

At this time, the project will include shared space for a Teen Center and the project will be an intergenerational center.

Quincy Man Dies In Motorcycle Crash

Mark Zielinski, 43, of Quincy was killed Sunday morning when he lost control of his 1990 Honda motorcycle and crashed into a jersey barrier in the Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neil Tunnel on Route 93 in Boston.

His passenger, Luz Argon, 50, of Boston was seriously injured in the 8:30 a.m. accident and was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital where her condition was described as fair.

Traffic on the busy highway was tied up all the way back to Milton for two and a half hours as two lanes were closed while crews cleaned up the accident scene.

Open Space, Landmarks Top Preservation Funds List

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Million of dollars in community preservation funds will allow the city to purchase three major properties for open space under a plan approved recently by the City Council.

Under the plan recommended by the Community Preservation Committee and approved by City Council, the city will begin negotiations to buy the following properties:

- The 271 Sea Street lot, (3.5 acres known as Cobblestone)
- The Avalon at Faxon Park West (approximately 14 acres)
- Turning Mill Estate off Forest Avenue (six lots)

In addition, the city will spend some $700,000 for projects aimed at preserving historic landmarks, neighborhood housing and recreation projects.

These projects will be funded through the $2.2 million in Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds available this year and preservation funds anticipated in future years, according to Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee.

At the meeting, Davis told his colleagues that the city's preservation funds this year total $2.2 million which includes the state's match. The local funds are raised through a surcharge tax approved for this purpose by taxpayer referendum in November, 2006. For the time being, the state matches the local receipts.

"It passed in all 30 precincts," Council President Doug Gutro said during the council discussion, crediting the Quincy Environmental Network for their advocacy. At Gutro's suggestion, council members and the audience applauded the Network members and later, members of Davis' committee.

"We now have an opportunity to buy a number of acres of land for open space," Davis said. "This was the first year. Councillors can see where these projects are. It is exciting."

"The mayor's office will handle negotiations," Davis said this week after noting that the developers have submitted their estimates. Developers are asking roughly $4.7 million for the Avalon West property, $1.2 million for Cobblestone and $1.2 for Turning Mills Estates.

At this time, Davis said that the cost of the three purchases has not been determined and it is possible the committee may bond some of the necessary purchase costs but all of the funds will come from CPA sources, rather than any tax appropriation.

"These are gifts to the whole City of Quincy," Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly said of the purchases, particularly the Sea Street lot, the garden and waterfront projects, a majority of which are located in his ward.

One grant of $72,000 will fund construction of a boardwalk across the salt marsh in Germantown, Kelly's district. The walkway will allow access to a beach that overlooks Fore River and Rock Island Cove.

Gutro said of the proposed purchases, "These are some gems. They are important to protect."

Davis said that all three developers have been very patient and are "bargaining in good faith." If bonding is necessary to fund the purchases, the committee will limit the payback period to five years, at which point voters can reconsider the CPA.

Councillor John Keenan cautioned that the formula for the state preservation funding is likely to change and that fiscal year 2008-2009 may be the last year that the state guarantees a full match of local funds.

Davis said the three properties were chosen from 26 proposals totaling more than $9.5 million that were submitted to his committee. The committee also recommended the following expenditures. He also noted that CPA may provide the impetus for outside grants.

THE HISTORIC Souther Tide Mill (shown above), is one of among the dozens of projects chosen for protection by the city's Conservation Protection Committee. Woodward Ave. Closed

Bids to Be Opened For New Quincy High

City officials are preparing for the city's new $126 million high school construction project by permanently closing a section of Woodward Avenue and awarding bids for contracts and for demolition, according to Michael Ryan who heads the School Building Committee.

The section of Woodward Avenue, from Huntley Road to Coddington Street, has been permanently closed to traffic and bids will be awarded Friday for the demolition of the administration building on Coddington Street.

Two wings of the administration building on Coddington Street will be demolished starting in early August, according to Ryan who said that school construction should begin this fall and be completed by August, 2010.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) has approved $72 million in reimbursements for the new school on Coddington Street and has also agreed to an additional $10 million loan at 2 percent interest.

"We're starting with the mechanical room," Ryan, chairman of said, noting that the room will house the school's electrical and mechanical operations.

Ryan also said that bids for mechanical, plumbing, electrical and heating contracts will be opened tomorrow (Friday) and a demolition contract will be awarded next week. It is among five bidders.

"It's a great time to see the school's future," Ryan said.

He also announced that Quincy High School will be located at 1000 Southern Artery, near the intersection of

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 30, 1859, French daredevil Emile Blondin becomes the first person to walk across Niagara Falls on a tightrope. Subsequent walks included walking blindfolded, in a sack, with his manager on his back, sitting down mid-way to cook an omelet, and pushing a wheelbarrow across while dressed as an ape.

• On July 1, 1862, the United States Congress approves the Revenue Act, which was soon signed by President Lincoln. The legislation imposed a 3 percent tax on people with incomes from $600 to $10,000, and a 5 percent levy for incomes over $10,000.

• On June 26, 1906, the first French Grand Prix is staged in Le Mans, with cars hitting top speeds of 105 mph, racing on rutted dirt and gravel roads with poor tires and two-wheel brakes. The race was effectively banned between 1908 and 1912, due to the mounting number of fatalities incurred by both drivers and spectators.

• On June 27, 1939, one of the most famous scenes in movie history is filmed in "Gone with the Wind." An alternate scene was shot using the line, "Frankly, my dear, I just don't care," in case the film censors objected to the phrase "I don't give a damn." The censors approved the movie, but fined producer David O. Selznick $5,000 for including the curse.

• On June 25, 1956, the last 1956 Packard is produced, marking the end of production at Packard's Connor Avenue plant in Detroit. Packard would continue to build cars in South Bend, Ind., until 1958, but the 1956 is considered the last true Packard car.

• On June 28, 1975, television writer Rod Serling dies at age 50 after open-heart surgery. Serling was one of early television's most successful writers, best known for the anthology series "The Twilight Zone," which he created, wrote and hosted.

• On June 29, 1985, Jim Pattison purchases a custom-painted psychedelic Rolls-Royce Phantom V limousine that had belonged to John Lennon for $2,229,000, which was 10 times the initial estimate of Sotheby's auction house.

A Day Of Irony

(This column first appeared in July 1992 and has been updated as we prepare to celebrate the Fourth of July next week.)

July 4th, you could say, is a day of irony in American history.

America was born on July 4th, 1776 and the two men who played major roles in that historic event also died on July 4th-50 years later.

Next Wednesday marks the 231st anniversary of the Declaration of Independence - America's birth certificate-and the 181st anniversary of the death of its two main architects - Thomas Jefferson and our own John Adams.

ADAMS

Adams, like Jefferson, was a super patriot.

Certainly a much better patriot than he was a prognosticator. He predicted July 2nd-not July 4th-would be celebrated through the years as America's birthdate.

Adams made that erroneous prediction in a letter to Abigail Adams dated July 2, 1776. In the letter sent from Philadelphia to Abigail here in Quincy, he declared: "The second day of July, 1776 will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America."

The man, who would become second president after George Washington, thought this because the Declaration of Independence was adopted by 12 states on July 2. But, it wasn't signed by anyone until July 4.

And, only two of the 55 signers actually affixed their signatures on July 4th. One was Quincy-born John Hancock, who as President of the Second Continental Congress, was the first to sign.

HANCOCK

Most of the others signed the precious document Aug. 2. But six signed after that. And Thomas McKean of Delaware didn't get around to it until five years later.

Jefferson and Hancock usually get top billing in history books when it comes to the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson as its author and Hancock as its first signer.

Hancock's signature-bold and with a fancy flourish so "King George III can see it without his spectacles" probably is the most famous autograph in this country's history.

But Adams played a key, if not as glamorous a role, in putting the Declaration together and getting it adopted.

Jefferson himself acknowledged that when he praised Adams as "...the most efficient agent in procuring a public Declaration of Independence."

And then that ironic day-July 4th, 1826-the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence when both Adams and Jefferson died.

Adams was stricken here in Quincy in his favorite wing chair in his second floor study at the Adams mansion, on Adams Street. Known as the Old House, this was the home of four generations of the illustrious Adams family and the summer White House of the second president and his son, John Quincy Adams, the sixth president.

Adams and Jefferson, once close allies, had a falling out but reconciled in later years through the efforts of Abigail as a peacemaker.

Among Adams' last words as he lay dying were "Jefferson survives."

ABIGAIL

He thought Jefferson had outlived him. But actually Jefferson had died earlier that same day at Monticello in Virginia at age 83.

News traveled slowly in those days, long before radio and television. There were no such things as instant news bulletins.

If there were, just imagine the flurry all day as the media-especially cable TV-staked out the Adams Mansion here and Monticello in Virginia.

Adams was just three months and 15 days from his 91st birthday. He survived Abigail, his wife of 54 years, by eight years.

But he had lived to see his son, John Quincy Adams, become president in 1825.

The latter was in Washington when his father died and did not know of his death until several days later.

Abigail, the first woman to be the wife of one U.S. president and the mother of a second never knew that second honor.

Four days before he died, Adams was asked to give a 50th anniversary July 4th toast to his fellow Quincy residents. The old man replied:

"I will give you independence forever."

Asked if he would like to add to that, he declared, "Not a syllable."

"Independence forever" - those are words to remember and cherish.

If you've never been to the Adams Mansion-(Old House)-you've been missing a visitor's treat.

The Mansion has been under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service since 1979 and is part of the Adams National Historic Park.

The late Willhelmina, as superintendent, gave the Old House her personal loving care. Present Supt. Marianne Peak has carried on that tradition.

They have kept the house in a "lived in appearance."

Strolling the beautiful rooms, you get the feeling that John and Abigail are out for a little walk and will be right back.

'Meals On Wheels' Needs Drivers To Reach Elderly

Meals on Wheels, a service of South Shore Elder Services, has an urgent need for drivers to deliver meals to homebound elders in Quincy.

Volunteers are needed to help one to five days a week,

Monday through Friday, between 10:30 a.m. and 12 noon, depending on their schedules. Mileage reimbursement is available.

Corporate, civic and faith-based groups can deliver as teams. Kitchen helpers also are needed.

Meals on Wheels delivers more than 500 meals daily to elders in Quincy, many of whom see the delivery persons as their only contact with the outside world.

To volunteer, contact Jody, the volunteer coordinator, 159 Bay State Rd., Braintree MA 02184 or call her at 781-848-3910, extension 430.

Everyone Loved Charlie

On May 24, 2007 Charlie Ayers was laid to rest.

The staffs of St. Ann's Church, The Keohane Funeral Home, and the City of Quincy Police Force joined with Charlie's countless friends to acknowledge a person who truly deserved our respect.

Charlie's devotion for 50 years to his beloved Beverly can only be described as an unending Valentine.

Charlie and Beverly were always so proud of their sons, Chuck and Bruce, and the delightful women they married, Judy and Maureen. Charlie was his sons' business advisor, their pal, and their hero.

Charlie's grandchildren, Lauren, Stephanie, Brian and Peter, who affectionately called their grandfather "Charles," were the joy of his life. They will never have to be reminded how blessed they are to have such a wonderful grandfather, for they know it better than anyone.

To say Charlie was a unique person doesn't do him justice. All of us who knew him agree that we have never known anyone like Charlie Ayers before, and we will never know anyone like him again. When we were with Charlie he made each of us feel special, as though we were the only person in the world.

People from all types of backgrounds, of varying religious and political beliefs have been drawn to Charlie. Everyone admired him simply for the way he was. With Charlie Ayers, we got what we saw and we wouldn't have had it any other way.

Everyone who attended Charlie's wake and funeral services, along with all those who wished they could have joined his throng of mourners, sincerely believe in their hearts that Charlie Ayers was their friend. Indeed he was!

Charlie's greatest gift to us was his extraordinary sense of humor. With Charlie we always laughed for he could make a joke out of anything. Charlie could laugh at himself and anything the world had to offer. He had the rarest of ability to take his family's religion, business and friends seriously without ever taking himself seriously.

To know Charlie Ayers was an extraordinary adventure, one we wouldn't have missed for the world.

Good bye, Dear Friend.

Stop Shifting The Rising Cost Of Health Insurance

The administration of Mayor William Phelan should cease trying to shift the rising cost of health insurance onto Quincy's teachers and other employees.

Anyone engaged in collective bargaining knows better benefits, especially in the public sector, are secured in lieu of richer wage increases. Quincy's teachers have already fallen behind their colleagues in comparable municipalities.

There is a better solution: the creation of a universal system of comprehensive, high-quality, affordable health care. Important pieces of this initiative can be put into place quickly through passage of a variety of cost-saving bills now in committee at the State House, such as bulk purchasing, uniform billing and a cap on insurance company overhead.

Ultimately, a tax-supported single-payer system for the Commonwealth, and for the country, is the vehicle to a just healthcare system.

one that is sustainable for individuals, families and society as a whole.

I urge the city's leaders to join hands with the teachers, nurses and so many others in lobbying for these important reforms, rather than going down the slippery slope of cost-shifting.

Sincere Gratitude To Driscoll And Glennon Families

I am writing to express my sincere gratitude to the Driscoll Family and the Glennon Family (SCYC) for their hard work and professionalism producing and directing "The Beauty and the Beast" performance held at Eastern Nazarene College June 2nd and 3rd.

Every aspect of the shows were impressive, to say the least. The performances and the tireless effort put forth by the production crew were that of Broadway caliber!! Each role was well suited for each cast member's individual personality and the meticulous attention paid to even the littlest detail demonstrated the producer's and director's amazing talents.

Beauty and the Beast is the third production from the Driscolls and Glennons and with each year, the performances are better and better, though each year you can't imagine they can top the last!!

My daughter, Colleen, and her friends from the community have been fortunate to be part of the cast all three years and we are always so pleased they are afforded the opportunity to learn and grow from the experiences.

The Driscoll and Glennon families donate so much time and energy in their volunteer work with the Squantum Community Youth Choir and drama productions to give local children the opportunity to display their hidden talents. They work with each child individually and have helped them find talents they didn't know they had and to improve on those talents each week.

I felt it was necessary to publicly recognize what the SCYC has done for the Squantum community and for sharing their talent with all who attends the wonderful performances.

It would be such a disservice to the local cable viewers not to share the show with them, so I am hoping that the Quincy Access Cable will air these wonderful shows for all to enjoy!!

Thank you.

Council Rejects City Employees Pay Survey Plan

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council for the second time in a few weeks, turned down Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's request for $5,000 to hire an outside consultant to make a salary survey for city employees.

The vote was 6 to 3 with Councillors Edna B. Austin, Thomas S. Burgin and David S. McIntosh concurring with the mayor's position.

"I am sorry for the 200 city employees who asked me for readjustments, mostly on the basis of inequalities," Della Chiesa said.

"The Council's action leaves me with three possibilities. I can forget about these requests, I can try to make adjustments myself or I can ask the Council to help me."

NOTICE IN TRAINS, WARNS

OLD COLONY TO CLOSE JUNE 30

Old Colony commuters saw the handwriting on the wall, warning them that the railroad line has only seven days left.

Notices were posted in all cars announcing that service will be discontinued at midnight June 30.

The signs blamed the legislature, which did not pass "appropriate and acceptable legislation," for the discontinuance of service.

New Haven Railroad President George Alpert has placed the price for a 12-month extension of service at $190,000, a sum flatly rejected by area communities.

Federal Officials Laud Quincy Senior Olympics

Federal officials lauded Quincy's Senior Olympic program during and after attending the recent 25th Senior Olympics program at Beechwood Community Life Center.

"It is clear that you (Quincy Senior Olympians) have known for a quarter of a century the fitness message we are now promoting nationwide," said Dr. Charlotte S. Yeh, FACEP, the Federal Health and Human Services Regional Administrator for Region 1 Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

Dr. Yeh and Bryan Golden, the Regional Director of the U.S. Health and Human Services Department, joined Mayor William Phelan for the Presentation of Awards ceremony recently at Beechwood.

In a personal note sent after the ceremony, Dr. Yeh wrote, "Thank you! Thank you for allowing us to join your awesome celebration of your seniors in Quincy! What an inspiration you are to all of us."

"It was fantastic to be able to take part in honoring Quincy's Senior Olympians," wrote both Yeh and Golden in a formal letter of thanks.

In addition, Beechwood's Director Sharron Beals said, "Dr. Yeh was impressed with our Olympians and astounded to learn we had five nonagenarians (90+) competing in our events this year."

Officials honored over 300 senior Olympians at the ceremony.

100-Year Old Tradition Revived In Houghs Neck

It's illumination time once again in Houghs Neck, a throwback to the days 100 years ago when Neckers decorated their homes with bunting and Japanese lanterns and were awarded ribbons for the Best Decorated House in the Neck.

The tradition was revived last year after the discovery of the award ribbon for 1908 with the Kissels of Winthrop Street adjudged the 2006 winner.

To enter the 2007 contest for the Best Dec'd House in the Neck, residents between the Pump and the Willows are urged to decorate the outside their homes and call Margaret LaForest at 617-471-1806 or email mlaforest01@hotmail.com to register.

The winner will be given a banner to hang outside his or her home along with bragging rights for 2007. Judges will select the winning home on Friday, June 29.

Celebrate Independence Day With Patriotic Cheesecake Pie

Each time he comes to dinner at our house, our seven year old grandson Christian always asks me if I baked an apple pie, his favorite. And I usually answer that I did.

However, this week with the abundance of blueberries, I came across a delicious recipe for a cheesecake with berries. Other berries can certainly be used, but I used the blueberries. I mixed an 8 ounce package with an 8 ounce can of blueberry filling and the combination was great. I use a store bought pie, they are a lot easier these days.

Patriotic Cheesecake Pie

1 8-ounce package of cream cheese, softened

- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup whipping cream (whipped)
- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell
- 1 8 ounce can blueberry filling
- 1-8 ounce fresh package of blueberries
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice

Add Strawberries or raspberries for decorating

First get the pie crust baked by following directions on the package. If you bake your own, bake until done.

If you use the combination of the two blueberries, the canned and fresh, I usually also add the lemon juice. If you just use the canned, you don't have to do anything.

Beat together the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla until smooth. Fold in the whipped cream. Spoon this into the pastry shell. Spoon the blueberry filling on top. Chill until set.

When serving, add strawberries or raspberries to top.

You can certainly use just the canned filling or just the fresh. If using the fresh, add 3/4 cup sugar and the lemon juice. (the lemon juice brings out the flavor of the blueberries.) I can't wait to see if Christian likes it!

Health Dept. Offers Tips To Survive Heat

ping mall, senior recreation area, library or movie theater and enjoy it while you can.

Wear loose, light-colored and lightweight clothing. If you have to go out of doors in the hot sun, wear a hat and try to stay out of the direct rays of the sun as much as possible.

And, one bit of advice you'll like, cut back on physical activity. If you feel you have to do pushups or walk to the mailbox, stop and rest at the first sign of fatigue, light headedness or feeling hot.

Learn the difference among heat stress, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

The early signs of heat stress are general discomfort, lack of energy and loss of appetite.

Symptoms of heat exhaustion are a severe cramping of muscles due to excess sweating and loss of salt from the body from exhaustion or high temperatures.

Your reaction should be to rest in a cool place and replenish lost fluids and salts unless you're on a sodium-restricted diet. If left untreated, heat exhaustion can lead to heat stroke.

Heatstroke is an extreme, serious and life-threatening condition where the body temperature rises sharply. Symptoms can include delirium, disorientation and a coma.

It is most likely to develop during a heat wave where the humidity is high and the temperatures are at or above 90 degrees for three or more consecutive days.

A person suffering from heat stroke needs to have his or her body temperature lowered by cooling the body surface with water and be transported to the hospital immediately.

If you have any severe reactions to the heat that cannot be alleviated by rest and fluids, seek medical attention immediately.

Elderly persons living alone should pay particular attention to the early warning signs of heat stress and make sure to contact neighbors, friends and family if they need assistance.

Quincy Delegation's Vote On Same-Sex Marriage Amendment

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy legislative delegation was split down the middle when came time to vote on a proposed constitutional ban on same-sex marriage.

The amendment was defeated 45 to 151 with 50 votes needed to put it on the ballot so that voters could have a crack at it in the 2008 election.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Ron Mariano were among those who chose to pull the plug on the amendment. Reps. Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers voted to send it on to the voters.

Mariano had been against the amendment all along.

"In the past, every change in the constitution has been to protect someone's rights," he said. "I did not want to be a member of the first group to take away someone's rights."

Morrissey surprised everyone by switching his vote. The question had to be voted on by two consecutive legislatures and he had approved the amendment in the 2005-06 session.

"It was one of the hardest votes I ever made in my 30 years in public office," he said. "I grappled with it for days on end."

"It's not easy to stand up for a minority. How in fairness and equity can you put language in the constitution to take away someone's rights?"

"I could not look at some of these families and treat them differently from someone else. You're passing judgment on someone else's happiness."

"The people who would get hurt the most by it are the children in a same-sex relationship. Older people can take it. Kids can't."

Morrissey said he could very easily have voted the other less risky way.

"When the roll call opened," he said, "I saw they had the votes to defeat the amendment. I could have voted for it but it was not the right thing to do."

Morrissey said he is getting reaction from both sides to his vote, praise from some, disappointment from others.

"Hopefully," he said, "in the end people will look at all my votes when they consider me."

Ayers said the legislative action was a tough issue for him, too, "but I didn't want to deny the people the opportunity to vote."

"I got thousands of e-mails and phone calls on the issue and one thing was overwhelmingly clear — the residents of Quincy wanted an opportunity to vote on the issue."

"That's why I voted the way I did."

Tobin was not available for comment.

The same sex marriage amendment is now dead, at least until the 2012 state election, the next time two consecutive legislative session will have had a chance to pass it on.

Meantime, said Ron Mariano, "the next generation may think nothing of it."

Farmers' Market Opens July 6

Quincy Farmer's Market will open Friday, July 6 in the Hancock Municipal parking lot across from Quincy District Court.

Operating hours will be from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The market continues every Friday through the summer until the end of October.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place on opening day at 11:30 a.m. Quincy Farmers' Market features only produce grown locally and customers can meet the growers.

Farmers serving Quincy this year are: Almquist Flower Land of Quincy, Freitas and Sons Farm of Middleboro, The Shepherd's Gate Goat Cheese of Holland, ma; Five Loaves Bakery, Spencer; Stillman Farm and Greenhouses of Lunenburg.

The produce is picked ripe, the day of the market, so it is at its peak nutrition, flavor and freshness.

July features are area lettuce, summer squash,

The Right Way to Clean a Grill

Q. I'm a little confused by two conflicting sets of grilling directions. My brother-in-law tells me that a barbecue grill works best when thoroughly clean, including the cooking surfaces and the interior. My uncle tells me to just fire up the grill for about 10 to 20 minutes and let the heat burn away any old drippings. I'm still learning this "art" of grilling. What do you recommend? — Stacy in Secaucus, N.J.

A. I'd go with your brother-in-law's advice. Relying on high heat to burn away drippings is not the most reliable way to clean a grill. The drippings will char, releasing less-than-healthy byproducts, and if fresh food is cooked on a grill with charred drippings still attached to the underside, those byproducts could affect the food. In addition, the heat may burn away drippings from the cooking and heating surfaces, but it probably won't affect materials that have dropped into the bottom of the grill box.

A dirty, greasy grill interior can cause uneven, inefficient heating in charcoal and gas grills. Airflow is very important for charcoal grills so that the coals heat evenly and last a long time. Gas grills have various components to safely transport gas from the supply tank to the burner element, and grease, debris and rust can compromise this system.

So, clean the grill interior completely before cooking. Grill cleaners like Goo Gone (available in most stores that sell grilling supplies) will loosen up grease and soot deposits. Brush debris away from surfaces and wash the cooking surface thoroughly in the sink, with soap and water. DO let the grill heat up for at least 10 minutes before cooking, and clean the grill as soon as possible afterward (let it cool down completely first).

A well-maintained outdoor grill will last for years and provide reliable, steady heat — the most important element in becoming an outdoor grilling artist.

Hints For Homeowners

Get Into The HVAC Zone

(NAPS) — Just as you can turn on and off the lights depending on what room of the house you're in, you can use zoning systems to adjust the temperature in different areas of the home.

This works to eliminate the hot and cold spots typically found from room to room and helps maintain a more consistent temperature throughout the home. A zoning system provides the same kind of flexibility in controlling heating and cooling that homeowners have with electricity, so comfort can be increased while saving on energy bills.

With a zoning system, the home can be divided into two, three or four separate areas (or "zones") with similar heating and cooling needs. A system of thermostats and dampers automatically adjusts the level of comfort in each zone.

Many homeowners confuse a zoning system with having multiple independent heating, ventilation and air-conditioning (HVAC) units. Individual units on each floor of the house, however, is not the same as zoning.

Zoning uses dampers to direct heating and cooling from a single HVAC system to more than one area. For example, a two-zone system will have two dampers with each one controlling the airflow to a zone. In addition, the zoning system will have a controller that adjusts the dampers and HVAC system to heat and cool each zone. A zone controller simply connects multiple thermostats to a single HVAC system.

According to the heating and cooling experts at York, a brand of Johnson Controls, zoning is especially beneficial if you have certain rooms or areas that are always warmer or cooler than the rest of the home. Zoning lets homeowners direct the system to automatically provide more heating or cooling to a specific area, without wasting energy to heat or cool the entire home.

In many cases, proper zoning can result in operating cost savings of as much as 30 percent. While zoning does not actually increase the efficiency of your furnace, heat pump or air conditioner, it does increase the overall efficiency of the HVAC system by directing heating or cooling only where needed.

To learn more about energy-efficient HVAC products and how to install a zoning system in your home, call (800) 910-YORK.

Choosing Home Colors

(NAPS) — Did you know that there are more than 200 shades of blue and more than 100 shades of white? Choosing a paint color can be overwhelming. Fortunately, finding just the right colors for your home can be easy if you follow four tips from the experts:

1. Find your inspiration. Just because you haven't thought about wall colors before doesn't mean you don't have favorites. Start with something you love—a fabric, a pillow or a piece of artwork that you are truly drawn to can serve as the inspiration for decorating.

If you still have no ideas, try the Color Sense Game, an engaging mix of psychology and color science that can help identify and communicate your tastes. It's available from Pittsburgh Paints at www.voiceofcolor.com.

2. It's never just about one color. What you want is a color harmony family that includes a range of colors.

Do you prefer colors that remind you of the sea, the forest or do you want bold contrast? Decorating requires the interplay of colors and light to be appealing.

3. Choose a collection. Good paint manufacturers have harmonious collections of colors to choose from.

Pittsburgh Paints offers innovative five-color color swatches that provide color opportunities for not only paint, but all the decorating elements in your space.

Use the 60:30:10 ratio of color. Choose a dominant color that will be used on 60 percent of the room (walls, floors, fabric, furniture). Then choose an intermediate color for ceilings, cabinets and smaller furniture. Finally, incorporate one or two accents of the third color (trim and molding, pillows, rugs and accessories).

To create a room of interest and warmth, your decorating palette should appear intentional. To achieve this, each key color must appear at least twice in a décor.

4. Try it on. You wouldn't buy clothing without trying it on so why go out and buy a whole gallon of paint?

Paint manufacturers offer two-ounce trial-size paint samples. That way, you can see what the paint looks like on the wall. These samples can be purchased at retail paint stores or online at www.voiceofcolor.com.

When applying, make sure the test area is clean and dry and remember that some colors may need two coats.

Semigloss paint is very forgiving for stains, and highly reflective gloss is the toughest and most durable.

CONGRATULATIONS!!! Jennifer Kern

Spam Scams

Spam email is like coming home from a long day's work to a bunch of uninvited guests in your living room. It's annoying and if you're not careful, you may get fooled into one of the "Spam Scams." Most of the offers are for items you probably don't need. For example, medications like Viagra or employment opportunities show up on children's emails. Emails for free gift cards, (they want to confirm your email address to send more emails) and insurance companies are part of the continuous bombardment.

I recently received an email from a Canadian online pharmacy, advertising medicines much cheaper than in the U.S.. Was this offer too good to be true? I researched this particular company online by "Googleing" and came up with many angry people and websites stating that this was a spam scam. This is what a Vancouver website has to say about this type of scam:

Overseas internet companies (and possibly some companies from within the USA) have been email marketing their pharmacy products to American citizens... and here's the scam: they are pretending to be Canadian Online Internet Pharmacies, when in fact they are not. The scam works like this: (A) The scam artist sends emails touting his/her online pharmaceuticals. (B) The email is disguised to make it look like it's originating from a Canadian Web Site. (C) The scam artist makes it very difficult for the reader to see that the email is not coming from the purported Canadian Web Site. (D) When the reader clicks on the link to go to the web site... it actually takes them to an overseas web site (so far, most of the one's I've seen point to European web sites). (E) The scam artist not only makes it very difficult for the reader to see actually where the email is truly originating from... but the scam artist also makes it very difficult for the reader to actually see the true location/ownership of the web site. The dangers of purchasing products from these phony pharmacies is obvious; you don't know who your really dealing with, and you don't know what you're really purchasing. If these scam artists were willing to fraudulently pose as a Canadian Internet Pharmacy, they probably wouldn't be too averse to shipping you fraudulent product either.

When purchasing your medication online, be sure to confirm it is a legitimate company. Applying or ingesting medication bogus or wrong medication is dangerous! How do these companies get your personal information? Usually, you give it to them inadvertently. When installing free programs downloaded from the Internet like many of the "Browser Toolbars" or other additions to your web browser, these additional programs install spyware without your knowledge. Spyware applications then watch what websites you go to, can even record and store information you type into forms and then report this back to a third party you never knew about. This third party is then free to sell your information to others or email/mail you directly themselves.

In order to stop receiving these types of emails, I had tried to create a filter but somehow, it still let through junk email. I have since used a Gmail (Google) account, which has sent me two unfiltered spam messages in the year that I have had it. If any spam does come through, it sends it to a "Spam" folder, which you can go through and check out if you want just in case something got filtered out of your inbox that shouldn't have (which was never the case with me). You can also just delete all of the spam at once without even going through the messages at all. If you can't fix the spam from entering your email and want to do something about it, contact your email provider or your Internet service provider for help. If you would like to read what others have to say, check out <http://www.topix.net/forum/news/spam> or you can search the forums at HYPERLINK "http://www.techguy.com" www.techguy.com to see how serious this problem has become.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, June 14, 2007, at approximately 9:45 a.m., Officers Michael Duran and Dennis Keenan were dispatched to Edinboro Road on "a report of a possible breaking and entering in progress."

Enroute to the address, the dispatcher informed the officers that an unknown female caller stated the name of a female attempting to break into a side door. The officers recognized the name of the female suspect from past incidents and were aware that she had two outstanding warrants.

As the officers neared the address, the dispatcher learned from the caller that the suspect just left in a brown Corolla. Officer Duran saw the suspect vehicle at the opposite end of the street and quickly caught up to it, then pulled alongside to see that the female suspect was in the car. The suspect vehicle was stopped on Washington Street near River Street and the suspect was asked to step out of the vehicle.

Once she did this, she was immediately handcuffed and informed of the two warrants. The officers told the female suspect that they were there to investigate a possible break-in. The suspect said that the house was her mother's and had permission to be inside. She then provided Officer Duran with her mother's phone number so that the mother could clear up the matter.

As Officer Duran was about to call, Officer Keenan found three Century Bank checks from the mother's checking account hanging out of the front sweatshirt pocket of the suspect! Officer Duran learned from the mother that her daughter sometimes stops by the house to do her laundry, but was not to be in the house for any other reason.

When told about the checks, the mother said that her daughter was not supposed to have the checks in her possession. She did not want her daughter arrested but did want the checks confiscated. After transporting the suspect to the station, the checks were shredded by Officer Keenan.

Officer Duran checked the suspect's pocketbook and found two Adderall pills and one Klonopin pill wrapped in plastic wrap and not in a prescription bottle. The female suspect, a 31-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with the warrants. Possession of Class C (Klonopin) and Possession of Class E (Adderall). Officer Duran conducted a check of the operator's Drivers license, which showed that his license was revoked, so the 43-year-old Quincy resident was also placed under arrest.

Phelan Committee Trades Campaign Signs For Community Service

Mayor William Phelan has asked his campaign volunteers to forgo periodic sign-holdings, in order to perform community service in Quincy.

The campaign will perform major community service projects twice a month during the campaign season in place of scheduled sign-holdings, he said.

"It occurred to me during a recent sign-holding in Norfolk Downs that we have 50 or so talented, community-minded people standing alongside a road for two hours when we could have been doing something more positive for our community," said Phelan. "I broached the idea with our volunteers and they loved it. We will now put our talented team to do great work in our neighborhoods, and with our seniors and non-profit groups."

The campaign will still conduct weekly visibilities at various sites throughout the city. The community service will replace one of the three regularly scheduled sign-holdings every other week.

"I am fortunate to be surrounded by people who love this city and share my desire to constantly make it better," added Phelan. "The campaign community service is a new idea and a little different, but I believe it will make Quincy a better place to live and that's what my campaign is all about."

The committee is compiling a list of service projects and there is limited space for additional projects. If you are a non-profit, a garden club, or other organization in need, call the Phelan Campaign Headquarters at (617) 328-3111. Availability is limited.

"We are conscious of the difference between community service and taking work away from honest, hard-working people," said Phelan. "Our projects are being planned with that sensitivity in mind. There's a lot of good that we can accomplish with the great, community-minded folks we have volunteering on the Phelan campaign."

For more information, call the Phelan Campaign Headquarters at (617) 328-3111.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Vacation Fitness

Q. I am planning to take several vacations this summer. Recently I have started seeing good results from my workout routine, and I don't want to lose my momentum. How can I modify my fitness program so I don't slip backward while I am on vacation?

A. Vacations are a time for relaxation and fun, which may make fitting in 30 minutes to complete your abdominal routine quite challenging, not to mention boring. This challenge can be met and conquered through creative thinking and planning. Staying motivated and focused on your workout routine while on vacation can be as easy as developing a plan ahead of time. You have worked hard, and now it is time to play hard. All you have worked toward will not be lost while on vacation.

Let your body show you what it has learned. Each workout that you have completed has taught your heart, bones and muscles to become stronger and more equipped to deal with the activities of everyday life.

You may notice that you are able to handle your luggage with ease, rush through the airport without getting out of breath, or take part in a hike or sightseeing tour that would have previously exhausted you. Those examples test your body on what you have been teaching it.

Although this may not seem like a structured workout, remember that part of becoming fit is allowing what you do in the gym to be demonstrated somewhere in your daily life.

Look for physical activities to participate in while on vacation. Find activities such as a biking tour, swimming, canoeing, tennis or even walking on the beach to keep your body moving. Allow this time for your body to experience different forms of exercise. You may find that you wouldn't mind adding some these activities to your fitness plan when you return home.

Inquire about a fitness facility at your hotel or resort. If you would like to continue with your current program while away, ask what type of fitness amenities are available. Knowing that there will be a treadmill waiting for you upon arrival may make for a smooth transition. If there is no fitness facility on premise, inquire about any nearby that you make be able to pay a guest fee to attend.

Relax, have fun and enjoy that change to your normal schedule. Your body will appreciate it.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

The Sun And Skin Cancer: A Year-Round Concern?

(NAPS) - Looks can be deceiving.

If it is not 90 degrees and sunny outside, using sunscreen may be the last thing on your mind. Yet, with skin cancer on the rise at an alarming rate in the United States, with one in three cancers skin cancer, sun protection needs to be top of the mind, year-round.

"As a pathologist, I know that most types of skin cancer can be treated successfully if caught in the early stages," said Margaret H. Neal, M.D., FACP, a board-certified pathologist in Tallahassee, Fla. "However, when skin cancer remains undetected, it can lead to serious and sometimes fatal results."

Pathologists, physicians who examine tissues and fluids to diagnose skin cancer and other diseases, urge patients to alert their primary care physicians to any warning signs that may indicate a potential problem.

The three most common types of skin cancer are melanoma, basal cell carcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma. Cases of melanoma, the most aggressive form of skin cancer, have increased over the past 10 years more rapidly than any other form of cancer, with more than 50,000 cases reported each year. Basal cell carcinoma is the most common of all cancers, affecting 800,000 Americans each year.

Symptoms And Treatment

While these three types of skin cancer can vary greatly, each of them can be successfully treated when detected early. Some symptoms seem harmless and are too often ignored. According to the College of American Pathologists, possible symptoms may include changes in a mole or pigmented area, including variations in size, shape, height or color of moles, nonhealing sores, reddish patches similar to psoriasis, a shiny bump, pink growth or scarred area.

Early Detection Important

If cancer is suspected, your primary care doctor or specialist will take a biopsy. A pathologist will then examine those damaged cells and work with your primary doctor or specialist to determine the best possible treatment options for you. Treatments vary based on diagnosis, from topical medications to surgery or radiation.

Early detection can save your life. "As a physician who diagnoses cancer regularly, I urge you to make regular appointments with your specialist based on your skin type, risk factors and family medical history," says Dr. Neal.

It is important to remember that skin damage happens year-round. The best defense against skin cancer is to stay out of the sun, in any season. But if that is not possible, always use sunscreen.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

SWEET!

Is it possible to reduce the occurrence of tooth decay and chew gum at the same time? The answer is "yes," as long as you chew sugarless gum with a natural sweetener called xylitol. This artificial sweetener, a natural sugar alcohol, is an extract derived from the bark of trees. It is also found in small quantities in raspberries, strawberries, plums, corn, endive, and mushrooms. Xylitol keeps the bacteria in the mouth that cause plaque (most notably, Streptococcus mutans) from sticking to the surface of the teeth. As a result of reducing the amount of bacteria-laden plaque, xylitol helps prevent new cavities from forming. This makes sugarless gum with xylitol a good choice for chewing, especially after meals.

What kind of, if any, gum do you chew? Our mission is to treat every person coming to us for dental care as if they were the only person in our practice. We will strive to produce superb, comprehensive dentistry in a time frame that is appropriate for each individual. Our promise to you is that we will accomplish this in a non-threatening, relaxed and trustworthy environment. You'll find our staff to be both friendly and knowledgeable. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We are dedicated to your oral health and offer a variety of procedures to help achieve a beautiful smile. Our office is located at 44 Greenfield Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In order to be effective as a cavity preventive agent, xylitol must be the only artificial sweetener in sugarless gum. It cannot be mixed with other sweeteners.

Four Numbers Retired In Memory Of Patrick White, Dennis Thomson, Joseph Conte and John O'Connell

Quincy Cruises To 7-2 Win Over Morrisette

By SEAN BRENNAN

On Monday night at Adams Field, the players and coaches of Quincy Post 95 and Morrisette Post, along with the Quincy Park and Recreation Department and friends, family and fans honored the memory of the late Patrick White, Dennis Thomson, Joseph Conte and John O'Connell in a moving ceremony before the game.

All four men were remembered for their love of the game of baseball, the camaraderie they all shared with teammates and coaches and the love they all had for their family and friends.

In a heart-touching conclusion, all four had their uniform numbers retired on the right field fence. Numbers: 7 (White), 8 (Thomson), 22 (Conte) and 33 (O'Connell) will line the fence for all ballplayers, young and old, to forever remember in the years to come.

When the game got underway, Quincy Post 95 (7-1)-struck first. Playing as the visitors, Post 95's Mike Jay and John Alexander had back-to-back singles and both would eventually come around to score on a passed ball and a Tom Conley RBI sacrifice fly to give Post 95 the early 2-0 lead.

Morrisette (4-4-1) came right back in the bottom of the first to cut the deficit in half. Joe Garland led off the inning with a walk, and after Joe Vialpando popped to second, Ricky Salvucci singled sending Garland to third. Shortstop John Orlando's force out scored Garland and the score was 2-1 after one inning.

Morrisette starting pitcher Glen Misho (7 inn, 9 hits, 7 runs, 4 Ks, 4 BBs, L) settled down in the second. After hitting Dan Richards with a pitch to start the frame, Misho set down Tom Power, Jay Lewis and Mike Leone 1-2-3.

In the bottom of the second, Morrisette would have what would turn out to be their best shot at rattling Quincy Post 95 starting pitcher Jared Kenney (7 inn, 9 hits, 2 runs, 4 Ks, 4 BBs, W), but a big double play ended that threat.

Jonathon Pelletier grounded to second for the first out, but Kenney followed that by issuing a free pass to Steve Sullivan. With Sullivan on first, Matt Rodriguez hit a one-bouncer right back to Kenney on the mound. Kenney's throw to second was off the mark, and Morrisette had first and second with just one out.

Number nine hitter John Ainsley hit a bullet to third on Kenney's next pitch, but third baseman John Alexander stepped on third and threw to first, double-play, inning over.

Quincy Post would add one more run in the top of the third. Alexander singled with one out, stole second, and took third on a passed ball and Tom Conley (1-for-2, 2 RBI, BB) knocked in him with a RBI single to right. Mike Horgan lined into a double play to end the inning.

things got interesting.

Number nine hitter John Ainsley smacked a line drive into right field that looked like it was trapped in the outfield. With the runners off on contact, Morrisette plated two runs and the game was tied at 3-3. But the men in blue saw it differently. After a meeting between the two umpires, they decided that the ball had been caught, and the runs would not count.

With the score 3-1 in the top of the sixth, Quincy Post 95 put the game away by scoring three times with two outs. After Richards and Power failed to reach base, Jay Lewis drew a two-out walk. Leadoff man Mike Leone followed with a single on a close play at first, and Mike Jay scored Lewis with a double.

John Alexander blasted a two-run double off the right field fence scoring Leone and Jay. Alexander hurt himself rounding second (twisted ankle) and had to be removed from the game, but the damage was done.

Morrisette would score one more time in the bottom of the seventh on a Steve Connolly RBI single, but Kenney struck out Pelletier to end the game.

"Jared Kenney pitched a great game," said Quincy Post 95 manager Dan Sweeney. "He was the star of the game. He was helped by the solid defense behind him. Morrisette is a talented team and we will need to be on top of our game when we play them again this Saturday."

Quincy Post 95 and Morrisette will play again this Saturday beginning 8 p.m. at Adams Field.

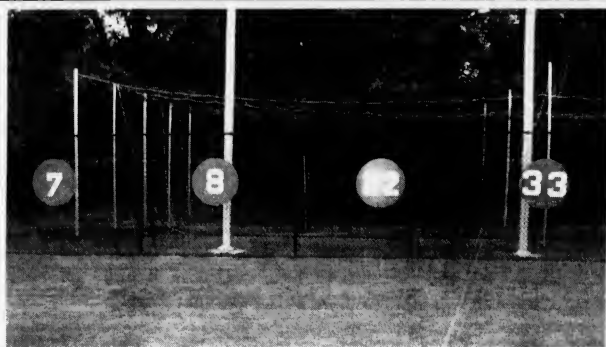

with registration on Friday, July 13 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Squantum Yacht Club, 646 Quincy Shore Drive, Wollaston Beach, or by calling Don McGilvray at (617) 328-5730; or at the SYC Web site, www.squantumyc.org.

Morrisette Edges Holbrook, Bows To Braintree

By DOMENIC POLI

Morrisette Legion dropped to 3-3-1 after being on the receiving end of a 6-0 game against Braintree Post 86 Friday night.

A feeling that nothing would go right swept through the Morrisette bench after being struck with an omen in the top of the first inning.

After starting pitcher Steve Connolly allowed Braintree's first batter, Tom Huddleston, to single into left field and then hit the next batter, Dan Gausnar, with a pitch, Morrisette coaches knew something was wrong.

Connolly was forced out of the game with pain in his arm.

Ray Cattaneo, Morrisette's manager, said the area around Connolly's elbow hurt from being hit by a pitch the day before in a game against Canton.

"It's nothing internal. It just hurts where he got hit," Cattaneo said.

Morrisette coach Mark Vialpando removed Connolly and brought in Mike Joyce from off the bench.

Joyce then let the next hitter, Brendan Wheeler, punch a single to right to load the bases.

When a pitch got by catcher Matt Rodriguez to the backstop, Huddleston crossed the plate to give his team a 1-0 lead.

Some solid defense would end the threat, however.

On a high-chopper to the right side, Steve Sullivan timed his leap perfectly, pulling ing the ball out of the sky and firing it home to get the force out.

Then, Chris Dominguez knocked a fly ball to right. Jonathan Pelletier settled under it for the second out and hurled it to the plate to prevent a tag-up. His pinpoint throw kept the runner at third.

Another fly ball to Pelletier ended the inning on the next at-bat.

But the Morrisette bats were quiet — as they would be for the whole game — in its half of the frame.

After Braintree got another run in the second inning, the scoreboard did not get much of a workout the next two innings.

In the fourth, Huddleston lead things off with a single. Gausnar then reached on an error by the pitcher. A blast to the outfield fence by Wheeler brought Huddleston and Gausnar to score, making it 4-0.

A sacrifice by Kevin Lyons moved Wheeler to third, where he was driven in with a double by Dominguez. Braintree kept the trend going as another double scored Dominguez to increase the score to 6-0.

"[Braintree is] a hell of a hitting team," Vialpando said. "And Joyce isn't a fastball pitcher — he's more of a offspeed pitcher and he's got a curveball and I think he just hung a few up there. And it's just a great hitting team."

When the Morrisette sticks remained silent for the rest of the game, Braintree wrapped up the shutout victory.

tory.

Despite not coming away with a 'W', Vialpando said he still saw some positive things from his team.

"Joe Garland made a nice shoestring catch on a line [drive] in left field and Johnny Orlando was just stellar at shortstop — he's like clockwork out there," he said.

He added that the game was not a total bust — that he saw some positive things from his team and that soon the ball will bounce back in his team's favor.

"We had that one bad inning. If we don't have that inning we're looking at a 2-0 game here. Things can change on a dime in this game," he said. "But, that's baseball."

On Sunday, Morrisette scored a 7-6 victory over Holbrook Post. With the victory, Morrisette ran its record to 4-3-1.

Steve Connolly (2-1-1) was the winning pitcher. He allowed five runs on 12 hits, while striking out five batters.

Morrisette trailed 6-3 entering the top of the seventh, but pinch hitter Mike Joyce drew a walk, Joe Vialpando singled and Ricky Salvucci reached base via a hit batsman to load the bases with no outs.

John Orlando capitalized on a bad pitch, knocking in two runs with a double and Jon Pelletier scored Salvucci and Orlando with a two-run triple.

Steve Sullivan finished the game 2-for-3.

SCOTT DEWART

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"I KNOW NOT WHAT COURSE OTHERS MAY TAKE, BUT AS FOR ME . . . GIVE ME LIBERTY OR GIVE ME DEATH!" . . . Patrick Henry

In 1776 an old man awaited eagerly the word that the Declaration of Independence had been signed. He had been given the duty of ringing a bell to let the citizenry know the news. A small boy sped the message to the old man and the sound of the bell was heard throughout Philadelphia. The last note pealed from the bell in 1835 when a crack appeared. But our Liberty Bell remains a symbol of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Since that time, other cracks have appeared in the society of America. Many have been mended. But on July Fourth each year, Americans should unite to pledge new allegiance and patriotism to the United States of America. . .

A funeral Mass for Eleanor R. Pendleton, 90, of North Weymouth, a retired dietitian, was celebrated Monday in Saint Jerome's Church, 632 Bridge St., Weymouth.

Mrs. Pendleton died June 22 at home after a long illness.

Born in Melrose, she was raised and educated in Everett and Medford schools. She was a graduate of Medford High School. She was also a graduate of Iowa State University.

She had lived in North Weymouth for many years.

Mrs. Pendleton was employed as a dietitian. She began her career at Milton Hospital and had worked many years at Quincy Hospital. She retired in 1982.

She was a member of the Quincy Hospital Ladies Auxiliary and the Scituate Women's Club.

Wife of the late George C. Pendleton, she is survived by five sons, Dean R. Pendleton of Woonsocket, R.I.; Randolph K. Pendleton of East Weymouth; Jerome J. Pendleton of Yarmouth; George C. Pendleton of Weymouth and Martin M. Pendleton of Milford, N.H.; a daughter, Mary M. Bates of Weymouth; 16 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Burial was in North Weymouth Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.,

Memorial donations may be made to Beacon Hospice, 15 Allerton St., Boston, MA 02119.

Alice Walsh, 85

Retired Account Processor

A funeral Mass for Alice Walsh, 85, of Quincy, a retired account processor at State Street Bank, was celebrated Wednesday at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Miss Walsh died Sunday at South Shore Hospital.

She worked at State Street Bank for more than 30 years, retiring in 1977.

She enjoyed traveling. She is survived by a sister, Mary Symonds of Weymouth; four nieces and three nephews.

Burial was in Old Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to Sacred Heart School, 20 Glover Ave., North Quincy, MA 02171.

Doris T. Finegan, 79

Clerk

A funeral Mass for Doris T. (Boland) Finegan, 79, of Quincy, formerly of Quincy, a retired clerk, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at Saint John's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Finegan died Sunday at Weymouth Health Care Center, Weymouth.

Born in Marlborough, she had lived in Braintree before moving to Quincy 19 years ago.

She was employed as a clerk with the Mass. State Lottery in Braintree for 16 years. She retired in 1992.

Mrs. Finegan is survived by three sons, Michael F. Finegan of Worcester, Stephen J. Finegan of Rockland and James F. Finegan of Mansfield; a daughter, Joyce M. Leary of Delaware; and nine grandchildren.

Burial will be in Brookdale Cemetery, Dedham.

Squantum Faith Community Anniversaries

The Friends of Star of the Sea are celebrating a few anniversaries these days.

On July 2, the Friends will celebrate 91 years since the first Catholic Mass was celebrated in Squantum in 1916.

On July 5, the Friends will celebrate the two-year anniversary since their church was reopened and designated as a chapel of Sacred Heart parish in North Quincy.

The Friends have also been celebrated the one-year anniversary since the Vatican suspended Boston Archbishop Sean O'Malley's decree of suppression against the parish.

"It is very hard to believe that Star of the Sea has already been reopened for two years," said Sean Glennon, co-chairperson of the Friends of Star of the Sea. "We certainly celebrate the reopening of the church, but we still have much work to do. Personally, I'm very disappointed that in two years, the organ still has not been replaced and that a choir has not been reestablished."

"We are looking forward to a time with the sacraments of baptisms, weddings, and funerals are celebrated again," Glennon said. "It is at these times that we truly come together as a faith community."

The Friends would also like to see religious education classes available to the children in their own neighborhood.

"We look forward to having Sacred Heart provide a renewed pastoral presence in Squantum," said Maureen Mazrimas, co-chairperson of the Friends of Star of the Sea.

In the meantime, Glennon and Mazrimas stay in regular contact with their canonical advocate in Rome, where their appeal of suppression is currently pending before the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura.

"It's good to see that the process works and we were rightfully reopened pending resolution by the Vatican," Mazrimas added. "It's sad to think that a vibrant, engaged and prayerful community could be shuttered due to the number of worshippers. In reality, we had no fewer congregants per priest than our welcoming parish."

First Baptist Church Children Activities

First Baptist Church of Wollaston will host two opportunities for young people in the Quincy area this summer.

The Harmony Youth Chorus will be held July 9-13 from 9 a.m. until noon.

Boys and girls of all faiths and cultures who have completed grades 1-7 may register. Cost is $25 per child or $50 per family.

Charles Dillingham from the Braintree Public School's music department will direct the chorus.

A second program, called "Tiny Treasures," will be held Aug. 6-10 from 9 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. The workshop will be directed by Jan Burton. Boys and girls ages 9-13 may register. Cost per child is $20. The group is limited to register early.

Each participant will assemble one end of a castle great hall to create either a storybook room or a wizard's room, making a table, benches, wall hangings and other castle items.

To register or for more information, call the church office at 617-472-0824.

Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will have Sunday worship at 10:30 a.m.

The Adult Bible class beings at 9 a.m.

The Rev. Dr. Susan J. Jarek-Glidden will conduct the service. Lector will be Ann Giger. Ushers are Jeanne Couillard and Dottie Hall.

Coffee hour hosts are Kathy Emerson, Linda Johnson and Karin Paul.

All are welcome. The church is handicap accessible.

First Church Of Squantum

The First Church of Squantum Book Club will meet Tuesday, July 10 at 7 p.m. in the church parlor, corner of Huckins and Bellevue Rds., Squantum.

The book to be discussed this month is Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice. The book selection for August is How To Make an American Quilt written by Whitney Otto.

The book club's August meeting is Aug. 7.

Anyone with an interest in reading and sharing the ideas contained in the books discussed each month is invited to attend.

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have a Sunday Worship, Communion and Baptism and One Room Sunday School at 10 a.m.

Mite Thrift Shop Closes For Summer Friday

The Mite Box Thrift Shop at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St.,

Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Vision of the Rainbow."

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers.

Wollaston, will close for the summer Friday, June 29.

The shop will hold its annual "End of the Season" sale

Following the worship service there will be fellowship time in the Allen Parlor where light refreshments will be served.

Wednesday, June 27 through Friday, June 29, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All items are discounted.

Squantum Christian Fellowship Bible Activities

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children to its "Avalanche Ranch: A Wild Ride Through God's Word!" July 16-20 at the Squantum School from 9 a.m. to noon.

"This year, our church is a stampede of excitement," says Pastor Mike Fehan. "Our Avalanche Ranch program will provide fund and memorable Bible activities for kids ages 3-11.

"Each day, they will sing catchy songs, act out a Bible story, enjoy some horseplay, down Chuck Wagon chow, and make a variety of cow-poke crafts. Kids will also collect Memory Buddies daily, and make teddy bears for orphans in needy lands,"

Pastor Fehan said the activities are exciting way for kids to learn more about God's love. "Each day at Showtime Roundup, parents can see a slide show of the kids' activities. We hope this adventure will get everyone wild about God!"

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive aspect opens up, allowing you to make some important changes in a personal situation. Remember to seek balance and avoid extremes as you proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good week to get out and enjoy the fine times you missed while you were so deep in those workaday projects. Be sure to share it with that special person.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Work and play are in balance this week. However, expect news that could tip things toward the workplace for quite a while. But all to a good end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're more productive on the job than you have been in some time. That's good. But be careful not to overlook some situations developing in your private life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been doing a lot for others (as usual). But now it's time to focus on your needs, including finally going on that long-delayed trip you've been hoping to make.

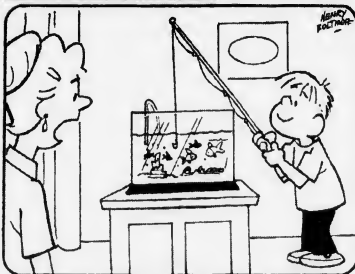

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's all smoothly going on 'twixt you and that very special person in your life. But a colleague causes some disruption on the job that you might be called on to help settle.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to the needs of others. But you're no pushover. You would make a fine teacher, psychologist or minister.

Girls' Basketball Clinic Begins July 2

The Quincy Recreation Department announces that their summer girls' basketball clinic will begin next week, July 2, 3, 5 and 6. Limited openings are still available.

The girls' basketball clinic will be held at North Quincy

High School from 8 a.m. to 12 noon. The cost of the program is $70. Brian Buckley, head coach of girls' basketball at Scituate High School, will lead the clinic.

Registrations are being accepted at the Quincy Recreation office, One Merrymount Parkway, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Registration can also be done online at QuincyRec.com. For additional information, contact the QRD at (617) 376-1394.

Quincy Recreation's Boating, Sailing Registration Underway

The Quincy Recreation Department's Ryan Boathouse Sailing and Boating Program's registration gets underway June 27 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m., at Pageant Field and will continue throughout the summer at the Ryan Boathouse.

Rowing, sailing and canoeing classes are available Monday through Thursday for children ages 8-16. Children must pass a swim test at the Lincoln Hancock Pool in order to participate. Lessons begin July 2 and continue through August 14.

The Boathouse will be open for adult kayaking and family boating on June 30 and July 1 from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. Fees are $35 for one youth, an additional $20 for the second child, and an additional $20 for a third child. Fees for one adult are $45 and $20 for any additional adult. The Family Membership fee is $75.

For further information, contact the QRD at (617) 376-1-FUN.

Recreation Summer Playground Programs Start July 2

The Quincy Recreation Department announces that their summer playground program will begin on July 2 at eighteen locations with supervised activities for boys and girls ages 6-16.

The playgrounds are open from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, weather permitting. The free program offers supervised activities that include active games and sports as well as arts and crafts and weekly sports competitions.

There are special events and weekly field trips to local attractions. In addition to the high school and college staff who are assigned to each playground, a sports specialist and arts and crafts specialist visit each location in a regular rotation.

Registration is done at the playground and continues throughout the summer to accommodate youngsters who may return from vacation or summer school programs. Participants must be residents of Quincy, and may attend the program of their choice.

The locations of the supervised playgrounds are: Faxon Park, Kincaide, Adams Park/Bradford Street, O'Rourke, Forbes Hill, Wollaston School grounds, Perkins Field, Heron Road/Boyson, Palmer Park, LaBrique, Fore River Field, Great Hill/Chapel, Squantum, Montclair/Bishop, Fenno Street, Cavanaugh Field, Mass Fields, and Beechwood Knoll School grounds.

The playgrounds will be staffed until Tuesday, August 14. Additional information can be obtained by calling the QRD office, (617) 376-1394

QUINCY HIGH School Principal Frank Santoro congratulates student Sheng Lan Chen for his championship status in table tennis competition. Other finalists for the day included Terry Szeto. This is the second year Quincy High School has offered this activity after school. The club is possible as a result of volunteers and the hard work of guidance counselor Chik Ching Law. Upwards of 50 students participate daily the sport club. Quincy High School seeks other schools and organizations interested in competitive play.

Supporters Helping QEA Pay $150,000 Fine

At this time, neither side is claiming victory.
Under the new contract, Phillips said that some of his members will be taking a pay cut while others will boost their income with a 17% pay hike over the five years. During that period, the teachers' contribution to health insurance will increase from 10% to 20% and their co-pay from $5 to $10.

Mayor William Phelan has not publicly commented on the contract since the strike ended. However, through his spokesman David Murphy, Phelan issued the following statement:

"The mayor is pleased that the QEA understands the need to control the taxpayers' exposure to the unrelenting growth of health care costs," Phelan called the issue "very important to Quincy taxpayers."

Meanwhile, local individual donors and unions from across the state are offering their help, in small amounts but large morale boosts, as the QEA faces the $150,000 fine.

"We are receiving some totally unsolicited support," Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association (QEA), said when contacted this week. "Right now we have checks (unions) from 30 cities."

Phillips said the donations will be put in a separate trust account established by QEA lawyers. The amounts aren't large but the impact is, according to Phillips who declined to name the donors because he said, "We haven't even sent thank you notes."

However, Phillips believes that the Quincy teachers' contract dispute raised issues across the state. "It sort of struck a cord... The idea of making public employees take a pay cut.... (They see an oncoming train wreck."

In addition, Phillips said that "the nature of the bargaining" between the city and the union upset some observers. "There was a lot of public talking by the mayor. That simply infuriated people."

Phillips said that attorneys from the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) are handling an appeal of the fine in the court. "They haven't finished telling us what we owe."

If the total fine stands, teachers will be raising funds on the local level through t-shirt sales and bake sales and through higher dues, according to Phillips.

Crown Colony Ramp Contract To Be Awarded

MassHighway officials hope to start construction of the $16.3 million Burgin Parkway ramp project in late fall, according to spokesman John LaMontagne.

LaMontagne said Tuesday that MassHighway has already put the project out to bid and are "very close to awarding a contract. We're hopeful it could start late summer or early fall."

The project is intended to alleviate traffic congestion at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Centre Street. In the first phase, MassHighway will construct a bridge to elevate outbound Burgin Parkway traffic over the Centre Street intersection.

The first phase also includes a new outbound ramp from the intersection of Congress Street and Crown Colony Drive to the existing northbound ramp of Route 3.

The final two phases focus on reconstruction of the intersections of Burgin Parkway/Centre Streets and Crown Colony Drive and Congress Street.

In the final phase, MassHighway will construct an exclusive right turn from Centre Street onto the existing outbound ramp.

Koch Opens Campaign Headquarters

Mayoral candidate Tom Koch formally opened his campaign headquarters in Wollaston Center with an open house for volunteers.

More than 150 people dropped by the headquarters at 680 Hancock St. after a sign holding event Saturday morning that stretched from Merry Mount Parkway to North Quincy, Koch said.

"We have so many good people who are giving their time and energy to this campaign, and it's great we have a place for them to go for the next five months," Koch said. "We couldn't ask for a better location in the middle of a bustling business district."

Koch said anyone who is interested in volunteering or finding out more information about the campaign can visit the office.

"We've made some great strides the last several months, and we're just getting started," Koch said. "This is truly a grassroots effort with so many people involved in a campaign for the first time. It's going to be a wonderful experience."

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

Quincy has played a unique role in the formation of our great country—and we continue to play that role today! The Massachusetts Declaration of Rights, the model for the United States Constitution, was drafted in our historic city by John Adams, the second president of the United States and father to John Quincy Adams, our country's sixth president. Patriots, statesmen and women of science and of letters—Quincy has nurtured many of the seminal figures that brought our nation to greatness.

I encourage you to use this fine publication as a guide to historic Quincy. Visit the Adams National Historical Park and the presidential homesteads. Stop by the "Old House" and experience the colonial lifestyle. Tour United First Parish Church, which serves as the final resting place for John, John Quincy, Abigail, and Louisa Catherine Adams. Live the history of our City and of our nation.

Don't neglect to enjoy what Quincy has to offer today. Quincy is nestled between the Blue Hills Reservation and the Atlantic Ocean. Enjoy our twenty-seven miles of coastland, natural salt marshes and magnificent parklands. Explore our downtown, watch our outdoor concerts, play golf, or enjoy Quincy's booming restaurant scene. There is something for everyone to enjoy.

We are proud of Quincy and hope that you have the opportunity to experience all that our historical and cosmopolitan City has to offer.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. PHELAN
MAYOR

Out From History's Shadows

The Rediscovery Of John Adams

"Let me have my farm, family and goose quill, and all the honors and offices this world has to bestow may go to those who deserve them better and desire them more. I court them not."

John Adams

By TOM HENSHAW

For some 200 years, the nation he helped found and nurture took John Adams at his word.

He was the second president of the United States, a rotund little man squeezed in between the more imposing figures of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. He sired the sixth president, John Quincy Adams, who was overshadowed by his more popular successor, Andrew Jackson.

He had something to do with the Revolution, but only historians were fully aware of the key roles he had in the appointment of Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army and the writing of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

In his hometown of Quincy (nee Braintree), his name was memorialized in a statue, a major highway, a baseball field and an academy; his birthplace and "Peace field," his home as an adult, were restored and opened as tourist lures.

Nationally, there wasn't much, except for two postage stamps, issued in 1938 and 1986, but even they were parts of series that included all the deceased presidents up to that date.

Enter a Congressman from Indiana, of all places, and a Democrat, of all things, the very antithesis of Adams' loosely organized party, the Federalists; and an historian and author from Martha's Vineyard, already renowned for his biography of Harry Truman.

"Tim Roemer, the congressman, had a Ph.D. in history from Notre Dame and he became enamored with John Adams," said former Mayor James Sheets, a history teacher by profession, who now works for the Adams Memorial Foundation. "He moved to create a memorial to Adams in Washington."

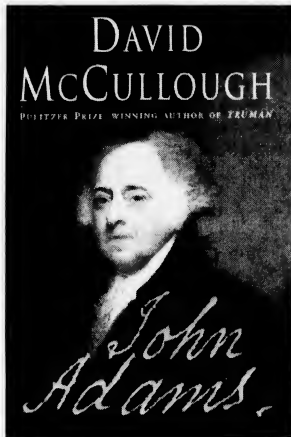

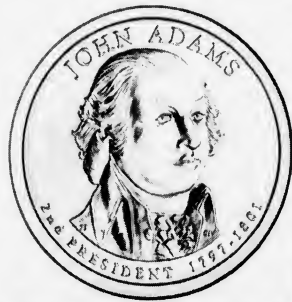

At roughly the same time, the author, David McCullough, already a Pulitzer Prize-winner for the biography, Truman, produced another prize winner with a definitive biography, John Adams, which remained on the best-seller lists for nearly a year, reviving interest in Adams from the common folk.

One result was the issuance in Quincy last May 22 of a $1 coin honoring Adams, the second in a series of presidential coins that will continue next year when John

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy."

Quincy Adams is to be similarly honored.

Attending the ceremony in Constitution Common (City Hall Plaza) were John Adams' descendants from the seventh, eighth and ninth generations, including Peter Boylston Adams, his seventh great grandson; Brooks Ames of the eighth generation, and 4-year-old Gabriella Ames of the ninth.

U.S. Mint Director Edmund C. Moy said Adams was being honored for his "significant accomplishments in a critical part of our nation's history."

Still to come is the John Adams Memorial not far from the Washington Monument and the Jefferson Memorial, which has been approved by Congress but is still seeking a location and design before construction can start. Congress appropriated $1 million seed money in 2001 but the rest will come from private sources.

"Two sites are under consideration," said Sheets, who is in charge of fundraising in the Boston area. "One is in Freedom Plaza not far from the Washington Monument. The other is on four

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

U.S. MINT Director Edmund C. Moy hands out John Adams $1 coins to youngsters at the issuance ceremony May 22 on Constitution Common (City Hall Plaza). Moy praised Adams for his "significant accomplishments in a critical part of our nation's history."

acres in front of the Capitol. We expect a decision in the next six months."

The design will be unique among memorials in the nation's capital.

"It will look like an 18th century library," said Sheets, "with real books and copies of historic documents, something John Adams would be comfortable using himself. It would be in the character of John and Abigail to be memorialized with letters, books and communications."

It was McCullough who suggested the library motif, said Sheets, because no one gave more insight into the presidency than Adams in his letters.

Besides, said Sheets, "John Adams said he didn't want a memorial so McCullough thought a library would follow his wishes and provide a research tool at the same time."

Popularity was never my mistress, nor was I ever, nor shall I ever be a popular man. But one thing I know, a man must be sensible to the errors of the people and upon his guard against them and must run the risk of their displeasure sometimes or he will never do them any good in the long run.

The Thomas Crane Public Library celebrates its 125th anniversary this year. Shown here is the Romanesque style Richardson Building, the original library, designed by famed architect Henry Hobson Richardson and dedicated May 30, 1882. The building ranked 43rd among 150 structures in a recent nationwide "America's Favorite Architecture" poll. In the background is the tower of Bethany Congregational Church, another architectural beauty.

First Father And Son Presidents Birthplace Of John And John Quincy Adams

By TOM HENSHAW

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farm lands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monaquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9 1/2 acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735. (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John Adams and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

The precise age of the two cottages at 133 and 141 Franklin St. at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Quincy City Council Quincy Has Left Its Mark On American Culture In Distinguishing Ways

JOSEPH FINN
Councillor At-Large

LEO KELLY
Ward 1 Councillor

Each summer, millions of American families pack up the family car, pick up a fresh, hot cup of coffee, and take to the road to discover the people and places that have shaped American life.

Thanks to David McCullough's Pulitzer Prize winning tribute to President John Adams, Quincy is gaining popularity as a destination among families and history buffs of all ages. While it is often the panoply of patriots that draw visitors to our city, Quincy has chiseled its mark on American culture in other distinguishing ways.

In the 1800s, granite from Quincy's hills became the material of our nation's greatest buildings and monuments. Quincy's Fore River Shipyard built many of the 20th century's greatest naval and commercial vessels. And Howard Johnson parlayed his ice cream recipe into an empire of restaurants and hotels that became synonymous with the American family vacation.

Before your family takes to the road this summer, why not grab your morning coffee right here in Quincy - where America's first Dunkin' Donuts opened its doors more than 57 years ago. And once you experience our history, culture, cuisine, and coastline, you truly will discover Quincy!

After Faithful Restoration Birthplaces Have 'As They Were' Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna lived there.

It took on that "as it was" look after a painstaking six-year reconstruction project in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

The house is well furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife, and probably reflected her taste. They are furnished, not elaborately, but sufficient to have a lived-in look.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off white, mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979 after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace reopened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table and drinking a cup of tea.

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, on which the U.S. Constitution was modeled.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copied from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over, which also includes admission to the Old House at Peace Field within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. Last full tour of the park leaves Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

Descent from John & Priscilla

John Adams, the second president, can trace his ancestry back to John Alden and Priscilla Mullins of "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" fame.

His grandfather, Joseph Adams, married Hannah Bass, daughter of John and Ruth (Alden) Bass and granddaughter of the Pilgrim couple John and Priscilla.

Adams's Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution, but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the Supreme Court, where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the court can invalidate an act of Congress.

'The Old House'

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow."

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest, and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct if Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith. "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The Old House at Peace Field, 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour of the park leaves the Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

First Wife, Mother Of Presidents Advocate Abigail Adams: 'Remember The Ladies'

What do Barbara Bush and Abigail Adams have in common?

Both are noted for being the wife of one president and the mother of another.

Barbara's husband, George H. W., was the 41st president from 1989 to 1993 and her son, George W., is the 43rd president who moved into the White House in 2001 and is still there.

Abigail's husband, John, was the second president from 1797 to 1801 and her son, John Quincy, the sixth president from 1825 to 1829.

And her grandson, Charles Francis Adams, ran unsuccessfully for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

Then husbands share another distinction, too. John was born in the section of Braintree now known as Quincy. George H. W. was born in Milton, the next town over.

But this is Abigail's story.

An early advocate of women's rights, the former Abigail Smith wrote to her husband, John, who was in Philadelphia helping his fellow Founding Fathers hammer out a Constitution for the new republic.

ABIGAIL ADAMS

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors."

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

Sadly, unlike Barbara Bush, Abigail Adams did not live to see her son become president. She died in her 74th year, Oct. 28, 1818, seven years before he entered the White House.

Although she is traditionally remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another, Abigail was more than that.

She was a remarkable woman in her own right and one ahead of her time.

Born in neighboring Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of the Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister, and his wife, Elizabeth Quincy Smith, she had no formal schooling.

But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well-known writer of letters that have served to chronicle American history.

She was a brave and resourceful woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for her children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of their fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When Adams took office, succeeding George Washington on March 4, 1797, Philadelphia was the nation's capital. John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800. It was called the President's Palace at the time.

No fancy airs about her. She won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room. She was just being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer ones, better for drying wet clothing.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the man who succeeded him as president, were close friends who worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. But they had a falling out and became political enemies.

When Jefferson defeated Adams in his bid for reelection to a second term, Adams was so bitter that he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inauguration in 1801 and came home to Quincy.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents reconciled in their later years.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy union despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind two men — a husband and son — who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

She and her husband, son and daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt in the United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue depicting Abigail at about age 32 and John Quincy at age 10 with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly touch, was erected in 1997 just a few feet away.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Square is where she walked when the area was an open field.

A Mother's Advice

Abigail Adams had this motherly advice for her son, John Quincy Adams, the future sixth president, in a letter written to him when he was 10 years old and in Europe with his father, John Adams, who was on a diplomatic mission:

"Improve your understanding for acquiring usefull (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents."

Your affectionate Mother
AA"

ABIGAIL ADAMS and her son, John Quincy Adams -- the future sixth President of the United States -- look out over Quincy Square from beside historic First Parish Church. The handsome bronze statue depicts her at about age 32 and him as a 10-year-old boy. It was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. Larry DiNardo began his relationship with the South Shore YMCA at Camp Burgess in Sandwich at just eight years old. At the age of 12, he was offered his first job as Camp Bugler for $25 a summer. Every year thereafter until college, he would return. "My love for the Y came from the time and memorable experiences I had at camp," he explains. photo, left.

Today, Larry is a partner in the law firm of Serafini, Purdy, DiNardo and Wells in Quincy. For many years, he also served with the Reserve, Jag Corps. Married to wife, Linda, and father of two children, Larry has a busy life, but he still makes time for the organization that he loved as a child. He followed in his father's footsteps, serving as Chairman of the Board from 2003 to 2005, 25 years after Dr. V. James DiNardo's tenure as Chair.

"My Dad started going to the Y in seventh grade, and it turned his life around," Larry explains. "He began working summers at Camp Burgess and eventually became Camp Director. Our family has been involved with the YMCA ever since." Larry's father went on to become Principal of the Snug Harbor School in Quincy, and later the Executive Vice President of Bridgewater State College, but like his son, he always made time to give back to the South Shore YMCA.

Many other Y members have had a strong intergenerational involvement as well. You may recognize the following folks, and there are certainly numerous others. The Clark family spans five generations, all the way back to one of our Y's Founding Fathers. Other father and son representations include the Briggs family, the Ashers, and the Hurleys. Daughters, too, joined in the tradition of serving the Y, as represented by the Papani family - daughters, Phyllis Godwin and Dorothy Palmer, and the Crofts family - daughter, Cynthia Crofts-Wisch.

We call it the heritage of the Y - families passing on cherished memories and experiences to their children. Positive character values, leadership training, developmental assets - this is what we're instilling in the young folks that enter our halls. "If we stay true to our mission," Larry explains, "we will continue to be a force for good will, and have a positive impact on our society. It is our role to be stewards of this life-changing organization."

United First Parish

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m., mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and free for children 12 and under. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see." Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock Signed 'Declaration Of Love' Here

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third.

(There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Now that it is a National Historic Landmark, the next step for the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be acceptance by the National Park Service as part of the Adams National Historical Park alongside the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd. is open to the public on Saturdays, July 14, Aug. 18 and Sept. 15 from 1 to 4 p.m. Tours start every hour and half hour until 3:30 p.m. Special arrangements can be made at other times. GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR in a visit to United First Parish Church July 25, 1951, placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. With him are Mrs. MacArthur, Mayor Thomas Burgin and City Historian William Edwards. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine."

Amistad Slaves' Gift To John Quincy Adams

Governor Takes Oath On 'Mendi' Bible

One of the most cherished and simplest rewards acquired by John Quincy Adams in his many years in public life was given him by a band of 35 dirt-poor Africans he rescued from the bonds of slavery.

It was a Bible, inscribed with a letter from the Africans of the slave ship Amistad, members of the Mendi tribe, whose case for freedom Adams won before the US Supreme Court at the age of 73.

They call it "the Mendi Bible" and it is now a treasured possession of the Adams National Historical Park, released from its display case under supervision of a park ranger only on special occasions.

One such occasion came in January, 2007, when Deval Patrick was inaugurated as the first African-American governor of Massachusetts and only the second in all the United States.

"This Bible comes from an extraordinary moment in the history of the commonwealth, the nation and the world," said Beverly Morgan-Welch, co-chair of the Inaugural Committee.

"The Amistad case was a giant step forward for the abolitionist movement and recognized the basic humanity of enslaved people in America.

"It is fitting and proper that we honor it now as part of this historic inaugural."

The Amistad case, which was made into a movie starring Anthony Hopkins as John Quincy Adams, began in 1839 when a group of kidnapped Africans from Mendeland revolted aboard a Spanish slaver and took over the ship.

They thought their captive navigator was sailing them back to Africa as instructed but in reality they were taken to New York and imprisoned while Spanish authorities demanded their return.

Thus began a protracted legal battle with overtones of political intrigue as lower courts' orders to free the 35 men and women were offset by pro-slavery politicians, up to and including the president of the United States.

Eventually, it reached the Supreme Court where the aging Adams, the former president, now a congressman, reluctantly at first but passionately at last, argued their case before the justices and secured their freedom.

The Mendi Bible was his reward.

"The Mendi Bible is one of the most significant and moving pieces of history in the Adams family," said Benjamin Adams, president of the Adams Memorial Foundation.

"It reflects the great determination and courage of a people who, after long suffering, were fortunate to find themselves befriended by an old man, a former president with a passionate belief in justice."

MENDI BIBLE is displayed by Peter Boylston Adams, a sixth generation direct descendant of John Quincy Adams, and Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Park.

John Quincy Adams: The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17... of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day... How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation.

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom: John Tyler [the

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home..."

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The sixth president of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

Some Wanted Quincy To Be Hancock

By HENRY BOSWORTH

If some of the early settlers had their way, it would be the city of Hancock today instead of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Colonel John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great-grandfather.

John Hancock, who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

JOHN HANCOCK

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but-deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741, 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888. But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams. John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

QUINCY: Proud History

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

FLOWERS AND GREENERY welcome visitors to the "Old House," centerpiece of the Adams National Historical Park where John and John Quincy Adams, two presidents of the United States, lived out their days and their descendants made their homes until 1927.

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite on display in Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a constant reminder that Quincy stone was once one of the most cherished building materials. The 9 1/2-ton ball spent the last 69 years half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary before returning to its intended home this year.

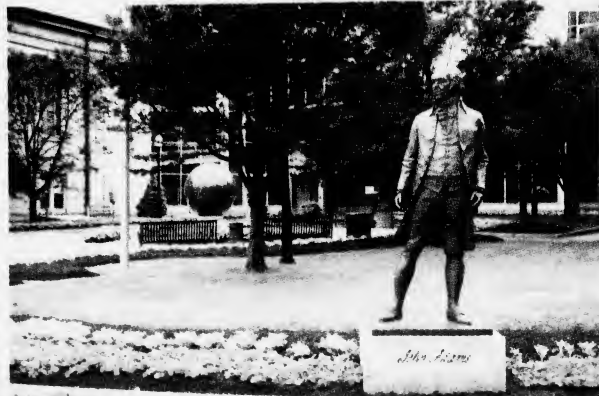

YORKIST ROSE TREE, brought back from Europe and set out by Abigail Adams in 1789, still blooms in the garden of the Old House in the Adams National Historical Park.

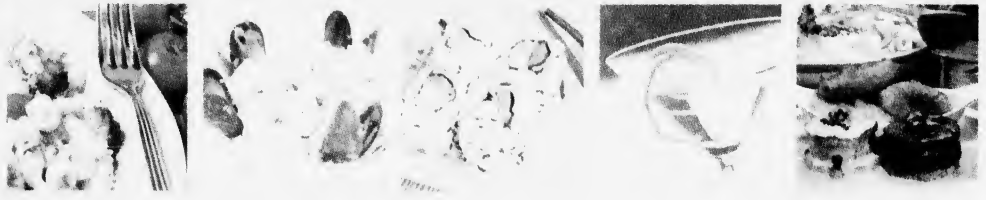

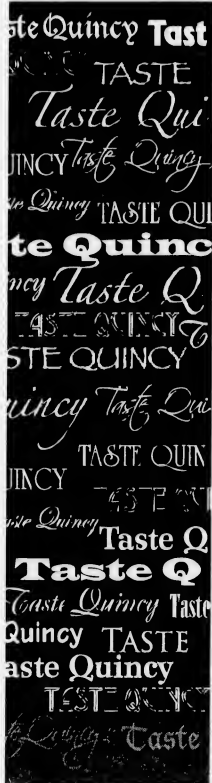

FLAGS AND WREATHS adorn the last resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, in the crypt of United First Parish Church. It's the only church in the United States where two presidents are buried side by side with their wives.

THE LIFE-SIZED bronze statue of second president John Adams rests on the edge of Constitution Common outside City Hall so that it appears he is looking across Hancock St. to United First Parish Church and the statue of his wife, Abigail and son, John Quincy Adams who became the sixth president. Both statues were commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and are the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie.

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve. Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deceased by the writings of A. J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs, a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A. J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath.

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death.

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die.

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestley and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

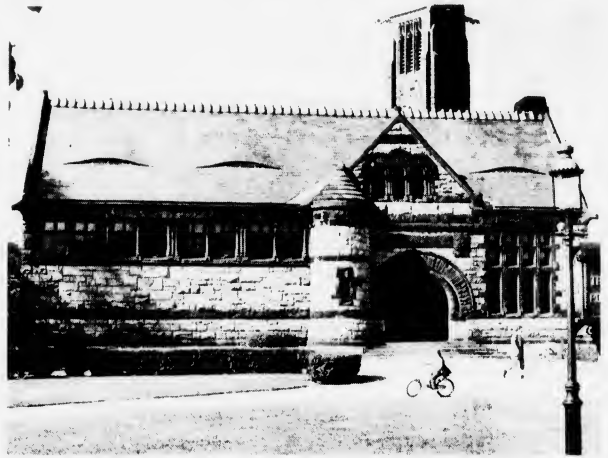

"You are, but you wouldn't have it if hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The new wing was dedicated this year as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Quincy Historical Society At Adams Academy

Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets—site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to ADAMS ACADEMY is at John Hancock Square, and now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and April through November, Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

The Indians saw it as a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrow head (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

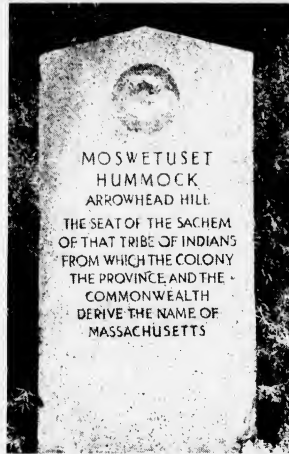

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

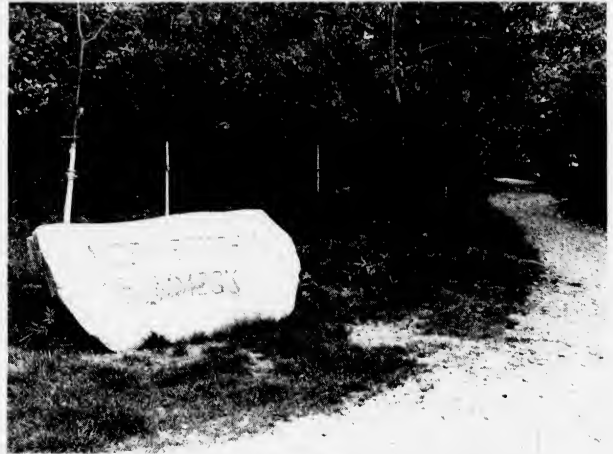

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

WWII Famed Figure 'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 62 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated

GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

Thomas Watson Wins New Shipyard Bridge

The narrow wooden bridge that spanned the Fore River at its mouth proved to be an early impediment to building large ships at Thomas A. Watson's Quincy yard.

So Watson not only lobbied for a new bridge but won the contract to build it in 1902 in time for the cruiser Des Moines to get out for her sea trials.

USS Lexington Led Search For Amelia

When Amelia Earhart, once the part owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built aircraft carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three week search for her.

She has never been found.

The Granite Railway First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy. Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's son and remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"Take along farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775.

General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conver-

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open to the public Saturday, Aug. 18. A special program and tour will be conducted Saturday, Aug. 4. Tours are $4. Private Heritage tours are available by calling 617-227-3956 or visiting www.historicnewengland.org.

City Hall

Seat Of Government

For 163 Years

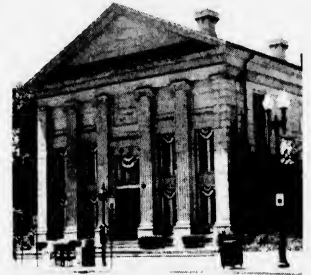

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 163 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John

Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just grewed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries and in one of them, Jonathan Swingle's quarry, men dug for granite at a The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis

HARRIET QUIMBY

Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum

Morton's Merry Time At Merrymount

By TOM HENSHAW

It was a strange tableau that took place that May day in 1627 on the hill overlooking Boston Bay in a land where the righteous Pilgrims ruled.

There were the English adventurers (don't ever call them colonists) from across the sea, and the local Indians, or what was left of them after a visit from the plague, curious to witness this strange white man's way.

Together they stripped an 80 foot pine tree of its bark, hauled it to the top of the hill, attached a rack of buckhorns to its peak and raised it on the hill called Ma re Mount (hill by the sea) or more commonly Merrymount.

Then they broke out the beer and cider and, Englishman and Indian together, they danced around their Maypole in a hedonistic ritual that was guaranteed to leave the Pilgrims, 40 miles away in Plymouth, aghast.

"Drinke and be merry, merry, merry boys," wrote their leader.

"Let all your delight be in hymen's joys, uncover thy head, and feare no harme, for here's good liquor to keep it warm."

"Lasses in beaver coats come away, Ye shall be welcome to us night and day."

The leader was Morton of Merrymount, a man whose name, rightly or wrongly, has lived on in infamy.

Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn, Gent., as he signed himself, first arrived in the area that became known as Old Braintree and later Quincy in 1622 as secretary to Andrew Weston, founder of the Wessagusset colony in nearby Weymouth.

The Wessagusset colony did not survive but Morton, a lawyer and sportsman as well as a merrymaker, could not forget the clear streams that teemed with fish and the forests that abounded with game in the new land.

He was back again in 1625 as a minor partner in a trading venture led by a Captain Wollaston, a man so obscure that his first name has been lost in nearly 400 years of history, although modern research by historian Hobart Holly has indicated it was probably Richard.

Captain Wollaston was so disappointed by the lack of business opportunity in New England that he packed up his partners and most of their indentured servants and left for greener fields in Virginia, leaving a Lieutenant Fitcher in charge.

Morton stayed behind, too, and it wasn't long before Fitcher was ousted and Morton, who was described by the Pilgrim's Governor William Bradford as a man with "more craft than honesty," became The Man, and immediately proclaimed himself "Lord of Misrule."

In the words of Governor Bradford, he maintained "a school of atheism," his people spent their time "quaffing and drinking — in great excess" and they were "inviting Indian women for their consorts, dancing and frisking together — and worse practices."

And, worst of all, Morton and his men were trading guns and rum to the Indians in exchange for pelts and were training said Indians in the use of firearms so they could hunt for more pelts, a move that frightened the wits out of the Pilgrims.

Could it be that, far from the "Lord of Misrule" as he claimed, Morton was just a sharp businessman, the Sam Walton of his day, who cut into Plymouth's profits by treating the Indians more or less like equals and joining in their fun and games. Either way, it was plain that Morton had to go.

Thus it was that in the spring of 1628, Captain Myles Standish — an angry little man of unimposing stature whom Morton denied as "Captain Shrimpe" — and an army of eight men were dispatched to Merrymount to solve the problem once and for all. It turned out to be an easy task.

Morton knew they were coming and prepared to resist. But the night-long preparations soon turned into a party and, when Standish and his soldiers arrived at dawn, the defenders of Merrymount were too drunk to resist and surrendered without firing a shot.

That was the Pilgrims' version. In his memoirs, Morton insisted he was ready to fight but his men turned out to be a cowardly lot and he had to give up the struggle in order to avoid bloodshed and was beaten up for his pains by the victorious Pilgrim army of eight.

Whatever, Morton was arrested and taken to Plymouth where Standish wanted him hanged. But gentler heads prevailed and he was put aboard a ship for England, an action that so enraged the captain that he had to be restrained.

Back in London, Morton was charged with disturbing the safety of the Plymouth colony but the charges were dropped when he presented himself to the Crown as a good Anglican who was persecuted by those dissenters from Plymouth.

The trading post at Merrymount was allowed to remain but, in 1629, a sterner opponent arrived on the scene in John Endicott and the Puritans, who established the Massachusetts Bay Colony in Boston, a scant 10 miles from the hill beside the bay.

Endicott ordered Morton's Maypole cut down, which it was, and the name of his trading post changed from Merrymount to Mount Dagon after the Biblical sea god of the Philistines, which it wasn't.

Morton's brief episode of saturnalia is recalled today in a section of Quincy and a park called Merrymount.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

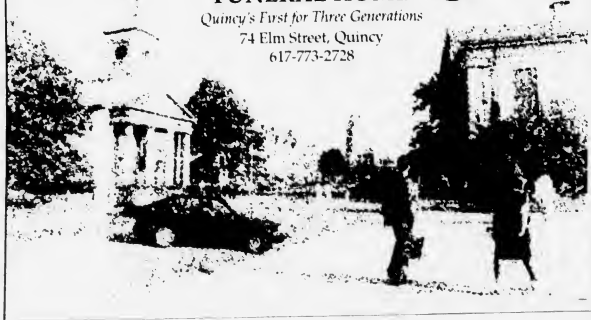

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

Quincy Ships Played A Major Role In WWII

USS Quincy Took FDR To Yalta

By TOM HENSHAW

The President and the Prime Minister met on the ship's deck and went on from there to the conference that would decide the future of a world at war.

The President was Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister was Winston Churchill and the ship was the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Quincy, the second of that name to perform heroically in World War II.

The time was 62 years ago, Feb. 2, 1945, and the place was the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, where the President met the Prime Minister and together they flew on to the Yalta Conference in the Russian Crimea.

After that brief respite for diplomacy at Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II 60 years ago.

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, with great fanfare, was one of scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, which employed 32,000 men and women in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak Jan. 15, 1943.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935, was on peace-time convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 to shell Japanese installations on the Solomon Island of Guadalcanal and offer protection to the Marines who landed there in the first American offensive of World War II in August.

She was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy naval force and sunk after taking many direct hits in what became known as the Battle of Savo Island.

The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're going down between them — give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

CHESTER NIMITZ

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles upriver in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone — "Watson, come here; I want you."

The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U. S. Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and two more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll, and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

An adjunct facility called the Victory Plant had to be built to handle the US Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 1/2 days from keel-laying to delivery.

THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

A Naval officer named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the yard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl, Catherine Vance Freeman, daughter of a former city councillor.

When, shortly after Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated him on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue once again to roll up its collective sleeves and get busy. Starting on Dec. 7, 1941, for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landing ships tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 1/2 days.

It was in a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set world's records by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 1/2 working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the mighty Vichy-French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she could be turned over to the Germans.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and the assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the US Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "the Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional Navy contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship, the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan, launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful super-tanker, which was later converted into the world's largest ice-breaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circled the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge, in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts under taken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a landmark at the yard.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-year-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

Dunkin' Donuts Got Quincy Start

Ruth Gordon, Howard Johnson, Lee Remick, Billy DeWolfe Born Here

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kamm.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Menymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown

Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, "Jose Jimenez."

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness."

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc."

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother."

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone."

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name was memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing longer than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

Today, Squantum's pioneer flying days of Harriet Quimby, Amelia Earhart, Commander John J. Shea and Captain Harry Sartoris live on in the Aviation History Information Center at the Beechwood Community Life Center where the old Dennison Airport once held sway.

USS SALEM

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

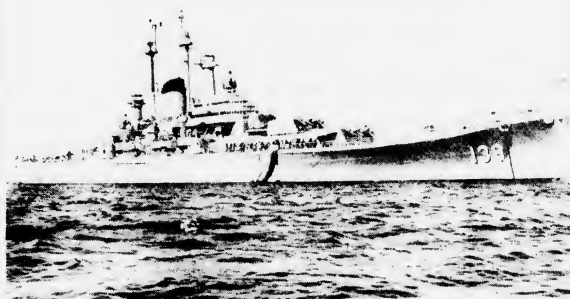

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia, then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Hours of escorted and self-guided tours include: Summer - Daily June through September, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Winter - Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Kilroy's mini-golf, June through September, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission: $5 per person. Neighbors Had A Nickname Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

By HENRY BOSWORTH

No, the Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long before King Edward VIII gave up the British throne for the woman he loved.

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia maintained a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as a school to train young aviators to fly the new Langley airplanes.

Assigned as head of the school was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a twice divorced woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The match touched off a crisis in English royalty. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937.

While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

QUINCY MEDICAL Center began in 1888 as a private cottage hospital with 25 beds to treat lung ailments among the granite stonecutters who inhaled dust particles while at work. It has grown over the years to a 282-bed community teaching hospital affiliated with Boston Medical Center and the Boston University School of Medicine.

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.
